

Lightning Bolt At 40 — Executives Face Unemployment

by KAREN RUGEN
For an executive in the $15,000 a year and over bracket, being laid off can be as jolting as a lightning bolt.
The sudden bounce from the security of a mahogany desk to the uncertainty of the search for a new job can throw a man into unemployment shell shock. Or it can hurdle him into the "depths of despair."
Just ask Bill Richmond.
"When they first told me, I had this sinking feeling. Then I was thrown into shock. All of a sudden my colleagues seemed to think I had gotten the plague," said Richmond as he sat smoking a cigar in the backyard patio of his brick Mount Prospect home. "It took me many months to recuperate from that shock."

BILL RICHMOND, not his real name, is a mechanical engineer with a college degree. Working his way up from draftsman, he has headed engineering teams in the steel manufacturing business and has experience in product development, design and sales. During most of his nearly 20-year career, his earnings have reached to more than $15,000 a year. Suddenly at age 43, he was asked to leave his job as chief engineer with a small Chicago firm. That was more than a year ago. He has been faced with unemployment ever since.

"For the first five months, I worked around the house. I was in a mild state of shock," said Richmond, a short, dark-haired bachelor who lives with and helps support his parents. "I didn't want to register for unemployment; I didn't want to receive benefits from anybody."
The absence of a weekly paycheck finally pushed Richmond to the Illinois State Employment office. Lined up with other executives from the Northwestern suburbs, he stood in the Des Plaines office to make his unemployment claim. Each time he was sent upstairs to the employment service. And each time, he was turned away without a job.

"Finally they just told me to leave because as an engineer I had little chance of finding a job. They tried to help. But how can employers be hiring when they're laying off?" he said. "And I didn't want to leave my profession. I put too many years into my education for that — I'm a night school product."

$1.4 Million Tax Levy Law OK'd By Village

The Elk Grove Village Board Tuesday passed a $1.4 million tax levy ordinance that calls for no increase in the municipal tax rate.
"We as a village have not increased the tax levy," said Trustee Edward Kennedy. "The only way it can be changed is if the county changes assessments."
Results of the levy will show up on real estate and property tax bills next spring when they are mailed out by Cook County authorities.
The municipal tax rate is one portion of the tax bill that includes tax rates for several other taxing bodies including school, park, and sanitary districts.
THE BOARD also passed an ordinance banning trucks from using John F. Kennedy and Elk Grove boulevards. The ordinance, modeled after one in Chicago, calls for a fine of from $5 to $500.
The police department is charged with enforcing the ordinance and issuing permits for exemptions.
Village Pres. Charles Zetek voiced concern over how the ordinance would be enforced for a resident who owned a pick-up truck and lived on a boulevard. The question was not fully resolved, but left for the police department to handle.
The board was notified by state highway authorities that the speed limit on Rohlwing Road (Illinois Rte. 53) will be reduced from 65 to 50 miles per hour and that a traffic signal is warranted at Touhy Avenue and Busse Road (Illinois Rte. 83).

ARLINGTON PARK Race Track officials have not commented on the opposition now mounting over the Yamaha Gold Cup Motorcycle Race planned for 8 p.m. Sept. 10 at the track. Residents and officials alike from Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are hoping to prevent this race, or at least any future races.

Bill Kelly Day Meeting Set

The final organizational meeting for Bill Kelly Day, a clean-up of Salt Creek sponsored by the Elk Grove Park District, will be held today at 7 p.m. in the Teen Center.
Bill Kelly is a fifth grader who originally proposed the plan to the park district.
There are about 55 persons, including Boy Scout troops and the ecology club from Elk Grove High School, are committed to help in the clean-up, Harold Anderson of the park district, said.
The clean-up crew will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday, where Devon Avenue crosses Salt Creek, and will work north, he said. The fire department and Monarch Disposal Co. will help with the effort.
The clean-up crew will have lunch at the Teen Center at noon on Saturday with food donated by local businesses.

Quotables
"We're shooting for Oct. 18 cause that's my birthday," said Walter Pance, developer of the new movie theater under construction in the Grove Shopping Center. He added that completion is really not expected until Nov. 1.

Library Board Begins Viewing Applications

Members of the Elk Grove Village Public Library board are looking over applications in preparation for their selection of a new head librarian.
Mrs. Francis Walsh, chairman of the board's committee on administration which will handle the applications, said she is going through a backlog of applications from professional librarians which the library has on file.
The applications date from earlier this year when the board placed ads in library journals. The board was then looking for department heads but postponed hiring at that time because of financial problems.
The applications were not specifically directed to the position of head librarian, Mrs. Walsh said, but the board may ask some of the applicants to interview on the basis of their qualifications.
SHE SAID THE library may place more ads for the position. The last time ads were run, she said, "we got lots of applications" because there are many professional librarians available now.
The board policy states the head librarian is preferred to have a masters degree in library science and some administrative experience. Interviewing will begin as soon as possible, Mrs. Walsh said.
The salary will be determined by budgetary limitations and the individual's qualifications, she said.
Evelyn Schmidt, who served as head librarian for eleven years, resigned earlier this month after returning from a leave-of-absence granted because she was recuperating from a broken hip.
Mrs. Schmidt's resignation came on the heels of the departure of four other members of the library staff, two of whom were asked for their resignations.
Library business Mgr. Virginia James will continue to serve as acting administrator for the library until a new librarian is named. The new librarian, Mrs. Walsh said, will be named "as soon as we find someone who is qualified."

Seek To Stop Cycle Races At Track

Officials and residents of Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are taking steps to prevent a motorcycle race planned for the night of Sept. 10 at Arlington Park Race Track.
The opposition stems from several reasons, including fears that motorized racing may become a continuous event at the track, concern over excessive noise the race will cause, the "inconvenience" the bright night lights at the track will cause nearby homeowners and the "type of people motorcycle racing might usher into town."
Some Arlington Heights officials are taking preliminary steps to block the event, or at least prevent future racing of this type.
Race track officials have made no comment on the event or the opposition to it. One spokesman, however, did say, "this type of event has been held all over the country many times before with very few problems such as these people are talking about."
TRUSTEES MRS. Alice Harms and Ted Salinsky are attempting to gain the support of one other trustee opposed to the event so a special meeting of the village board can be called to examine what the village can legally do to halt the program.
Although Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the race was permitted under current village regulations, other trustees have asked and are now awaiting a legal opinion on the subject from Village Atty. Jack Siegel.
The question of using the night lights, which the Illinois Racing Board did not permit for the thoroughbred racing, was cleared up by Hanson who said the use of lights for events other than horse racing is permitted by the state.
Hanson also said the village will receive 3 per cent of the total gate receipts. Tickets for the event range in price from $4 to $6.
Salinsky said, "If this is a permitted use then someone really bungled the job because the next thing we'll have is demolition derbies out there."
Mrs. Harms said, "I'm opposed to this on the basis that if this is allowed how could we prevent possible expansion of use other than those existing at the time of annexation?" which was in 1969.
THE RACE IS the Yamaha Gold Cup Motorcycle Race offering a $15,000 purse and gold trophy for the estimated 200 riders who will participate in the 10-event program which starts at 8 p.m. on Sept. 10.
Sanctioned by the American Motorcycle Association, the riders will race at speeds up to 130 miles per hour.
The race is sponsored by Madison Square Garden Corp., the parent company of Arlington and Washington Park Race Tracks. Trojan Enterprises from California are also sponsors.
In May of this year Madison Square Garden staged a similar race at Roosevelt Raceway in New York which drew over 20,000 fans.
BOTH 2ND WARD Aldermen William Aherns and Thomas Waldron told the Rolling Meadows city council this week that some of their constituents "fear the noise and the possibility that racing may become a continuous thing."
Waldron said yesterday "some of the people also believe that motorcycle racing brings the wrong kind of people into the area."
In addition, the Rolling Meadows Board of Health is now considering the purchase of a "noise meter" to measure the loudness of the event in terms of noise pollution.

President Nguyen Van Thieu conferred with U. S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker then told his provincial campaign workers the South Vietnamese presidential elections would be held as scheduled Oct. 3. Although the U. S. has adopted a hands-off policy, the embassy has made it no secret a one-man election could hurt prospects for continued U. S. economic aid.		The government reported the first monthly decline in three years in family welfare recipients and attributed it to a cutback in state benefits for the needy. # Harper's Lahti Among Top Paid

by JUDY NAJOLIA

A comparison of community college presidents' salaries shows Harper College President Robert Lahti is one of the highest paid educators in Illinois.

In six years as Harper's first president, Lahti's salary and benefits have more than doubled. He begins his seventh year with Harper and 10th year as a college president with a $44,400 salary.

In negotiations with the board of trustees, Lahti obtained a $8,000 increase in his base salary this year. The board also awarded him a $2,500 bonus for his efforts last year, which Richard Johnson, board member, called an "impressive performance."

Lahti's jump from $34,000 to $40,000 base salary puts him ahead of other area community college presidents. Last year he was below Triton Community College President Herbert Zeitlin, College of DuPage President Rodney Berg, and Chicago City College Chancellor Oscar Shabat.

This year Shabat will have a $42,000 base salary.

BERG, WHO has had 11 years as a college president, declined a salary increase this year from the $35,000 student College of DuPage, but was given a $2,500 tax sheltered annuity plan by the trustees. His salary, with the annuity plan, will be $39,000.

Zeitlin, appointed in 1964 as Triton's first president, will receive a $37,100 salary and permission to lease a car at the college's expense. Triton, located in River Grove, has a student population of about 10,500. Harper has a population of about 8,000.

When negotiating a new three-year contract and salary with Lahti this summer, Harper board members considered salaries of area high school superintendents and business leaders as well as other community college presidents.

Locally, Edward Gilbert, superintendent of High School Dist. 214 since 1964, received $33,500 last year. His 1971-72 salary has not been set. Richard Kolze, High School Dist. 211 superintendent in Palatine and Schaumburg, is beginning his second year as chief administrator at $30,000. He received $27,000 last year.

IN OUTLYING areas, high school superintendents' salaries range from $33,000 in McHenry to $42,000 in New Trier.

This spring, two of Lahti's administrators, James Harvey, vice president of student affairs, and Omar Olson dean of continuing education, reported left Harper for community college presidencies of at least $30,000.

Lahti's salary is above those of men in similar community college positions and is competitive with salaries of four-year state universities like Eastern, Western, Northeastern Illinois and Chicago State.

Low-Income Housing Decision Expected

A decision is expected tonight from the Des Plaines Human Relations Commission on proposals made to the city by a Chicago area group advocating low-income housing in the suburbs.

John Fankhouser, commission chairman, yesterday said commission members have reviewed proposals by the Concerned Metropolitan Citizens Committee (CMCC) and will decide tonight what recommendations they will make to the city council.

The CMCC, which has also campaigned for low-income housing in Arlington Heights, has urged the city to adopt a five-point program aimed at ending what the group says is "exclusionary" zoning in Des Plaines and at selecting a number of sites for low-income housing.

"The commission members have copies of the CMCC proposal and have had a chance to review it and I suppose come to some conclusion in their own minds," Fankhouser said.

THE COMMISSION will meet at 8 p.m. in the Des Plaines municipal building city council chambers, 1412 Miner St.

The CMCC has accused city officials of "unintentional and unconscious racism" in not encouraging development of low and moderate-income housing.

The CMCC claims there is growing evidence of the need for such housing in suburban areas, a need which it says will have to be met either through local efforts or through action at the state and federal levels.

Mayor Herbert Behrel has predicted city council opposition to the proposals made by CMCC. The recommendation of the human relations commission is expected to be referred to the city council health and welfare committee, headed by Ald. Robert Sherwood (2nd).

Specialty, the CMCC proposals call for:

—CREATION OF A new zoning classification for multi-family low and moderate-income units. This zoning would be in two categories, including small developments with only low and moderate-income units and larger, mixed-income developments.

This new zoning would require high quality construction, adequate open space, "a maximum number of low-income units consistent with economic feasibility" and units large enough to house sizable families, the CMCC said.

—Selection of sites for low and moderate-income housing, scattered throughout the community. The sites would be chosen so that low-income housing wouldn't be concentrated in any one area of the city.

—Setting aside a percentage of vacant land for low and moderate-housing. The percentage would be maintained if more land were cleared for redevelopment, and were cleared for redevelopment.

—Use of all available federal and state funds for low and moderate-housing.

Lincoln County Study Unit Grows

State Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, Rep. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and Mayor Fred Downey of Hoffman Estates are the last to join the list of members on the New County Study Committee (NCS) investigating the possible disannexation of six Northwest suburban townships from Cook County to form Lincoln County.

With the addition of the three names, the NCS committee now involves a total of nine representatives from the six-township area of Barrington, Palatine, Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Hanover.

Graham and Regner were chosen to serve on the committee because of their background in legislative procedures and the information they can provide in researching the new county idea, according to Wendell Jones, a Palatine trustee and co-ordinator of the Lincoln County plan.

Downey could serve as a municipal liaison for the committee through his mayoral responsibilities, Jones said.

Besides Graham, Regner and Downey, the committee includes Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher, LeMoiné Stitt and W. Richard Impey, both Arlington Heights attorneys, Mrs. Glen Ann Jicha, former Palatine Township Republican committeewoman, and Merwin Soper and Jones, Palatine trustees.

"Hopefully we'll be able to meet within the next two to three weeks for an initial organizational session," Jones said yesterday. He suggested the nine-member NCS committee break down into subgroups to study various aspects of a new county.

Possible subgroups to conduct further research include groups to look into establishment of a new court system and police structure, financial burdens of forming a new county and taxation and legal questions in seceding from an existing county.

"We won't ask any residents to sign petitions unless the committee first determines whether action to form a new county is even feasible," Jones said. "Once that is determined, the next logical step would be to form a larger group than the NCS committee to go out and get the 80,000 names for the petition."

Jones and Soper first proposed the Lincoln County idea early this month when they issued an eight-page report on the rationale for the disannexation. Under their six-township area, a new county government would be created for an estimated combined population of 350,000, which would make the government more local and representative, the report stated.

Nilsson Keeps The Cars Rolling

Auto Livery No One-Horse Operation

A hundred years ago Ronald Nilsson would probably have been the owner of a livery stable — renting out horses and carriages.

Nilsson is in the livery business today, but because Henry Ford invented the automobile, he doesn't have a need for horses.

The automobile is the tool of Nilsson's business, the Elk Grove Limousine Service.

"The name of the game is keep the cars rolling," says Nilsson, of 818 Richard Ln., Elk Grove Township, where he operates out of his home.

Nilsson has 18 autos to keep rolling including the long stretch-out vehicles that hold 12 passengers. We once had an 18-passenger stretch-out," recalls Nilsson of the vehicle he says he originally designed.

"On one trip it held 24 passengers and 102 bags on the roof," he says.

"Stretch-outs are as plush as a bus and a lot more maneuverable but not as large," he says. They offer a closeness that passengers and a driver don't get if they are riding in a bus.

Nilsson, 32, got into the transportation field 15 years ago, working his way up from driver, to dispatcher, to supervisor for several bus companies.

He says he found himself enjoying his work so much in addition to working long hours that he decided to go into business for himself.

"We never had good service out here so I went into business for myself," he says. That was about six years ago.

He now serves 14 suburbs, from Park Ridge to Elgin and from Barrington to Roselle. Unlike taxi service which is metered, he offers a flat rate for trips, booked in advance, to O'Hare International Airport.

While most of his business is to the airport, he also does charter work. It is not unusual to transport a Boy Scout troop to camp and back in a couple of stretch-outs.

He also contracts with five airlines to provide service for passengers whose planes have been grounded because of inclement weather.

"If a plane can't fly them to Milwaukee we'll drive them in a caravan of stretch-outs," he says, adding: "When we get 'em they're really irate — ready to climb the walls."

"But when they leave us they're thankful we were there to help them."

In other business, the board: —Directed the clerk to call a public hearing on an amendment to a pre-annexation agreement with the owner of the Elk Grove Motel.

—Heard Pres. Zetek swear in Fred Engelbrecht and William Kohnke as lieutenants with the police force.

—Appropriated $25,000 in motor fuel tax funds for the resurfacing of Nicholas

Park Commissioners To Review Fall Rec Program

The Elk Grove Park District Board of Commissioners will review the fall recreation program today at its meeting at 8 p.m. in the administration building, 499 Beisterfield Rd.

Fees for the programs that have been offered in the past will remain the same as last year in compliance with the wage-price freeze, according to Jack Claes, director of parks and recreation.

The budget, approved earlier this summer, had included plans to raise many of the fees, but Claes said he had been advised that the fees must be frozen under the President's executive order.

Fees for new programs will be set without regard to the freeze, because none of them were being held before Aug. 15, Claes said.

Also at the meeting, Claes said he expected the board to discuss the report of the Teen Center Advisory Committee.

The Committee, which was appointed by the board to make recommendations regarding Teen Center programs, decided in July to suggest that the center be open to teens four nights a week and open to other community groups the rest of the week.

The meeting is open to the public.

Smoking, Campus Policy On District's Agenda

President Nixon's executive order freezing salaries and discussion of a smoking and open campus policy will be on the High School Dist. 211 Board of Education agenda today at 8 p.m. at the administration center, 1715 S. Roselle Rd., Palatine.

With school scheduled to open Monday, the board will also be asked to make several decisions which affect the opening of school, namely revision of the grading system, and a transportation policy for high school students attending Harper College.

Residents living near Wilham Fremd High School in Palatine appeared two weeks ago supporting establishment of an on-campus smoking area. A decision on whether to have a smoking area in any of the district's four high schools is expected tonight.

Administrators are asking the board to consider changing the grading system from a five-point system to a four-point plan to equalize general grade point averages with letter grades received for coursework.

In addition, bids for Hoffman Estates High School will be discussed and a resolution for sale of $3 million in bonds to begin construction of the school will be presented.

Long-range planning based on a proposed population and enrollment survey and the possibility of the district's bonding power being raised from five to six per cent will also be on the agenda. A constitutional proposal to set the bonding limit at six per cent is being proposed in the Illinois House.

Damage Estimate Over $1,000 To Co.

Allen Hulet, Elk Grove Village fire chief, yesterday estimated Tuesday's storm damage to the roof of Good Year Tire & Rubber Co., 1501 Nicholas Blvd., at more than $1,000.

More than 1,600 square feet of roof collapsed during the heavy thunderstorm that knocked out power lines at Oakton-Busse-Higgins road intersection and Thorndale Avenue, west of Arlington Heights Road.

84 At Music Camp

Music students from Thomas Lively and Oliver Wendell Holmes Junior High Schools will spend the last week before school resumes at a music camp in Wisconsin.

Eighty-four music students, including those from the band and orchestra programs at Lively and the orchestra program at Holmes, will leave Elk Grove Village Sunday for the camp near Lake Geneva, according to John Hedberg, band director at Lively School Dist. 59.

Accompanying the students will be their music teachers and counselors from the Elk Grove High School band program, he said.

The camp is being sponsored by the Lively Music Parents Association and will include both work in music and recreational activities. The students will return Sept. 4. School begins Sept. 7.

Com-Ed Crews Following Damage Trail

Late yesterday morning several Commonwealth Edison Co. crews (Com Ed) were still following the long trail of damage which Tuesday night's storm left throughout the Northwest suburban area.

As late as 11 a.m. some residents in northern Arlington Heights were still without electricity, which lightning cut off around 6:30 the night before.

A spokesman for Com Ed said "Arlington Heights was without a doubt the hardest hit town in terms of the number of Com Ed customers left without power."

Of the estimated 20,000 Com Ed customers affected by the storm, between 8,000 and 10,000 were from the north end of Arlington Heights, he added.

Lightning knocked down three major feeder lines which caused blackouts in an area between Douglas, Chestnut, Palatine Road and Northwest Highway; and another area bounded by Techny Road, Dundee Road, Arlington Heights Road and Schoenbeck Road.

COM ED CREWS also dispensed an emergency generator to an Arlington Heights woman using a mechanical apparatus to aid her in the treatment of cystic fibrosis.

Over 75 Com Ed repairmen, 20 service telephone operators and 20 engineers worked throughout the night to restore power in the surrounding area.

Most of the major damage was repaired by 4 a.m. Some smaller, more localized blackouts were not repaired until late yesterday morning, however.

Legal Secretary Graduates Should Be Welcomed

Graduates of a new Legal Secretarial program at Harper College in Palatine should be welcomed by employers in the legal field.

These graduates will possess advanced secretarial skills in addition to an understanding of business law and finance. The two year associate degree program also includes an extensive internship in a legal occupation.

The Legal Secretarial program was added to Harper's Secretarial career program when a need for the specialized training was established by Harper's staff and Harper's Secretarial Science Committee. The committee is made up of secretaries, office managers, and personnel managers representing major employers of the northwest suburban community.

Assisting with the Legal Secretarial curriculum development were attorneys from Harper's staff and also from the community.

Charles Falk, chairman of Harper's Business Division, is coordinator for the program.

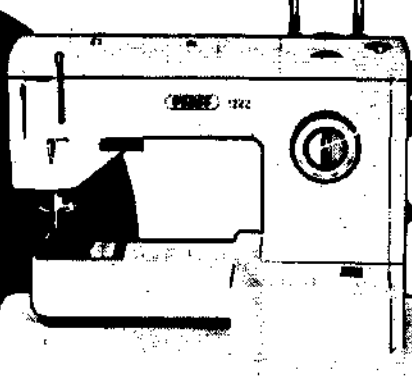

The students will be required to take two semesters of Business Law and one semester of Introduction to Finance.

Using an organization training plan developed by an approved cooperating business, each student enrolled in the internship phase will benefit from classroom instruction coupled with a minimum of 15 hours per week of supervised legal occupational experience.

Positions open to a graduate of the Legal Secretarial program would include legal secretary, administrative assistant, public secretary and court reporter.

Further information may be obtained by telephoning 358-4200, extension 311. Harper College is located at Algonquin and Roselle Roads, Palatine, Illinois 60067.

Just Politics

by Bob Lahey

Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III

The first major drive to attract newly enfranchised voters under 21 years old is being undertaken by Democrats in the 13th Congressional District.

Lynn A. Williams, state Democratic central committee member for the district, estimates that there are 50,000 new young voters in the area. That figure represents more than 20 per cent of the total votes cast in 13th District in the 1970 elections, Williams pointed out, "a number potentially sufficient to affect the traditionally one-sided political (Republican) character of the area."

Williams' New Trier Township Democratic Organization has already begun a search for an estimated 8,000 new voters in the North Shore area. Tracing names and addresses of high school graduating classes for the past four years, organization members have already located 2,000 potential voters.

The formal launching of the registration campaign for the entire district will come at a rally a week from Saturday at Williams' lakefront home in Winnetka, at which Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Illinois, and Sen. Fred R. Harris, D-Okla., will appear.

Stevenson is expected to report on his tour of Japan and Southeast Asia.

HARRIS FORMER chairman of the Democratic National Committee, was invited to the rally because of his appeal to young voters, attributed to his independent stance and his sponsorship of party reform to allow greater direct participation.

Among the contenders for the party's presidential nomination, Harris will test "his position of independent populism" for the first time in a suburban area, according to the New Trier Democratic Organization.

Seeking to appeal directly to individual voters rather than political power blocs in his presidential bid, Harris has announced that he will rely on a volunteer staff.

Richard B. Ogilvie

The free picnic and rally is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. and several thousand are expected to attend, including most Democratic state office holders and contenders for the party nomination for governor.

WILLIAM F. CELLINI, director of the Illinois Department of Public Works and Buildings, will address the August general meeting of the Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township, according to township committeeman Carl R. Hansen.

Cellini, 35, is the youngest person ever to head the department, which includes the Division of Highways and the Division of Waterways. Cellini, formerly commissioner of streets and public improvement for the city of Springfield, was appointed to the public works post by Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie in January, 1969.

Previously he served on the Sangamon County Board of Supervisors, leading a field of 24 candidates in his first election. He was listed in the 1964 "Leading Men in the United States" and was included in the 1965 list of "Outstanding Young Men of America," compiled by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. Monday at the Mt. Prospect Country Club, 600 S. See Gwun.

LEGISLATION providing for centralized purchasing by all state agencies except colleges and universities has been approved by Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie.

The legislation was sponsored by Sen. Jack T. Kneuper, R-Elmhurst, who said it will end a "random and wasteful situation" in which independent purchasing by various agencies has been "short-sighted, unprofessional, and often have resulted in dubious practices."

Formerly the state purchasing policy functioned only within various code departments under the governor. Kneuper said an inventory by a large accounting firm indicated recently that the state will save 20 per cent on certain items purchased under the new law.

The legislature has appropriated $25,000 for a study by State Auditor Michael Howlett to determine cost-benefits of extending centralized purchasing to state colleges and universities, a practice long advocated by Howlett.

Equal Opportunity Unemployment Hits All Fields

by KAREN RUGEN
Today when unemployment strikes, it doesn't discriminate.

Men, women, young and old. Carpenters, teachers, bartenders and corporation presidents. Black and white. City dwellers and suburbanites. Rich and poor.

Anyone can fall victim to the merger, the cutback, the shutdown. Residents of the Northwest suburbs are no exception. The unemployment rate is six times higher in this area than it was 1 1/2 years ago, according to statistics from the Illinois Employment Service, Northwest Suburban Office in Des Plaines. Most of the increase is due to unemployed men, age 35 and older, in the white-collar group, statistics say. And most of these men have college degrees, many years of good salary and specialized skills tucked away in their resumes.

"It's the type of unemployment where people, who up until 18 months ago, were always in demand because of their skills," explained Everett Calloway, manager of the Des Plaines office. "Now these people are out of work. It's really a traumatic thing, especially when you talk to a man who has re-mortgaged his home, sold off his life insurance and used up all his resources. By that time, he's ready to take anything that comes along."

IN JULY counselors and interviewers in the employment service held more than 4,800 interviews, some with weekly repeaters and others with first-timers. "And it's gone as high as $700 a month," said John Coscoe, an employment service representative. "About 1,200 to 1,300 people a month come in for the first time."

The Des Plaines division, 601 Lee St., serves an area bounded by Schiller Park, Niles, Wheeling and Barrington. Approximately 40 per cent of all males seeking employment through the service are professionals, according to statistics tabulated over the last 1 1/2 years.

"These are the sales managers, vice-presidents, chemists, accountants and personnel men and generally any job requiring a degree," Coscoe explained. "A professional is hit the worst. He bleeds real blood. Take an engineer. No matter how hungry he gets, no employment manager will hire him in something that isn't his own field. He knows most engineers would be bored doing factory work and will go back to their own field as soon as there is an opening."

About 20 per cent of the unemployed males using the service fall into the skilled construction trades category such as carpenters, cement finishers, electricians and bricklayers. Fifteen per cent are men whose work has been sales oriented; 10 per cent are machine skilled tradesmen; ten per cent are in the general factory category including semi-skilled and unskilled labor; and about five per cent are trained in the service occupations as cooks, bartenders and dishwashers.

FOR MEN and women suddenly thrust out of a job, severance pay doesn't last long. Savings can run out almost as fast. So they can survive while looking for another job, the state provides unemployment compensation for up to 26 weeks. Benefits range, depending upon previous salary, from $38 a week for a person supporting four children or more to $10 a week for an individual with no dependents.

Each time someone makes an unemployment claim, he's sent upstairs to the employment service. He fills out a card that will place him in the computerized files of the service. If he knows what kind of job he wants and has been laid off, he waits to see an interviewer. If he's not sure what he'd like to do or explain "other reason" on his card to check why he's out of work, he waits for a counselor.

Albert Liska is a counselor. "I take care of people who have problems with their jobs or want to change jobs, perhaps through training programs or more education. I try to help them find what they want to do," he explained. "The most important thing, though, is you have to give them confidence. These are people who have been gainfully employed for 10, 12 and 15 years. Usually they're down and out."

"We have the best selection of jobs there are," said Liska. "Employers call us because they don't have to pay a fee."

Each day the Des Plaines office receives an update on job openings in the suburbs and the Chicago area. By using a "job bank," a listing of all available jobs sometimes numbering up to more than 4,000, a counselor or interviewer can find out right way if he can place an applicant.

Sometimes a quick phone call to arrange an interview gets a job. Most of the time, it isn't that easy.

"This year hasn't been the best year for jobs. Some I can send right out," said Liska. "But it's still hard to place certain people — the ones that are highly skilled."

Private employment agencies have the same problem. "The men's picture is a bad one," said Richard Knowles, owner of the Parker Career Center in Mount Prospect. "Most men who come in here know what they are worth and what they want, including working conditions and fringe benefits. But depending on how long they have been out of work, a lot of them are willing to take a decrease to get a job."

KNOWLES, WHO purchased the Parker franchise at 117 S. Emerson St., about a year ago explained that most men coming in for a job are non-college graduates or college graduates who recently received their degrees and can't find a job in their field.

"The man we can most easily place is the college graduate, with a good college grade point average and service in the military as an officer," Knowles explained. "A man like that between 25 and 28 years of age has everything a company is looking for. Everything else being equal an employer will hire a veteran because he knows he has been faced with discipline problems."

The local Parker Career Center serves clients in an area within a 10-mile radius of Mount Prospect, according to Knowles. The agency usually operates by collecting a commission from an employer hiring an applicant through the service.

"With business being so bad, mostly we charge the employers," said Knowles.

Sometimes we ask older male applicants, those harder to place, if they are willing to pay the fee."

Agencies' commissions are usually based on a hired client's salary. As a general "rule of thumb," the men's rate is 10 per cent of a year's salary, according to Knowles.

For a woman the charge is usually 84 per cent of the first month's income if she doesn't receive more than $700 a month.

"WOMEN ARE much easier to place than men," said Knowles. "There is a scarcity of skilled women for the jobs."

Most employers are looking for labor that's "young, sharp and cheap," according to Daniel Hyland, owner of Crown Personnel, in Mount Prospect. "An employer will settle for less experience if he can get a young kid in his 20's at $3,000 instead of an experienced executive 40 years old at $15,000."

Hyland doesn't think unemployment is as bad in the Northwest suburbs as it is in the rest of the country. "The employment situation here is not as bad as Chicago, and Chicago is not as bad as the nation," he said. "People and companies want to move out here. As a result we have one of the best job areas in the country."

PRESIDENT RICHARD Nixon's recent wage-price freeze may affect the unemployment situation in the Northwest suburbs. Just how, the experts can't say. Hyland is optimistic.

"The job market should start opening up by Labor Day," he said. "By the first of next year it should be wide open again with full employment. Possibly we may have a shortage of people."

Knowles isn't as hopeful. "Nixon's plan is a great morale boost, but nothing will happen that soon. It has to be good for employment but my guess is that there will not be an awful lot of change before the end of the year. The stock market, which is booming, usually anticipates by three to six months business conditions. We'll just have to wait and see."

Ex-Execs Form Forty Plus

employment agencies because "I had tried them when looking for a better job and they left a sour taste in my mouth. Most of them operate just like a business with a tendency for moving bodies and not people."

A few interviews with prospective employers were unsuccessful. "How come? — that's always the employers' first reaction," said Richmond. "One employer told me I was qualified but found I was not acceptable because I was unemployed. I just sat there, very quiet and very humble."

One day eight months ago, Richmond came across a magazine advertisement for Forty Plus of Chicago, a do-it-yourself employment agency for unemployed executives. Richmond bought the idea and has been selling it ever since.

"We're a group of men over 40 who have banded together to seek employment for ourselves and for other members of the club," explained Richmond, chairman of the club's marketing division. But instead of marketing products, he's marketing the expertise and background of older executives.

To join Forty Plus, a man or woman must be past 40, unemployed and have earned at least $15,000 a year or more in some executive or professional capacity. Screening of new members is thorough and each applicant must provide proof of his background and qualifications.

MEMBERS MUST be willing to pay nominal dues and put in 16 volunteer hours a week for the organization. Forty Plus has no paid staff. Its members make up four committees — membership, administration, marketing and placement — which operate from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each weekday from Dearborn Street downtown offices.

Members of the marketing committee answer "executive wanted" ads for all members and take care of mailing out thumbnail sketches to more than 5,000 Chicago area businesses and industries. Among the sketches, mailed out every two months, employers can find anyone from personnel director and chemist to sales manager, accountant and purchasing agent. He can ask for and get interviews with former department heads, company vice-presidents, or corporation presidents.

Once the marketing job is done, the placement committee takes over by arranging interviews, preparing resumes and charting the results.

The object of Forty Plus, which has 33 men from the suburbs and the city currently working in its Chicago division, is to turn current members into former members. Once employed, you're out. But once you're out, you can help members you left behind.

"We've got about 1,200 men in the Chicago area who are ex-members," Richmond explained. Each ex-member can serve as an ambassador for the club. Companies who are satisfied with the men hired through Forty Plus usually come back for more, according to Richmond.

THE IDEA BEHIND Forty Plus was BORN with the Depression. In 1938 a retired New England manufacturer was shocked at the toll the Depression was taking upon middle-aged executives. The Depression has ended, but executives are still out of work. Besides the Chicago group, Forty Plus, a not-for-profit Illinois corporation, has divisions in New York, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, Denver, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Now Richmond can talk easily about being unemployed. Working for Forty Plus, with other members on the unemployment lists, can be a great morale booster. Luckily for Richmond, he has no wife or children to support, and he says he survives as a "frugal individual." And even luckier, he has adjusted to his situation and has not gone off the deep-end like some of his colleagues who just can't face the ego-shattering unemployment lines.

"I guess I was big enough to fight it all off," said Richmond. "It was just there and after the initial shock I resigned myself to it as a fact of life. I wasn't even optimistic in the beginning because I knew what the job market was like."

Many employment agencies look at engineers with a sigh, a sad smile and a shake of the head. Being over 40 presents an even bigger problem.

"A lot of employers think that the fact you're over 40 means you're dead," said Richmond, shrugging his shoulders. "I don't know why. Do you?"

Jewish Services Are Announced

Harper Last With Start Of School

Harper Community College will be the last local school district to begin school this fall, but administrators and trustees will be considering items about school opening at the board of trustees meeting tonight in the administration center.

Classes will begin Sept. 13 and approval of new staff members for fall will be on the agenda.

GUIDELINES for coordinating public and school use of the recently installed tennis courts will also be presented to the board by college administrators.

Finally, discussion of revisions in the faculty evaluation system will also be held.

The Harper College board of trustees convenes at 8 p.m. in the third floor administrative offices. The college is located at the intersection of Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine.

NW Highway Has Detour, Too

Traffic on Northwest Highway in Barrington will be detoured for six to seven weeks during resurfacing of 2.1 miles of pavement between Elm Road and Lake-Cook Road.

Northbound traffic will be routed north on Quentin Road to Dundee Road, west Barrington Road and north to the highway.

The work is being performed by H. J. Curran Contracting Co. of Crystal Lake at a cost of $687,955.00, according to the Illinois Division of Highways. The project includes removal of existing pavement, laying of 9-inch concrete pavement, and resurfacing with three inches of bituminous binder.

Des Plaines. Three Sabbath Services will be conducted this weekend by Rabbi Jay Karzen and Cantor Harry Salowinichik. Friday prayers will be recited at 7:30 p.m., Saturday at 9:30 a.m. and a special Bar Mitzvah service in honor of Ira Katz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Katz, 9511 Park Ln., Des Plaines, at the afternoon Mincha-Maariv prayers, Saturday, Aug. 28, at 6:45 p.m.

The high holiday committee, under the chairmanship of Sherwin Pomerantz, is planning for the forthcoming Rosh Hashanah-Yom Kippur observance. Reservations and memberships are being accepted daily at the synagogue office including Sundays and evenings. Religious school begins after Labor Day. Class assignments are being prepared now for the opening of the school year. Enrollment is open to all youngsters, pre-kindergarten through high school.

The annual synagogue picnic will be held Monday, Sept. 6, at Northwestern Woods in Des Plaines. Lunch will be available. The community is invited to this all day outing, which begins at 11:30 a.m.

Not All Jobs Open To Elders

Illinois law prohibits discrimination against older workers. But, says the Illinois State Bar Association, that doesn't mean that all jobs are open to older people.

The Illinois legislature voted a bill into law in 1967 stating that it would be against the best interests of the state — and therefore unlawful — for an employer to deprive a person over 45 of any job he can handle. But it acknowledged that not all older people are qualified for every type of assignment.

It provided that in a situation when it would be unsafe to train a worker over 45 for a new position that it would not be illegal for a prospective employer to turn down a jobseeker.

But it stated that with that single exception older workers should be given the same chance as anyone else and should be considered for the position without respect to age.

"Anyone discriminating against a prospective employee on the basis of age, or anyone firing a person on the payroll after he has reached a certain age (aces a fine of $50 to $100. And it applies the rule to labor unions as well as individual and corporate employers, the ISBA noted.

International Cafe To Open At Woodfield

International Cafe, opening soon in Schaumburg's Woodfield, is planned to represent a league of nations food service under international flags.

The facility, one of many operated in shopping malls around the United States, will have five kitchens, each specializing in a different ethnic cuisine.

Operated by International Cafes, the Woodfield installation is to be the company's largest operation with more than 10,000 square feet on the main mall level.

A stroll past each of the national kitchens will bring shoppers "culinary delights coupled with convenience" said an International Cafe spokesman.

Service at each kitchen is designed to be fast and seating facilities will be located in the main dining area.

DECOR IS PLANNED to stimulate the eye to the international flavor and atmosphere will be further enhanced by unique artifacts from the countries represented.

To date only the Bavarian Kitchen has been identified when last week Schaumburg village officials were asked to amend their liquor license to include an additional beer sale permit.

In addition to restaurants in malls in Woodbridge, N. J., Toledo, Ohio and Atlanta, Ga., International Cafes also operate at Randhurst Shopping Center where Le Rendezvous and Le Petit Cafe are located.

Last year the food service organization entered the field of British pubs with the opening of "Down'n Inn" — The Financial Club, located at 109 W. Madison in Chicago's Loop.

Animal Garden Toys will also be opened in Woodfield by the same parent firm and will offer a wide variety of top quality stuffed animals and toys.

Receives Grant

A Schaumburg resident has received a $800 grant for studies in education of the mentally retarded, a Hoffman Estates resident has been awarded a degree and another has been named to an honor roll, report colleges with local students.

Linda Oster, 1611 Warwick Ln., Schaumburg, received the stipend, and all her tuition and fees at Northern Illinois University have been waived. She is one of 38 senior students at the school receiving grants from the Bureau for Handicapped Children, U.S. Office of Education.

Robert William Rentz, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Rentz, 158 Hillcrest, Hoffman Estates, has completed requirements for a bachelor of university studies degree in the spring semester at the University of New Mexico.

Margaret Striebel, 153 E. Berkley, Hoffman Estates, is named on the honor roll of Montana State University at Bozeman for the spring semester.

On Dean's List

Mary O'Hagan, daughter of Mr. C. E. O'Hagan of Arlington Heights, has achieved recognition on the Dean's List at Bradley University, Peoria, Illinois.

Miss O'Hagan is a senior majoring in Psychology at the University.

Another Detour For Rte. 53 Traffic

Traffic patterns at the site of new construction on Interstate 90 between Golf Road and Algonquin Road will be altered today after the morning rush hour, according to the Illinois Division of Highways.

Drivers going south on Route 53 and wishing to follow the Northwest Tollway west will be routed south of the Tollway to Higgins Road. They will exit to Higgins Road, return to the northbound lane of Route 53 and proceed back to the westbound Tollway exit.

Southbound Rte. 53 traffic heading east on the Tollway will proceed to a traffic signal just south of the Tollway, where a left turn signal will allow them to enter the eastbound ramp.

Cars approaching from either direction on the Tollway to southbound Route 53 will exit northbound on Route 53, proceed to Algonquin Road and turn around at the cloverleaf there to reach the southbound lane of Route 53.

Northbound Route 53 traffic and cars entering from the Tollway to go north on Route 53 will follow existing traffic patterns.

Kuralt Has Dream Assignment, Freedom

by ROBERT MUSEL
NEW YORK (UPI) — Every now and then the round, pleasant face of Charles Kuralt pops up on Walter Cronkite's CBS Evening News reporting on the affairs of mice and men from such back roads of this vast and diverse country as Cuthbert, Texas or Hardscrabble Creek, Oregon.

Kuralt has one of the dream assignments of television. Traveling in a truck with a camera crew of three he can go anywhere he wants in the continental United States looking for feature stories. Anchor man Cronkite is the highest paid man in TV news but the penalty is that he is pinioned in the red-brick former dairy that houses the CBS current affairs crew.

I doubt Kuralt would trade his freedom and daily excitement for that or any other job.

THE OTHER DAY Kuralt was discovered in his office putting together a record of his journeyings for an hourlong documentary, "On the Road," which the network will broadcast as a CBS news Special Sept. 7, 10-11 p.m. EDT. He relived in an interview some of the more fascinating moments of his four years of traveling off the beaten track.

"There were certain difficulties in stringing together a number of stories not intended to be strung together but I'm using the theme that in an age of plastics and conformity the individual can still flourish," he said.

"There's John Voelker, for example. He's a retired Michigan superior court justice who wrote the book 'Anatomy of a Murder' and is now an avid trout fisherman. He thinks big game is a curse so he spends his time fishing for trout — small trout — with a gossamer line. I found him in upper Michigan far away from the things he hates — big cities, big buildings, big cars and big highways.

"Then there's Ben K. Green who is still a horse trader in Texas — he gave me a lesson on how to buy and sell a horse. And George Black, a 92-year-old brickmaker from Winston-Salem, N.C. who makes bricks with a mule-powered mud mill.

Social Security and You

Q. — I receive monthly social security survivors payments for my daughter who was just 16. She is planning to get married. Will she continue to get payments until she's 18 even after she gets married?

A. — No. Her monthly social security payments will stop the month before she marries. You should notify the Social Security Administration soon as you know the exact date of her marriage.

Q. — AS A FEDERAL Government employee, I didn't pay social security taxes on my salary. But I did work part time for a number of years in a department store at Christmas time. Would I be eligible for social security payments based on this seasonal work?

A. — Your Christmas work could qualify you for a monthly payment. Call or visit your social security office to find out for sure.

Our bridge research has shown that Sir Lancelot du Lake was responsible for the rhyme "eight ever, nine never" back in the year 521. He first used it when someone asked him if he ever fought nine knights at the same time. Later he put it into use at the square-table bridge game.

Today, we find the peerless one sitting North. Sir Dinadan, the worst player in all England, opened the bidding with one spade.

With any other partner, Lancelot would have tried for a slam, but with Dinadan as declarer Lancelot decided to settle for game, rubber and a new partner. He merely bid four spades.

Unfortunately for Lancelot, Dinadan had recently learned Sir Easley's slam convention and Blackwooded his way to seven.

West opened the jack of clubs and Dinadan let it ride to his king. Then he looked at the ceiling and said, "How goes the rune. Methinks 'tis eight ever, nine never. Gadzooks! That is it."

Dinadan played the ace of spades, dropped West's singleton king and after that start even he could not lose a trick.

West started to draw his sword, but returned it quickly to the scabbard when Lancelot said, "He who challengeth my partner, fights me."

Illinois Fraud Laws Too Weak

Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott recently provided fresh evidence of how his vigilance is benefitting consumers.

Scott obtained a court order Aug. 17 prohibiting a Florida-based firm, which markets mink oil cosmetics through a chain-referral distribution program, from operating in Illinois until it fully complies with the terms of an injunction and final judgment secured by the Attorney General on May 7.

About $3 million has been invested by Illinois residents in the multi-level pyramid distribution scheme since the company began operating in the state April, 1968. Scott said 900 residents had paid from $2,000 to $5,000 each in order to participate in the marketing program, which had been flourishing in Northwest suburbs during recent months.

This local activity, in violation of the May 7 judgment, was exposed by The Herald, which cooperated with Scott's office in securing evidence for the latest court decree.

Signed by Cook County Circuit Court Judge Herbert C. Paschen, the order enjoins Koscot Interplanetary Inc. from selling further distributorships in Illinois, from holding any further meetings to induce participation in the firm's marketing system, or from further recruiting additional participants until it can show Scott and the court that it has complied with the May 7 judgment. That ruling enjoined Koscot from recruiting distributorships or selling franchises "through deception, misrepresentation, or through the concealment of any material facts." It also prohibited the company from operating or promoting a marketing scheme wherein "financial gains to the participant are dependent upon the continued successive recruitment of other participants."

The marketing venture — currently the target of legal action by the Federal Trade Commission and several other states — is based on the sale of a distributorship which entitled the buyer to sell other distributorships and sub-distributorships. Financial gains are dependent on continuing successful recruitment of other participants, prompting Scott to claim the firm does not really live off the sale of its products but rather off the sale of the chance to distribute the product and sell other distributorships.

Prospective investors in Northwest suburbs were lured through what the Attorney General charged were false, deceptive and misleading representations of earning potential. He said people were required to purchase sizable inventories of cosmetics in order to qualify as a participant. The firm failed to disclose the entire cost of becoming and continuing as a distributor, while assuring potential distributors they could earn specific amounts as well as easily obtain more distributors.

He said many investors who were unable to sell the products or recruit other participants lost their entire investment.

Scott's perseverance in this case will ensure safeguarding of Illinois citizens against any unfair or deceptive trade practices by this firm.

Nevertheless, this case again points up the need — one repeatedly cited by Scott — for stronger consumer protection laws in Illinois.

Millions of dollars are lost every year in consumer fraud schemes. The brunt is borne by suburbanites, who lose more money from such frauds than any other segment of the population.

Passage of stronger legislation could strengthen the ability of the Attorney General's Bureau of Consumer Fraud and Protection to protect and educate consumers as well as safeguard the interests of honest businessmen.

We urge the legislature to address itself to the need for tougher consumer laws when it reconvenes this fall.

Two-China Precedent

George Bush, U. S. ambassador to the United Nations, has come up with what he believes to be a precedent for the seating of the two Chinas — Red China of the mainland and Nationalist China of Taiwan — in the world body.

There is already a "three-Russia" policy, he says, although nobody calls it that. What he means is that two so-called republics of the Soviet Union, the Ukraine and Byelorussia (White Russia), each have a vote in the General Assembly and are, in fact, listed as charter members of the U.N.

The Nixon administration's two-China policy, says Bush, is thus nothing new and should be acceptable to the Communist Chinese.

Unfortunately, there is a small catch. Soviet Russia's three votes are all cast in Moscow. No doubt Peking would be amenable to two China votes in the U.N. if she could control both. This, of course, is not what the Nixon administration has in mind.

Those U.N. seats for the Ukraine and Byelorussia are like political fossils. They represent what once were, conceivably could be again but certainly are not now, independent national entities. They were considered a small price to pay for Russia's signing the U.N. charter 25 years ago.

The United States could have insisted on a seat in the U.N. for the Confederacy. Even more logically, Great Britain could have demanded representation for Scotland and Wales.

The "three-Russia" precedent is no precedent at all — except for mischief.

A Return To Our Growing-Up Years

If you loved your jackknife and harmonica as a boy, and secretly the girl next door on the block, you'll enjoy a new movie, "The Summer of '42."

It's a story of nostalgia and it's true what they say about it — that there's a summer of '42 in everyone's life.

It will deeply move you. It will carry you back. It will make you laugh until your sides hurt. Maybe cry. And wriggle in your seat as a flashback of old faces — ghosts now — from your own past roll into view and drop right in your lap.

Maybe you don't want to remember. But you will. People. Places. Smells. The summer you became "a man."

And most important, the movie . . . it will stick in your gut. And nothing you can do will get it out.

"The Summer of '42" is a story about a 15-year-old boy, Hermie, who loses his virginity on a long, hot summer. The setting is an island off the coast of Maine during World War II. Packett Island, surrounded by the sea and bombarded on afternoon runs by sea gulls who fill up on dead fish in the morning.

Hermie, a tousle-haired freckle-faced boy, is charming, clumsy, sensitive and walks funny because his swimming suit is too small. He is infatuated with an "older woman" of 22, Dorothy, a soldier's wife who needs a shoulder to cry on when a telegram comes from the Department of Defense that her husband has been killed in action.

And on this note, he is initiated into the rites of manhood with the girl he loves. And he finds it both wonderful and disappointing.

There are some funny scenes, too, such as when Hermie works up enough nerve to buy condoms in the drug store.

"How many would you like?" the druggist asks.

"Oh, three dozen," Hermie replies, trying to keep his carriage while licking an ice cream cone.

"Planning a big night," the druggist baits him.

"No, just the usual," Hermie says . . . until he finds out that many will cost him $12, and it just isn't worth it.

There is another scene in which Hermie and his two cronies, Osey and Benjie, steal a sex manual — perhaps Gray's Anatomy — and ravish every paragraph and ogle colored photos of the act itself.

"We'd get put in reform school if we took pictures like that."

"Must have special cameras. Can you imagine what the old druggist would say if we brought film like that in to be developed?"

"My parents never did THAT."

"Yes, they did. And so will you. So when YOUR time comes, you better know how."

There is also a hilarious scene about a bungled beach orgy the boys have with a couple of local girls.

Brad Brekke

Growing up was simpler then, but no less painful. The movie is realistic, with old 78-rpm records and a radio blaring those old commercials like "Dux does it better." Remember?

The movie is narrated in places by Hermie who has come back to the island after 25 years to see Dorothy's house, which is still standing pretty much as he remembers it. After their encounter, Dorothy leaves, never to be seen or heard from again.

The movie is based on Herman Raucher's novel by the same name. It is obviously autobiographical, and I can't help but wonder if the real Dorothy won't show up now, as a result of it. Which is kind of scary and wonderful in itself.

A nostalgic masterpiece, "The Summer of '42" will bring you right back to your own growing up years when you first discovered girls and how it shook you to your roots. Maybe violently, always gently, and all the agony and ecstasy of adolescence.

Your first girl. Your first love. Your first encounter. A frightening thing.

And nothing you can ever do will bring back those days and the way it was . . . the way you felt. You cross a line growing up, and you can never go back. After the first time, it's never quite the same again.

But some things don't change, not even in all those years. Boys still spit through their teeth, brag about their feats and use "tough" words.

But that, too, is part of growing up. You leave things behind in those years, things maybe you've forgotten about. But this wonderful story will bring it all back to you. And when you leave, with your girl friend or your wife, it's someone else you'll be thinking about . . . wondering about . . . trying hard to remember and how it was with her then.

If nothing else, the movie serves as relief from all the filmed garbage which has been bombarding us.

We've become too much a nation of anti-romantics and anti-heros. Too many movies show us as a race of over-sophisticated freaks with hangups on hangups.

But now we're moving in a new direction. A new nostalgia. Life during simpler times when we were more secure . . . or as secure as anyone can be in a world of change. Last year it was "Love Story." This year "The Summer of '42."

Hermie: exuberant, intense, funny. Dorothy: wind swept, lovely and terribly vulnerable.

"Nothing from the first moment Hermie saw her, and no one who had ever happened to him since, had ever been as frightening and as confusing, had made him feel more sure, more insecure, more important and less significant."

In the end, Hermie, 42-years-old now, recalls what happened that long, hot summer on Packett Island.

In the summer of '42 they raided the Coast Guard station four times. They saw five movies and had nine days of rain. Benjie broke his watch. Osey gave up the harmonica and in a very special way, Hermie lost himself forever.

Warm. Funny. Sad. A story with bite. A masterpiece of the real thing. And of the Hermie in us all.

Harper President's Pay Questioned

Rhetorically speaking, "apostrophe" refers to a speaker who leaves a sentence incomplete.

This term could be applied to the article in the Herald, Aug. 16, entitled "Harper Chief Gets $600 Pay Boost."

I personally feel the taxpayers are being betrayed by the lack of specifics and a comparative analysis of the situation. True, Dr. Lahti's salary was renegotiated for a two year period for $40,000 — a $6,000 raise. Let us keep totalling.

We, the taxpayers, also pay his 8 per cent retirement ($3,200) which now brings his salary to $43,200.

We, the taxpayers, pay an annuity for the President of $100 per month — add another $1,200, which now ups the ante to $44,400.

Dr. Lahti was also given a "bonus" — "merit pay" — call it what you may, we are still paying it — of $2,500 in one lump sum, we are now up to $46,900. His pay hike is closer to $9,320, more than a 20 per cent raise.

Some families do not have this as income. I have also been at Board meetings at Harper College where they have employed teachers with Master's degrees for less than that amount.

Let's add a few more benefits: travel expense, a car with insurance for school use, we also pay to have Dr. Lahti's income tax audited. Now we are closer to the realistic figure which easily exceeds $50,000.

Would it not be interesting to know how much Dr. Lahti makes through consulting work at other colleges? Even without these benefits, where is there a Community College president who approaches Dr. Lahti's salary? It is even higher than some university presidents whose institutions are complete with Bachelor's, Master's and Doctoral degrees.

Here are comparative salaries for other community college presidents: Chicago City Colleges (seven campus plus TV open college), Dr. Shabat, $42,000; Elgin Community College, $30,000 (retiring president), $27,000 (projected for new president); Triton, $34,000; McHenry, $26,000; Oakton, $28,875; and College of DuPage, $36,500 plus car plus $2,500 deferred annuity.

For Harper, Dr. Lahti will make $48,000, plus a car plus $3,200 retirement fund, plus a $2,500 bonus plus $1,200 in annuities plus an unknown amount for an income tax audit.

Here are comparative figures for state universities: Eastern Illinois, $41,400 plus $3,600 housing allowance; Western, $41,400 plus $3,600; Northeastern, $41,400 plus $3,600; Chicago State, $41,400 plus $3,600.

Figures for other state universities:

The FENCE POST Letters to the Editor

Northern Illinois, $38,400 plus house; Illinois State, $38,400 plus house; and the University of Illinois three campus system, $55,000 plus house (that's the salary of the retiring president).

The governor of Illinois earns $45,000 plus a house plus an undetermined amount of expense money.

In another article on the same day, same page as the announcement of Dr. Lahti's salary, the headline reads "Harper Hikes Tuition $2 per Hour." They must levy a referendum this fall or tax anticipation warrants — rather diabolical I'd say. I have been under the impression that an educational institution was for the education of the students, and for the purpose of a Community College is to benefit those students who, for financial reasons or otherwise are unable to attend a State or Private institution. In the past few months we were made to believe that Harper College was in financial difficulties, they showed this in their negotiations with the faculty, THEIR raises were minimal — yet without students, and without a well-informed faculty — the institution need not exist.

It is incomprehensible to think that the Board of Trustees is representing the community. We expect judicious judgment on their part. However, once again, there was only one dissenting vote regarding this incredible raise for the president, and that vote came from the youngest member of the board, Mr. Moats, who appears to be the only member conscious of the economic situation of the country and of the college, and is exceedingly conscientious regarding the unnecessary expenditure of the tax dollar. The remaining six members do not seem to either understand this or to understand accountability in education.

It would seem in the over-all planning for the college budget, the Board is giving the President more than his share of the limited monies available. These are crucial times, the governor of the state has rejected funds for higher education and the President of the United States has vetoed two educational appropriation bills, and Harper College is still plagued with legal fees and a $350,000 law suit.

I understand thoroughly Tom Wellman's statement some time ago regarding the "Club" at Harper College. The "Club" of course is Dr. Lahti and HIS Board of Trustees.

FTC Hits 11 Air Conditioner, 4 Razor Firms

Must Furnish Proof Of Ad Claims

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Eleven air conditioner makers and four electric razor firms have been ordered by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to furnish proof of advertising claims within 60 days.

New Law Eases Terms On VA Direct Home Loans

Under legislation recently signed into law by President Nixon, Donald E. Johnson, Administrator of Veterans Affairs, is authorized to sell direct home loans to investors at prices which the administrator determines to be reasonable under prevailing conditions in the mortgage industry.

Previously no direct loans could be sold for less than 98 per cent of par, Johnson explained. In fiscal year 1971, the Veterans Administration sold $58.4 million worth of direct loans. It is estimated that these sales in 1972 will total $131.5 million, and the new legislation will substantially facilitate reaching this goal.

Proceeds from these sales, Johnson said, are deposited in the "direct loan revolving account" and will be available for making direct home loans to eligible veterans in rural areas and small cities and towns where the administrator determines that private capital is not generally available.

The direct loan program provides that in designated geographical areas where veterans cannot obtain private capital for home mortgages, the VA can make the loans directly.

It is also estimated by VA that some 3.6 million veterans may qualify for direct loans because of their location and present status.

The air conditioner firms were Raytheon Co., Lexington, Mass.; General Electric Co., New York; Carrier Corp., Syracuse, N.Y.; Westinghouse Corp., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Trane Co., La Crosse, Wis.; White Consolidated Industries, Cleveland; McGraw-Edison Corp., Elgin, Ill.; Chrysler Corp., Highland Park, Mich.; City Investing Co., New York City; Borg-Warner Corp. and Whirlpool Corp., Benton Harbor, Mich.

The ORDERS CITED advertisements in newspapers and magazines and commercials on radio and television.

The air conditioning and electric razor firms were ordered to furnish documentation concerning safety, performance, quality and comparative price.

For example, Whirlpool was instructed to furnish proof of its claim that a "special panic button to cool off extra fast" is a unique feature of its air conditioner.

North American Philips was asked to submit proof for a claim its Noralco microgroove shaver shaves "up to 44 per cent closer, up to 50 per cent faster... than they ever could before."

Q) I gave my son $200 toward his purchase of a car. Do I include this sum as part of his total support furnished by me?

A) No. The purchase of an automobile is not considered when determining total support, whether your son purchased the car or whether you purchased it for him.

Q) What should you do if you get a bill for taxes you've already paid?

A) If you have paid the tax recently, keep the notice until you get your canceled check. The notice was probably issued before the payment had been credited to your account.

However, if the payment was made more than four weeks ago, return the notice, indicating when the payment was made and where it was sent.

If you have a canceled check for the payment, also indicate any numbers stamped on the check by the IRS. This will help trace payment.

Q) Our first baby is due next month. When can I start taking an extra exemption so that my withholding will be reduced?

A) When the child is born, you may make a change in your withholding. To do this, another withholding exemption certificate, Form W-4, must be filed with your employer.

BOAC Net Profits Down

British Overseas Airways Corporation earned a net profit of $6.2 million in its fiscal year ended March 31, down from $46.3 million realized in 1969/70.

BOAC's operating surplus, according to the annual report issued recently, was reduced by some $60 million. Comparable figures are $14.2 million for fiscal year 70/71 versus a record $74.6 million in the earlier year.

Traffic revenues dropped only slightly, to $468 million from $475.2 million. Expenditures rose sharply to $465 million from $400.1 million.

A dividend of $11.76 million will be paid to the British Government, representing seven and one-half per cent return on public capital invested in BOAC.

The annual report attributes the "reversal of improving trends in output and profitability achieved by BOAC in recent years," to a short fall in passenger and cargo revenues on its eastern and western routes from Britain; the British postal strike; the hijacking and loss of a VC-10 jet; industrial action both taken and threatened by staff.

BOAC Chairman Keith Granville commented: "While BOAC has fared far better than most of its competitors, the current situation and indeed our future prospects are not as happy as I would like."

Country-Western Day Is Saturday

The barbecuing of a prize-winning hog will highlight Kruse's Country Day Saturday in downtown Mount Prospect. Proceeds from the special country-western day will go to the Mount Prospect Community Action Plan (CAP), according to Dennis Dinder, assistant manager of Kruse's Restaurant, long time village landmark.

The Mount Prospect Community Action Plan is a village-wide effort to establish lines of communication between the adults and young people of the community. CAP sponsors the ICE House as a gathering spot and counseling center, and also administers a hot line program for persons in trouble from drugs or other crises.

Binder's proposal has received the support of Mayor Robert Teichert, other village officials and merchants. The Mount Prospect Federal Savings & Loan Association has joined Kruse's in their request to block off the Emerson and Prospect intersection between their businesses to utilized parking lots for the day's activities.

EVENTS SCHEDULED for Kruse's Country Day include a children's costume contest, bike decorating and bubble gum blowing contests, sack races, a children's pop drinking contest and a rope skipping competition. In conjunction with the Country Day, a bake sale will be sponsored by several Mount Prospect women's groups.

Of major interest to the men will be golf prizes offered to those playing the Mount Prospect Country Club course that day. Scores should be turned in at Kruse's. Trophies will be awarded for low score and low handicap scores for the day.

An adult Country Day costume contest will be judged at 6 p.m. followed by square dancing in the street. Two bands are tentatively scheduled.

A 300-CHAIR movie theater will be set up in the vacant warehouse adjacent to the restaurant. Highlights of the Indianapolis 500 Memorial Race will be shown, courtesy of Andy Granatelli. A second film featuring United Airline's new 747 also will be shown.

The western barbecue will include the roasting of a prize winning hog recently shown by 14-year old Ward Huege at the Lake County Fair. Huege earned the money to purchase his 4-H project by working at Kruse's Restaurant. His showings of the pig earned him four blue ribbons.

A menu including barbecue, hot dogs, huge hotel rounds of beef, corn on the cob and tacos will be prepared under the supervision of Sophie Mulso, an employee at Kruse's Restaurant for 25 years. There are also plenty of jobs still available for volunteers, particularly the services of butchers.

Anyone interested in volunteering their time to CAP or donating to the bake sale should call Kruse's Restaurant, CL 3-1200 for details.

A Time For Assessment

What's Happened To Women's Equality?

by GENIE CAMPBELL

While overt mass hysteria has subsided somewhat, the subject of women's rights is still very much an undefined area that breeds both indecision and general confusion.

The only sure thing about women's lib is that it is here to stay.

One year ago today, women celebrated the 50th anniversary of the suffrage movement, but amidst their jubilation, they pledged to continue their fight for absolute equality with their male counterparts. The right to vote is seen by many women as only a form of tokenism to quiet other serious charges of blocked opportunities and wage discrimination.

Now, it is time for a yearly account. What advancements toward feminine equality have been made since last August's pledge?

THE EQUAL RIGHTS Amendment that was passed without hesitation by the House of Representatives Aug. 10, 1970, prohibited any discrimination on account of sex but was sidetracked by the Senate.

Reintroduced in the House this session, it was amended by the House Judiciary Committee to the dissatisfaction of its backers. Those less than favorably inclined towards the Equal Rights Amendment felt these amendments would effectively kill the measure.

But opinion that ERA is dead because of the amendments was disputed last month by Cong. Don Edwards, R-Calif., chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee that heard the bill. He has asked support for the amendment as originally introduced and feels it still has a chance when Congress reconvenes Sept. 8 as each of the two amendments, one exempting women from the draft and the other permitting state protective legislation to stand, must be voted on separately. Edwards hopes for their defeat, leaving ERA as originally offered.

A BILL SIMILAR to the one introduced in the House by Rep. Martha Griffiths, D-Mich., was offered in the Senate by Birch Bayh, D-Ind. Stopped by a successful filibuster while still in committee, it awaits any further action until Congress reconvenes.

"The Equal Rights Amendment has been introduced in every Congress for the past 48 years, but it has had its supporters for more than 100 years," said Mrs. Griffiths in appearing last March to the House Subcommittee on the Judiciary for passage of ERA.

"Whatever its problems in the past may have been; whatever the prejudices against it, it seems to me that at least young men must realize that in today's world the Equal Rights Amendment is a necessity."

A RESOLUTION still alive in the Illinois legislature calls for Congress to act on the ERA.

Other action taken this past year to push the ERA and other bills pertinent to the future of women, includes the formation of a National Women's Caucus.

It is a bipartisan coalition representing women of varied ages, races and political points of view. Its major aim is to elect women to office in numbers proportionate to the percentage of women in the national population.

If men will not pass legislation for women, women will pass it themselves.

IN ADDITION to the ERA, Congressman Abner J. Mikva of Chicago introduced, at the beginning of the year, the Women's Equality Act of 1971, a bill that more closely defines the areas of discrimination on account of sex. It calls for such specific action as banning discriminatory practices in housing and hiring.

While not as encompassing as the ERA, the Equality Act of 1971 is believed to have a better chance of passage since it sets up definite guidelines for interpretation.

The bill is still in the House Judiciary Committee, and there is no way of telling when it will be reported to the House for a vote.

Similar legislation has been introduced in the Senate by Birch Bayh of Indiana.

A state caucus to organize Illinois women meets for the first time Sept. 12.

"IT IS A GOOD YEAR for women to run for state office," said Eugenia Chapman, state assemblywoman from Arlington Heights. The reapportioning of districts will automatically cut back on the number of incumbents being re-elected.

"It's ridiculous that the Equal Rights Amendment has been around for 48 years and still hasn't been passed," said Joanna Martin, a Chicago member of NOW responsible for the organization's public relations.

"We are now involved in a double political game," she continued. "The first is a women's lobby, to make sure that women are represented at all times during Congressional sessions." (A benefit, "From Promise to Power," will be held today in Orchestra Hall in order to raise funds to establish a national women's lobby in Washington, D.C.)

"Our other thrust is to get more women elected to office. NOW will greatly support the Illinois Political Caucus of Women."

STATEWIDE, MANY women are unaware that the new Illinois constitution is the first in the nation with an Equal Rights Provision which went into effect July 1.

It is Sect. 13 of the new Constitution's Bill of Rights which states "that the equal protection of the law shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex by the State or its units of local government and school districts."

This means that no law can be enacted or administrative practice introduced that treats citizens differently because of their sex. Existing laws or practices that do are unconstitutional and can be challenged in the courts on that basis.

SECT. 18 IS COUPLED with Sect. 17 which forbids discrimination on the basis of race, color, creed, national ancestry and sex in employment and the sale and rental of property.

The new constitution represents an advancement but just how much is the question.

"There is a problem of interpretation," said Mrs. Chapman. "There still can be discrimination against women. It just means government can't discriminate, that equal protection of the law cannot be denied."

"Now we have to ask, what does equal protection of the law mean? It takes going into court and that takes money," she continued. "But if the statute were spelled out specifically, it would be less likely to be ignored."

VARIOUS WOMEN, female-oriented organizations and assemblywomen pushed for legislation in regards to all areas of women's rights during the immediate past session of the Illinois legislature.

Only two bills out of the host that were introduced, were finally passed. Both are expected to be signed shortly by the governor.

HB108 amends the Fair Employment Practice Act to prohibit discrimination based on sex. The other, a minimum wage bill includes a provision for "equal pay for equal work." If the governor signs these two bills, these measures will be enacted into law.

"We were pleased with the amendment to the FEP," said Miss Martin, "but we didn't get anything in abortion reform and appeal," she added in discussing how NOW felt about the past legislative session.

FOUR ABORTION BILLS were introduced this session, and all but one have been defeated at this point. SB748, a "straight 12-week bill," will be heard by the Senate Judiciary Committee in the fall.

Also still in committee is a bill to create an Office of Women's Activities under the governor which would be dedicated to alleviating sex discrimination.

A bill to remove prohibition against women receiving unemployment compensation during pregnancy was recommended a "do pass" by the Senate Committee on Labor and Commerce. It will be voted on in the Senate when the legislature reconvenes in October.

HB2210 allowing married women to choose a surname for legal purposes was met with obvious humor and defeated on the floor of the General Assembly.

ALSO DEFEATED was an important package of labor legislation, (SB459-461), introduced by Sen. Esther Saperstein of Chicago. It provided for minimum wage, repeal of the Eight Hour Law for women, voluntary overtime, equal pay for equal work, the prohibition of sex discrimination in employment and the establishment of a Wage and Hour Division in the Illinois Department of Labor.

Of the five day care bills introduced this past session, one was signed by the governor providing grants to needy centers to the state.

"We are reaching the point where legislators don't want to be labeled anti-women. They try to laugh it off, but now they are very uneasy and nervous about it," said Mrs. Chapman who introduced several of the bills relating to women's equality.

"LEGISLATION HAS failed to provide justice," she continued. "Too many women do need their incomes. They are not just working for pin money and they are not going to stand seeing a man next door making more for the same amount of work."

"A number of steps have been taken where we haven't been successful in the past. What we need to do now is go through laws with a fine tooth comb and consider what contributes to discrimination," she said.

"Nowhere does it say this is a discrimination against women. It's accepted because that's always the way it has been done. If one could only work more with attitudes."

Women's Lib Fights Discrimination In Higher Education For Women

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK, (UPI) —The women's liberation movement gets credit for the appearance of "woman studies" on college campuses.

Such studies have nothing to do with anatomy, sex appeal or the measurements of a woman's hips, waist, bustline.

Like the black studies courses introduced before them, the "woman studies" aim to raise the consciousness of everyone to injustices dealt a segment of American society — to wit, females, in this instance.

Higher education does its bit to damage women, according to the 1970 report of the President's Task Force on Women's Rights and Responsibilities. Consider, from the Task Force Report:

"Discrimination in education is one of the most damaging injustices women suffer. It denies them equal education and equal employment opportunity, contributing to a second class image."

TYPICAL OF the "woman studies" is the "Second Sex" course at the Experimental College at Fresno State College in California. In its second year, it features lectures by the more outspoken of the women's lib promoters, including TI Grace Atkinson.

Other courses go on to show how women are discriminated against in literature through sexual stereotyping. The poor treatment of women in standard works even has given birth to The Feminist Press in Baltimore — a press determined to get out the straight story of some of the women presented in sexualized roles by earlier authors, mostly males.

Many universities, such as the University of Maine, have set up committees to review the status of faculty women. These aim to end job discrimination within the university. The woman course at Maine is called "Fem-Lib." As at many universities, the course has supplanted black studies as the "now" elective.

CREDIT COURSES in women's rights and their social position at some schools are offered through the history department.

Mississippi State College for Women in Columbus, Miss., reports that last year the school started its "Contemporary Woman Sequence" of study.

The sequence offers 10 courses designed primarily for the all-woman college. Course offerings include dynamics of leadership.

At Mississippi State University at State College, Miss., women's lib is old hat. But University News Editor Boyd Gatlin says, "Women students still have a long way to go in getting the same rights as men students."

Dr. John K. Bettersworth, vice president at that school, said women's lib has led to an attempt to hire more women professors and "to adjust our salaries so that females are paid for their work and not underpaid because of their sex."

BOSTON FEMALE LIBERATION, one of the largest of several women's organizations in the Boston area and among the most active in the nation, last fall successfully formed women's lib groups on campuses in Massachusetts, Boston University, Northeastern University and Radcliffe College. Fem Lib groups put forth five demands, the same being voiced by other lib groups at other campuses nationally.

The demands: free child care center for students, faculty and staff; self-defense classes for women; women's studies programs (University of Pittsburgh and San Diego State reportedly have the best); a full-time gynecologist in the health center (demands for free birth control information and devices still persist in many colleges); and a woman's center.

Equal admissions policies are being demanded by many women's lib groups.

EVEN THE PRESIDENTIAL Task Force hit discrimination in admissions, based on sex, noting it is a fact that higher admission standards for women than for men are widespread in undergraduate schools and are even more discriminatory in graduate and professional schools.

If the quotas based on sex were dropped, it would be possible that women, if they are smarter than men or at least as smart, would exceed in numbers or equal in number the number of males admitted to college and graduate and professional schools.

Less than six per cent of the country's law students and eight per cent of the medical students are female, due to the quota system based on sex.

"This is despite the fact that women tend to do better than men on tests for admission to law and medical schools," says the U. S. Office of Education.

by HELEN HENNESSY

NEW YORK — (NEA) — There may be some men who agree with Nietzsche that "woman was God's second mistake." And feeling that way one couldn't expect them to want us to be too "liberated." But menfolk of this bent are in the minority. And it must have come as a shock to the leaders of the humorous, militant crusade for Women's Lib to find that the majority of their critics are women.

Washington model Judy Black, who believes that women and men must work together for human rights for everyone, started her own countergroup to NOW and calls it TWO. It's growing by leaps and bounds.

The younger girls in Women's Lib are disagreeing with the pioneers of the movement in their belief that the way to liberation is to hold political office.

AND NOW, New Woman, a newcomer to the magazine field, is aimed, according to its editor-publisher Margaret Harold, at the thinking woman and takes the position that women are largely to blame for much of their own limited opportunities in business. It also expresses concern over the degree to which men are blamed for the "shallows that exist in some women's lives."

The magazine asserts that it would "certainly be improper to suggest that men be blamed — even if marriage were a prison and women its prisoners — when so many women have tried so hard to maneuver men into marriage and when so many men have tried so hard to avoid anything resembling a permanent attachment." It allows that there are economic and social factors that have pressured some women into their quest for marriage but then asks, "Why are men being accused? For accommodating them?"

So it would seem that feminine opposition to the militant cry of "male chauvinist pig" is rearing its curly head in many quarters.

A SPOKESMAN (or should it be spokeswoman?) for the new publication takes this position: "It can hardly be disputed that most women in the past really women in this distorted view of suppression.

THE MOOD of the book is optimism. Women don't have to be second class citizens unless they want to. And it includes thought-inducing features that may help you to get your first class badge without unwomanly militance.

For instance the July issue included such articles as "Double Standards That Women (and Men) Permit — But Shouldn't," "Are You Legally Married Without Knowing It?", which is a state-by-state guide to the laws governing common law marriage; "Women With Incomes Between $35,000 and $50,000," which tells of women who obviously aren't woolly little sheep. And to top it off there's a piece by comedienne Joan Rivers, called, "Are You Too Proud to Have Your Husband Work?" in which she turns the tables on the old male concept of the "working woman" by declaring, "I was never one of those Neanderthal women who insisted a man's place was the home."

So now we have a choice of at least three ways to get ourselves liberated if we feel the need. We can be militant and "Starve a rat tonight — don't cook dinner." We can accept man as our ally and not our enemy and work together with him for a freer, better life. Or we can find the power within ourselves to become the equal of man. There's a blueprint available for each of the three roads.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Women Can Be Free, Feminine Too

One Mag's Creed: Ladylike Lib

have followed like woolly sheep and worked only until they got married or had babies. And even though it is true that many ambitious women have been unfairly victimized by being lumped into an all-women-are-alike category, it is also true that countless other women achievers have managed to snag attention despite the antiwomen attitude. So the fault, dear Brutus, is not in our birth but in ourselves."

The editors believe in the premise that being born female is rather a privilege. But too many women have suppressed their natural resources behind a veil of convention and some fools have seen all themselves ready to fight for the needs of women and of all under-represented groups."

Named as coordinators for the Illinois caucus are Verna Wittrock of Charleston and Phyllis Bere of Chicago.

The Home Line

Dear Dorothy: We are redoing an old house and wondered just how much the ampere service entrance should be to take care of the average household of say, two adults and two children? —Abner V.

The best person to discuss this with is an electrical contractor. Before you get to him, I can give you a quick short course. Many electrical codes require a 100-ampere service line for an average six-room home. This should take care of equipment drawing from 20,000 to 25,000 watts. Basically, 100 amperes are equal to 25 kilowatts and one kilowatt can handle 1,000 watts.

One electrical engineer reported he had a 100-ampere entrance in his home and this took care of a washing machine, dryer, dishwasher, electric range, two window air conditioners and a few other appliances (TV, toaster and so on). One can always add another 100 amps if needs change, but this should only be necessary in a heavily electrified home. The important thing is to have enough circuits. It is wise to have four appliance circuits and six lighting circuits — and there should never be more than 10 outlets to one lighting circuit. Clear, I hope.

Dear Dorothy: I have some chocolate candy which I do not want to use at the moment. Will it stay better in the freezer or the refrigerator? —Nancy M. Freezer.

Dear Dorothy: In applying a tint to a piece of furniture, I was unaware that my rubber glove had a hole and my fingers and nails were a mess. Nothing would budge the color until I tried chlorine bleach. It did the job quickly but I was just as quick to rinse my hands thoroughly and dry them. A coating of cream and they were fine. —Helen M.

Dear Dorothy: Since writing to ask if you knew how one could clean a fiber-

A Membership Coffee

Mrs. Ronald Jensen, chairman of the Membership Committee of the Hanover Park Woman's Club, will be in charge of the club's informal membership coffee next Tuesday evening at 8:30.

The coffee will be held at the Longmeadow Activity Center, 7173 Longmeadow Lane, Hanover Park. Those interested in learning more about the club and its functions are invited; club officers and chairmen will be present to greet prospective members and answer questions.

Membership in the club is open to women residing in Hanover Park and adjoining areas which do not have their own federated club and who are willing to take an active part in promoting good will for the benefit of the community.

The Hanover Park Woman's club is affiliated with the Illinois and General Federation of Women's Clubs. For more information, readers may call Mrs. Ronald Jensen at 289-5487.

A 'Serving' Of Elk Grove

A generous serving of Elk Grove Village was heaped on guests of the local junior woman's club at two recent membership coffees. Stressing greater community involvement, the club told prospective members about its intentions this year to direct more time and energy towards local needs.

The coffees were held at Mrs. Marvin Poel's and Mrs. Edmund Walsh's the past two Tuesdays. Mrs. Robert Harvey, membership chairman, emphasized the Elk Grove Juniors' all-out effort to serve the community.

A tea is planned by the membership committee this Sunday to welcome the new members. All of the clubwomen will be on hand to meet them. The event takes place at Elk Grove Library where the Juniors meet each month.

ALTHOUGH A major portion of the Juniors' projects already center around the village, most members indicated in a poll taken last year that they wanted more community involvement. It was in this spirit that the Juniors served at the library open house and dedication this summer, also at the Community Services open house and Clearbrook Center dedication ceremony.

In addition, volunteers from the club manned the TB Mobile X-ray Unit and the Environmental Action 71 display, both sponsored the Tuberculosis Institute.

It's Beginning Day For Sorority Group

Members of Lambda Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi are holding their Beginning Day Coffee this morning in the Buffalo Grove home of Mrs. Robert Lerdal.

During the 10 a.m. coffee Mrs. Vince Humphrey of Arlington Heights, president, will be giving highlights of the activities for the coming year. Yearbooks are being distributed and a social hour is also being held.

glass shower stall, I have found the perfect solution. Just dampen the bottom of the shower stall with water, then sprinkle on powdered dishwasher detergent so that the whole area is covered. Leave for 30 minutes. Rinse off thoroughly. The stall should come out sparkling clean. If not, repeat the treatment. —Mrs. Kathleen Mayes.

Even though the company that makes this stall recommends one of the strong liquid detergents, I'm sure this treatment ought to be all right though I wouldn't overdo it. Dishwasher detergent is pretty potent stuff.

Big Names In TV Season Spotlight

by DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Every new television season starts out with the promise of better things. It's like the concept of tomorrow: It must be better than today.

And this '71-'72 season seems to be a particularly interesting season, at least from the vantage point of late summer. There is a higher percentage of new shows this year than last, and, most significantly, the new shows are studded with big stars.

The main reason for this, of course, is the decline in motion picture production. With few movies to be made, some major movie names have switched to the once-dreaded milieu of television. You'll have such stars as James Stewart, Glenn Ford, Rock Hudson, Rod Taylor, Tony

James Stewart

Curtis, Shirley MacLaine and Anthony Quinn on TV regularly this year.

This is the year, too, when the FCC took a half-hour each night away from the networks. The idea was to encourage local programming. But, just in case the local stations are too lazy or too poor to do their own, syndicated packages are going all out to take up the slack. They are peddling old shows and, too, they are making some new ones.

So, besides the 21 new shows slated by the three networks, there may be other new shows, depending on what city you live in. And these possible additional series have some fair-sized stars, too — Robert Brown, of Here Come the Brides, is filming something called Primus, in the Bahamas; Jack Albertson has the title role in a medical-adventure half-hour called Doctor Simon Locke; Harry Guardino is playing a special investigator called Monty Nash; and there are several others.

BUT IT IS THE new network shows which attract the most attention. Some of them sound like winners, but there's a need for a lot of luck in the TV business. Last year at this time, there were 35 new January. Of those, only ten will be back shows, and seven came along in for a second season — Flip Wilson, The Odd Couple, The Partridge Family, Arnie, The Mary Tyler Moore Show, The Smith Family, All in the Family, Night Gallery, Alias Smith and Jones and McCloud, which becomes part of NBC's ambitious Mystery Movie.

This is a three-segment 90 minutes, with Dennis Weaver's McCloud alternating with Peter Falk's Columbo and Rock Hudson's McMillan and Wife. All three deal with crime-fighting, in various aspects.

Crime-fighting is probably the biggest trend this year, and there is also a geographical trend. There are four new shows set in the American southwest.

In Nichols, James Garner plays a sheriff in the southwest in 1914. In Cade's County, Glenn Ford plays a sheriff in the southwest today. In Bearcats, Rod Taylor and Dennis Cole play two investigators in the southwest in 1914 (obviously, that was a good year in the southwest). And in The Man and the City, Anthony Quinn plays a mayor in the contemporary southwest.

OTHER CRIME-BUSTERS on the new schedule are George Kennedy, starring as Sarge, a cop-turned-priest who still battles crime; William Conrad as a private eye named Cannon; James Franciscus as Longstreet, a blind insurance investigator; Robert Conrad as The D.A.; David Janssen as O'Hara, U.S. Treasury, a T-Man at work, and Tony Curtis and Roger Moore, as The Persuaders, two gentlemen-adventurers in a made-in-England show.

Even a couple of comedies have a crime flavor — The Partners has Don Adams and Rupert Crosse as bumbling cops and Chicago Teddy Bears involves Dean Jones in the '30s, running a speakeasy and trying to keep out of the clutches of the law and rival gangsters.

There are relatively few new situation comedies. Shirley MacLaine has one, again made in England, as a photo-journalist who roams around Europe. Larry Hagman and Donna Mills, in The Good Life, play a couple who decide to try life as a butler-cook to rich folks. Sandy Duncan plays Funny Face, a girl who is a combination coed-and-medal. Dick Van Dyke is back, as a TV talk show host new show, plays a college professor. And Bobby Sherman's Getting Together has him as a song writer.

That leaves only two others — Owen Marshall, with Arthur Hill, is a drama about a lawyer in a medium-sized city, and The Funny Side is a comedy-variety hour with five couples showing varying responses to the same situation, with Gene Kelly and others as the hosts.

It's a line-up that reads well, and the presence of so many stars should make this an attractive season. But the odds against success are still terribly high.

Towns On Edge Of Suburban Ring Should Plan For Future

by DOROTHEA M. BROOKS
NEW YORK (UPI) — Towns in rural areas just beyond today's suburban ring should be planning now for future growth that is inevitable, according to architect and land planner William A. Gould of Cleveland.

Gould says he is "convinced planned environments have to happen. If not, sprawling Los Angeles will be the city of the 21st Century."

Ideally, Gould believes, the new, planned communities should come about through the active sponsorship of existing smaller towns in the path of natural growth.

The inner ring of suburbs around major cities are the next to face the battle of decay, Gould said. Many communities already are overcrowded. Their populations will move farther out, encouraged by improved highway networks and transportation and the spreading job market.

This growth will not be stopped and those towns in its path, rather than fight the inevitable, would do well to control the growth and see that development is to their liking, Gould said.

THESE NEW towns will change the social and economic structure of an area, but growth need not be for the worse, Gould said. He pointed as an example to the town of Orrville, Ohio, which he described as "a thriving rural community, but one based on industry, not agriculture."

Orrville, with a population just over 7,000, but convenient to the freeways system, boasts a university branch and 35 industries, including the J. M. Smucker Co. of jelly making fame.

Gould referred also to Greenwood Village, a 1,000-acre planned unit development in Sagamore Hills, Ohio, midway between Cleveland and Akron, as "proof that the demands of modern suburban development can be compatible with country living."

Gould's firm as site planner, working with the developers, "was able to achieve a healthier tax structure in a high density community without sacrificing its rural atmosphere," he said. "The developers started with an unusually attractive site — and a commitment to preserve the natural beauty of the land."

The property originally was part of the estate of George Marshall, a local executive, who had planted a wide variety of trees, many imported from all over the world. It includes streams, a 60-foot waterfall, ridges, plateaus, ravines and a high hill overlooking the Brecksville Forest Preserve.

ON SOME 400 acres preserved for natural open space there is a three-acre lake, picnic areas, scenic lookout points, parks, and hiking and riding trails.

Gould said, "every effort was made not only to preserve the trees but also to utilize the natural contours of the land. Bulldozer developers might have considered the property a problem site, but by building houses to fit the land, rather than leveling the land to suit the houses, we were able to turn potential problems into assets."

Housing units are clustered in groups that utilize the views and open spaces to create a greater sense of privacy in what Gould called a "close to nature atmosphere." He said the use of natural wood building materials — rough-sawn siding, handsplit shake roofs, wood decks — creates a harmony between the houses and their environment.

The Greenwood development eventually will include 4,000 housing units, composed of conventional single-family dwellings, single-family attached townhouses, garden apartments and medium and high-rise apartments.

The plan for the village includes two elementary schools and a junior high school; shopping centers, office buildings, a community center, and the Village Club, which has indoor and outdoor pools, tennis courts, exercise rooms and complete recreational facilities.

"It is not just another bedroom community," Gould said. "Under the old one-acre lot zoning system we'd have had space for only 600 units. By clustering we were able to put 4,000 units on the site, and still retain large portions for community use and as a nature preserve."

"And in doing it, we were able to create a healthier tax structure for the community as a whole. Higher density increased total tax income sharply over that which would have accrued from usual zoning, and it worked to the benefit of the school system, rather than overburdening it."

Sewer Work Grants Told

Two grants from the federal Environmental Protection Agency to local sewer projects were announced yesterday by Congressman Philip Crane (R-13th).

Crane's office said the two grants are:

- $836,120 for construction of the upper Des Plaines intercepting sewer. Total cost of the project is $1,526,400. The previous grant from the EPA was $3,400. Total grant from the federal agency is now $839,520.
- $287,250 grant for construction of the upper Salt Creek intercepting sewer in Palatine Township. Total cost of the project is $1,305,700 of which a previous EPA grant was $430,880.

Tar, Nicotine Test Results Revealed By FTC

The Federal Trade Commission released a report of the tar and nicotine yields of 121 varieties of cigarettes as determined by tests recently conducted by the Commission's laboratory.

On August 25, 1967, William H. Stewart, M.D., then Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, reported in testimony before the Consumer Subcommittee of the Committee on Commerce of the United States Senate, that an ad hoc advisory committee had concluded that "the preponderance of scientific evidence strongly suggests that the lower the 'tar' and nicotine content of cigarette smoke, the less harmful are the effects." Cigarette tar and nicotine content is now disclosed on all cigarette advertising in newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals as well as advertising on billboards, on handbills and in direct mail circulars.

"Tar" and nicotine content of cigarettes yielding fifteen (15) milligrams of tar, or less, and of the twenty brands leading in national sales are shown below in increasing order of 'tar' values.

Holding Co. Net Income Up

All American Life & Financial Corp., a financial holding company, reported consolidated adjusted net income of $2,893,431 (46 cents a share) for the six months ended June 30, compared with $2,513,841 (42 cents a share) for the comparable period in 1970, a 15.1 per cent increase. Per share earnings are based on 8,049,980 shares.

Consolidated net income for the six-month period in 1971 was $1,724,497 (29 cents a share) as opposed to $1,572,826 (26 cents a share) for the same period in 1970, a 9.6 per cent increase.

Gross revenues increased 7.8 per cent to $27,046,340 from $25,086,379 for the first six months of 1970.

Stockholders' equity increased 19.2 per cent to $26,182,521 after cash dividend payments and provisions of $1,448,932.

Guest Column Offer Still Open To Readers

Cubbie Fans Show Loyalty With Letters

"KEEP THE FAITH. Cub fans, and your team will be No. 1."

Nearly all of the letters received during the past week reeked of this stale message. Most were reminiscent of a broken "Cub Power" record album, vintage 1960.

Only one of the 10 (only that many Wrigley Fans still exist in the Northwest suburbs I guess) "con" letters would get my vote as guest columnist if the Cubs should luck out and sneak in the Eastern Division back door. I still say, however, no way!

All but the last letter in the column disagreed with last Thursday's column. To Miss Mary Williams, a hey, hey, holy mackerel!

Now the Cub fans take over:

Dear Mr. Logan,
How dare you criticize the best bunch of guys in the major leagues.

No matter what you say about the Cubs' speed, defense, pinch hitting or relieving, the Cubs WILL prevail. With a great manager like Leo Durocher and an owner like Mr. Wrigley, we will see a World Series in Chicago. Not on the south side, for that will never happen.

Glaser In Record Showing

Bob Glaser, Paddock Classic Traveling League President, teamed with John Handegard of Oregon to break one of the oldest records in the annual F.I.Q. World Bowling Tournament in the Milwaukee Arena.

Glaser rolled 1,274 for six games, including a 249 and 242, and Handegard added 1,204 for a 2,478 total, erasing the mark of 2,459 set by the Swedish team in 1958.

The meet runs through Saturday.

Meeting At Hersey

A football rules interpretation meeting will be held next Tuesday, Aug. 31, at 7:30 p.m. in the Little Theater at Hersey High School. Dick Kinnaman is manager of the meeting and Liz Astroth of the Illinois High School Association will be the interpreter. All coaches and officials are invited.

The 1971 football code will be discussed, and a film "Football By The Rules" will be shown. Refreshments will be sponsored by the Athletic Officials Service.

Brown To Oak Park

Jim Brown, a coach on the Illinois football staff since 1962, has accepted a position as defensive coordinator at suburban Oak Park under head coach Ed Zembel.

A Mendota product, Brown teamed with brother Bill (now a Minnesota Viking star) in giving Illinois an outstanding 1-2 fullback punch during the 1959-60 seasons. Jim gained 521 yards during his Illinois career.

Brown joined Pete Elliott's staff after a year at Proviso East. He served first as freshman coach and then as a varsity assistant under Jim Valek.

All the Valek staffers who departed in favor of the Bob Blackman regime have taken positions in coaching and or teaching positions.

Show Expansion

Charles S. Potter, President of the Chicago International Hunter and Jumper Show, announced the expansion of the but on the north side, the place of the future world's champs.

Sally Nelson
Rolling Meadows
P. S. I love Pepl and he will lead us to victory.

Dear Sir,
The Cubs didn't shine in '69, they didn't go in 7-0, but they will be No. One in '71.

I don't have the time to spend telling you why the Cubbies will win—they just will. If you were a true fan you would believe in them.

When October rolls around and the stars of Chicago are battling for the National League title, I'll be glad to put some time into a column telling just what makes them great.

Jim Adams
Mount Prospect

Dear Paul,

Your pessimistic analysis of the Cubs' chances provided great filler but that's about all. You failed to consider three factors which have the utmost importance.

First, I am not predicting a Cub flag. I am not railing out any possibilities; they may win or they may not.

Paul Logan

You dissected the Cubs as you might on opening day. As a set of generalities, your analysis might qualify as an adequate prognostication. But you forget that the '69 Mets didn't really have the best team. You ignore the fact that over the last six weeks the workings of luck and happenstance weigh more heavily than sheer ability.

The winning team is the one that combines favorable schedule (the Cubs have it), rested pitchers (the Cubs have it), hot hitters, etc. Such things as speed and a solid defense are, of course important, and they will often win games, but in the stretch they take second level of magnitude.

You brushed by lightly the subject of pitchers. Jenkins, Pappas, Hands, Holzman and Pizarro are the best staff in the league, a possibility you admitted. Holzman right now is questionable, but the others have proven sound. The records show that they are all on the upswing. Only Hands, who has had unbelievably bad luck, is under a .400 winning percentage. A five-man rotation for the final month is bound to help. Any one of the starters could relieve in a pinch.

Finally, you unwittingly defeat your purpose and prove my contention when you say: "Unless the Cards and Pirates play below .500..." the Cubs won't win. Of course they won't. You pass off this statement as a "Conclusion" of your previous thinking about the Cubs, but it has no connection. You should have saved all that space (and given it to me, perhaps, in the first place) and printed your one earth-shattering sentence.

The Mets, for all their '69 heroics,

Fergie Jenkins

(was it 35 out of 49?) wouldn't have won if the Cubs hadn't collapsed. Even if the Pirates play .500 ball from now on, the Cubs must play better than .600 to win. A 5% game lead may not seem too big, but the Pirates will have to FOLD in order that the Cubs will even have a chance. You say "No way." You seem to be panicking the Cubs but really you're praising the Bucs. The longer Pittsburgh stays out front with a comfortable margin, the harder it will be for anyone to catch them. Even the proverbial 27 Yankees would be able to catch a winning team.

Arthur Magallan
Palatine

Paul Logan:

The Cubs will win everything this year. You can take your column and flush it! You also could burn it but both would pollute. Instead, eat it!

Jim Anderson
Arlington Heights

Hey Logan, you STINK and so did your story.
No way are the CUBS going to lose.

Ernie Banks

You're wrong about Wrigley too. He didn't break up the team 'cause they are the greatest!

I hope I am the winner of your stupid contest 'cause then I will make a fool out of Logan.

Here's why I should be your guest columnist:

a) I know the Cubs better than most fans 'cause I see or hear every game.

b) I know every Cub backwards and forwards, all the stats, etc.

c) Since I know all there is to know, there ain't nothing else nobody could do to top me.

If you don't print this I'll get MY DAD-DY to cancel the paper.

"The Cubs will not be crumb bums in 1971."

Dave Davis
Rolling Meadows

Mr. Logan,

You are so wrong in thinking the Cubbies can't win the World Series. They're the best team in baseball and I should know for I've been around these parts for 35 years.

I'm the oldest Cub fan on my block and I remember when Babe Ruth pointed before he hit that famous homer in Mr. Wrigley's Field. I'll always love that gentleman, his team and his park.

Stop writing such mean things.

Charles Williams
Arlington Heights

To Logan in Sports,

Did you see the way the Chicago Cubs won two on Friday? Here they come to make one helluva fool out of you, Bozo.

They've got it all going for them now and won't be stopped. They're going all the way to the World Series and win that with four in a row no matter if its Vida Blue's team or Brooks Robinson's team playing for the Americans.

You should make me the new columnist for that week in October and from that time on because I could easily stuff better than you do. Your stuff stinks in the worst way. I talked to my Cubbie backing neighbors and they were tempted to write you, but thought they'd just be wasting their time because you wouldn't print it. I'm taking a chance that you will print this.

You're wrong about the defense, relief pitching, pinch hitting and the whole lot. First of all the Cubbies have the best starters in the business and don't need any relief help. If they did, Regan is plenty good enough to do the job. Didn't you see his fine work last Friday in stopping the Astros?

Ernie Banks, who is the greatest player since Babe Ruth, will be handling the pinch hitting duties in the clutch during September and October. He'll get the big hits 'cause he's a veteran pro.

And Leo's the greatest, too. He'll lead them to victory along with Pepl, Ron, Kex, Beck, Billy Johnny and etc.

Timmy Williams
Elk Grove

Dear Mr. Logan:

The Cubbies have as much of a chance of winning the pennant than any other team in the National League. The Pirates are faltering and the Cards keep flipping.

They have added pitching help in Juan Pizarro. Juan could prove very useful in the stretch. This will give the other pitchers an extra day of rest.

Just recently the Cubs have been stinging the ball while the pitchers have done an excellent job. To say the Cubs can't win is an understatement indeed. The Cubs have long been overdue for a pennant and I believe that the Cubs will take it all.

G. Shih
Arlington Heights

Mr. Logan:

I just got done reading your silly column and must disagree on most of your points.

The Cubbies run well every time I've watched them, they all have great arms or they wouldn't be in the major leagues, they have great hitters and, I'm sure that their pinch hitters will be coming out of their slump any day now.

I'm sure most fans of Mr. Durocher's great team would love to tar and feather you or your insinuating that Mr. Cub, good old Ernie Banks, is over the hill, ready for retirement. Didn't you see the way he hit that ball in Cincinnati which was recorded as an error? I bet you would have cheated him out of the hit, too, if you had been the official scorer. As soon as this Hall of Famer's knee problems clear up, he'll be on his way to homer No. 600! I'm sure he'll be around just as long as Willie Mays and Aaron. He's just as good as they are and always will be!

With Fergie, Kenny, Milt and Billy along with Juan (maybe the best left handed pitcher in the league right now), the Cubs won't have any trouble winning the pennant. Nobody else has the great pitching.

You're right that they have the best infield in the majors with Ronnie, the best third baseman in baseball; Donnie, the best shortstop around; Beck, the best hitter and fielder as a second baseman in the game; and Pepl, the most handsome and greatest first baseman anywhere. He will help lead them to the World Series. He's been there before and he knows how to lead so he'll be able to help when the pressure builds.

I hope I'm writing your column in Oct. Then the readers will know the TRUE STORY.

Terry Wood
Elk Grove

Logan:
You think you're so smart. Get ready to sweat it out because, if you didn't notice it, the Cubbies are now in second place with first only a week or so away!

Leo's boys have it all:

1) Slugging, 2) pitching and 3) defense. Soon they'll also have a pennant and then they will win the World Series, too.

I am looking forward to seeing that column during the playoffs. I hope it's me because then I can show you how to write!

J. D. Moore
Mount Prospect

Dear Mr. Logan,

Thank you!

You made me wake up to the fact that I've been a "blind" Cub fan.

Your article touched all the bases as to what's wrong with the Cubs. Here's hoping Mr. Wrigley sees the light and shakes things up as you say.

Keep up the good work.
Mary Williams

Elk Grove Boys Baseball

The Elk Grove Major Traveling Team concluded its season with a fine record of 17 wins and six losses in tournament play. The team won both the Shabbona Park Tournament and the Waukegan Tournament and was runner-up in the Highwood Tournament.

Elk Grove ..... 100 100 1-5-0
Dan Streich survived a shaky first inning to go all the way for the Elk Grove tournament championship. Streich fanned 11 and broke the tie with a third inning homer. Tony Kees broke the game open in the seventh with a booming round-tripper.

Billy Williams

If any of you apathetic Cub fans have an opinion, drop the Herald Sports Department a line or two. We'll use it in Fan's Forum. And, should any of the late letters surpass one of these 10 which I think is the best defense of the Cubbies, that writer will get a shot at writing a column should the Cubs win the division.

The winning columnist will have his picture taken and will get to write about his heroes during the week of the playoffs.

I already have a column topic for that week, however, and I don't think the Cubs can upset my plans. No way, as Leo always says.

Man-Made Lake Project Started

More than 70 underground springs bubble up above ground at Dutch Hollow Lake, near La Valle, Wis. This is the site of a Branigar Lake Properties of Wisconsin, Inc., second home project.

Robert Kessler, vice president of the developing firm, said the springs, along with a kiddie zoo and tours of the property in four-wheel drive vehicles, attract visitors. A two-mile long, 210-acre man-made lake and its surrounding 1200 homesites will be featured.

When filled in 1973, the lake will have seven miles of shoreline and a maximum depth of 45 feet. Impounding water for the new lake will be a 60-foot high earth fill dam, 600 feet long. Preliminary work has already begun.

Kessler said 500 acres in the 2,350 acre project have been set aside for a "greenway system" of natural woods and meadows. The Dutch Hollow Club, 5,500 square foot community center, is under way and is expected to be completed this fall. It is a two-story structure with a rough-sawn cedar and glass panel exterior. It will overlook the spring-fed lake and a terrace with heated swimming pool. An 800 foot sand beach adjoins the clubhouse.

Dutch Hollow Lake can be reached by taking Routes 23 and 33 from the Reedburg-Lake Delton I-94 turnoff and following the signs from LaValle.

The announcement was made by Walter Nolte of Indianapolis, Ind., president of the international organization. In his new position Busse will be responsible for the group's activities in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin.

All Points Relocation Service is an organization with over 200 members in the United States, Canada and Mexico. The group was formed four years ago to provide service to executives being transferred.

The association is affiliated with Global Van Lines, United Air Lines and the Sheraton Division of ITT.

NI-Gas stresses it will continue its service on gas appliances already in the customers' homes as well as the new gas appliances which will be purchased in the future.

Service Answers Buyer Questions

Schools are the biggest concern among families about to move to another city, according to Inter-City Relocation Service.

Members of Inter-City, a not-for-profit real estate referral organization, cover more than 4,300 cities and towns throughout the United States and several foreign countries. Questions about school systems come well ahead of concern about which is the best residential area, says Robert A. Poltzer, manager of the Gladstone Realty office that represents Inter-City in Des Plaines.

"Part of our service is to answer these questions and others, often long before a family makes its first house-hunting trip to a new city," Poltzer said. After school systems, the next greatest concern of clients is money — taxes, interest rates, supply of mortgage funds, down payments, availability of homes on which mortgages can be assumed at relatively low interest rates, according to Poltzer.

Price range is important to families, most of whom try to at least match the home they are leaving with the one in their new community, he said. Resale is a concern as well as transportation and commuting facilities, possession dates, availability of new as well as resale houses, brokers' membership in multiple listing services, proximity to jobs, shopping and churches, community facilities, economic, ethnic and racial considerations and availability of rentals.

"An Inter-City broker to whom a family's housing needs have been referred contacts the family before it leaves its old home," said Poltzer. His firm also has offices in Elk Grove Village and Franklin Park.

Palatine Man Opening Store

Edward A. Jackson of 727 S. Mallard Drive in Palatine, vice president of the Beckley-Cardy Co., has announced the opening of the Teacher's Store at 324 S. Wabash Ave. in Chicago.

The Beckley-Cardy Co. has been a supplier of educational aids and supplies for more than 60 years.

Group Supports Nixon Proposals

The National Association of Real Estate Boards supports President Nixon's "bold and dramatic program to curb inflation and preserve the integrity of the American economy," said Bill N. Brown of Albuquerque, N.M., president of the association.

"While real estate remains the best hedge against inflation, we trust that these temporary emergency measures will, in the long run, serve to protect the American home owner and real estate investor," he said.

"The association recognizes that the implementation of the Administration's program will pose complex problems of policy, procedure, and enforcement," Brown said. "To aid in the resolution of those problems affecting the rental, sale, and other real estate activity, I am appointing a special committee of NAREB on economic stabilization to consult with the Cost of Living Council and the Office of Emergency Preparedness.

"In addition I will appoint, within a week, a special Realtor task force to consult with each of the regional offices of the Office of Emergency Preparedness on the disposition of matters relating to, or affecting, real estate. Further, I am urging all of the 1,600 member boards of Realtors of the National Association to support the President's efforts.

Check Heat System

The Chicagoland Better Heating-Cooling Council said homeowners should have a heating contractor check their heating system before winter comes.

In hydronic (modern hot water) heating, there are only a few moving parts, but a qualified heating man will know if they are in good condition, according to the council. He'll see that the chimney is cleaned, the burner adjusted, and make recommendations to replace or repair whatever is necessary.

In warm air systems he should see that the motor and blower are oiled and the belt drive is adjusted.

Homeowners can check the heating distributors — baseboard panels in hydronic systems, filters and registers in warm air to make sure they are thoroughly cleaned. Dust, if allowed to accumulate will prevent the heat from warming the room.

Andre Wehrung Gets Patent Approval

A native of Alsace, France, Wehrung received his initial electronic training as a member of the American Special Service Corps, following World War II. His career subsequently led from Radio Ral-sa to Metrix Corp., where he did pioneering design and development work with meters. In 1957 he came to the United States to start the production of the Lm-1-RCA multimeter in the newly formed American Metrix Corp.

He has been with Sun Electric Corporation since 1964 when he was hired as senior instrument engineer. In Nov. 1967, he was promoted to assistant chief engineer and then in Nov., 1970 he was elevated to one of the production managers of Sun's Avondale plant. # Municipals Show a Gain

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago recently reported on activities at Seventh Federal District member banks.

MUNICIPAL SECURITIES now constitute 55 per cent of the investments of large commercial banks in the Seventh District that report their holdings weekly. Nationally, municipals comprise 57 per cent of total securities held.

Currently these ratios exceed the previous peak levels reached in 1968 and early 1970. In that period, as a result of monetary restraint, total investment portfolios declined, with holdings of U. S. Treasury securities showing the greatest decline. This year's rise reflects heavy bank acquisition of municipals, while holdings of Governments have leveled off or declined.

In the second quarter, deposits at savings and loan associations grew faster than consumer-type deposits at commercial banks in 20 out of 30 district urban areas.

The more favorable S&L experience was evident in 17 out of the 20 reporting areas in Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin. On the other hand, banks showed more rapid gains in seven out of ten indiana and Iowa reporting areas. For all 30 areas, the average second-quarter gain was about 4 per cent for S&Ls and 3 per cent for banks.

The average maturity of outstanding negotiable certificates of deposit (over $100,000) of large Seventh District banks has shortened markedly over the past three months. As of July 26, 66 per cent of outstanding CDs matured within three months, compared with 59 per cent at the end of April. Only 15 per cent had maturities longer than six months, compared with 23 per cent on April 26. The total amount outstanding was $3.7 billion — up $400 million, or 12 per cent, since April. Nationally, CDs rose 10 per cent in this period.

CREDIT GROWTH at small-and medium-size district member banks for the first half of 1971 matched the gain for the whole year 1970. Loans and investments in June were about 8 per cent greater than in December based on averages of Wednesday outstandings at member banks with less than $100 million in deposits. Adjusted to exclude loans to other banks, the gain was 7 per cent, compared to a little over 6 per cent for the previous 12 months.

The $1.4 billion first-half gain (excluding federal funds sales) was divided about equally between loans and investment securities. Net acquisitions of securities other than those issued by the U. S. Treasury, largely obligations of states and political subdivisions, accounted for 65 per cent of the dollar increase in investments. Last year, the first-half increase in credit at these banks was less than $300 million, or just over 1 per cent, with loans accounting for more than three-fourths of the increase; net liquidation of Governments offset most of the gain in other securities.

In the first half of 1971, the total number of commercial banks in the Seventh District increased by 16. On June 30, the total was 2,591. Most of the gain reflected the establishment of 15 new banks in Illinois. Wisconsin acquired four new banks, and Michigan acquired two. Three banks were absorbed through mergers, and two were liquidated. Federal Reserve members declined by four to 838.

Benwick Showing Several Designs

Home shoppers touring the model homes now showing in Benwick located in Schaumburg approve the special change-of-face design features said Al Bercher, Lancer Corp. vice president.

Bercher said experienced home buyers look first for basic worth. "But then they look for a little more, something different, and to assure that they are making the right choice at Benwick, we try to provide a few of those change-of-face 'convincers' in each of our home designs," he said.

Bercher said Benwick models include ranches, bi-levels and split-levels, with prices ranging upward from $37,100. He cited design features in the Brookhill, a split-level home with three bedrooms and one-and-a-half baths, has a low silhouette. This is achieved by extending the main living wing well toward the front — and setting the sleeping level over the lower rec-room level to the rear of the house.

The Brookhill living room measures approximately 22 by 14 feet. This opens into the dining room. Between the dining room and kitchen is a semi-open divider. Another feature is the optional fireplace on the lower-level family room.

In the Masfield, a four-bedroom home, are three tiled bathrooms.

The Dorset has three bedrooms and one-and-a-half baths. The Barrett, lowest-priced model of the Benwick group — offers a full basement and a living room featuring a beamed ceiling.

The Benwick model group is open to inspection every day through the week (except Thursday) until 5 p.m. — Sundays, until 8 p.m.

CHANGE-OF-FACE features in the model houses at Benwick, Schaumburg, include room arrangement as shown above. View is in the living room of a model home. The development is by the Lancer Corp.

Builders Plan Fall Meeting

Thomas R. Shepard Jr., vice president and publisher of Look Magazine, will be guest speaker at the Home Builders Association of Chicagoland (HBAC) fall general membership meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 7. # Fast Assembly Of New Housing

The wave of the future is systems or industrialized building according to some building industry spokesmen.

The primary reason for the predicted passing of the conventional, stick-by-stick, on-site construction method is that it simply cannot meet the growing housing need and the desire of more and more Americans to become homeowners. Industry statistics indicate that in this decade, housing needs will exceed 20 million units, requiring production of at least two million units annually. It's estimated that 6 million substandard and deteriorating housing units will have to be replaced, and that 14 million new households will be created in the next decade.

Some experts feel the answer is industrialized (or systems) building — the fast, on-site assembly of housing units from components that are manufactured in factories.

Application of systems building to housing and to middle-and-high-rise commercial construction, will be explored at the second Industrialized Building Exposition and Congress (INBEX/71) Oct. 31 to Nov. 4 at the Kentucky Exposition Center in Louisville. More than 15,000 professionals in building and allied fields are expected to attend.

In systems building, major building components and structural assemblies are factory-produced. The components — which may be wall panels, room-size boxes or cubes, pre-cut house sections, or fully finished modular units — are then delivered to the building site. There they are put together, somewhat like a giant erector set, into a completed structure. The total time to completely erect a factory-built home on a prepared foundation may be as little as two or three days.

Helping to provide a ready "turnkey" home for waiting families, are a variety of sub-assembly systems especially designed for industrialized building. For example, a wall section may contain electrical, telephone, television and air conditioning systems that only need to be hooked up. There might also be a completely equipped kitchen unit, with sink, range, refrigerator, dishwasher, cabinets, plumbing connections and lighting fixtures. Another pre-assembled unit may have laundry equipment — washer, dryer and water heater.

Savings in construction time can mean savings in construction costs which can ultimately benefit the homeowner. For instance, use of pre-assembled bathroom units is estimated to reduce on-site labor time more than 80 per cent compared to traditional methods of installation.

Building systems and subsystems for homes and apartments and for non-residential buildings such as schools, offices, clinics and motels will be on display at INBEX/71. Information headquarters for INBEX is 5 South Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60603.

Open Tanglewood Village

GARDEN VIEW LIVING room is featured in the Tiburon single-story model at Larwin's new Tanglewood Village in Greenbrook, DuPage County. Five townhome designs are available. This unit has three bedrooms and one bath. The development features a variety of recreational facilities including two clubhouses and three swimming pools.

Larwin-Illinois, Inc., announced the introduction of its 750 townhome Tanglewood Village in Greenbrook Country. The new community is planned to include recreation amenities and a cooperative day care center for families with young children.

Tanglewood is the third village in the $60 million, 850-acre Greenbrook community, located off Lake St. (U.S. Route 20) just east of Barrington Road in DuPage County. Greenbrook Country also includes the single-family Tempo and Trend Villages, introduced earlier this year.

California-styling is emphasized in the Tanglewood townhomes, priced from $22,990 to $28,990.

"Tanglewood, like Trend and Tempo, is master planned around the concept of a total community," said Wyn Pope, vice president and regional general manager for Larwin-Illinois. "The village is designed in seven clusters, each with approximately 100 or more homes."

"A major portion of the land in the new village is open space used for green-belt walking or play areas. Through traffic is virtually eliminated by safe, cul-de-sac streets," Pope said.

In addition, the townhome community features recreation facilities, including Club Tanglewood's two clubhouses, three adult swimming pools, children's wading pools, barbecue areas, putting greens and courts for shuffleboard, volleyball, and badminton. One of the clubhouses will be equipped with a sauna, cabanas and three game rooms.

"The community features many conveniences that working mothers can appreciate, such as a cooperative day care facility for pre-school children," said Dean Dillman Jr., Larwin-Illinois marketing director. "In addition, Tanglewood offers a closed circuit, two channel television system which monitors the swimming pool and playground areas so that mothers can observe their children at play from inside the home."

Maintenance at Tanglewood is handled by professionals, and includes complete maintenance of home exteriors, grounds, and recreation facilities at a monthly cost.

Tanglewood townhomes offer full house carpeting. An automatic dishwasher, food waste disposer, frost-free refrigerator, double range and oven, automatic washer and dryer are also featured, said Fred Binkley, Tanglewood sales manager.

Individual townhomes have two to four bedrooms and up to two and a half baths. Most models feature the Spacemaker adaptability, enabling families to add additional family rooms or a den-library.

Furnished models are open to the public, featuring interior designs by Environmental Concepts, Inc. of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Residents may also use the services of the Larwin home center located at Tanglewood, under the direction of Betty Hoerner. The home center offers a line of home furnishings and appliances as well as free professional decorating counsel.

The Larwin Company is the single-family housing division for the Larwin Group, Inc. of Beverly Hills, Calif. This division has built more than 27,000 homes in 50 separate communities since 1948. Larwin began building townhomes in 1965 and has produced more than 2,300 townhomes.

Larwin also has major divisions in multiple-family housing, financial services including mortgage banking and real estate investment trust management, recreation land development and commercial property development.

Starting Third Condo Building

United Development Co. is planning to start a third building at its Village on the Lake Condominium project in Elk Grove Village.

The first buyers moved into a three-story building at Biesterfeld Rd. and Arlington Heights Road in July. A five-story building is being completed nearby.

All but two of the 58 units in the first building have been sold according to Allen J. Davis, United vice president of sales. Nearly 60 per cent of the 156 units in both buildings have been sold since the grand opening in May.

"The response to this location, with its 35-acre lake and convenience to shopping, transportation and recreation facilities, has been even more than we expected," Davis said.

The company authorized Inland-Robins Construction Inc., to prepare to start construction after Labor Day of a second five-story building containing another 98 apartment homes.

The first occupant of the village and the first to receive a free boat to use the lake, was Mrs. Barbara Fidler. A widow, Mrs. Fidler owned a home elsewhere in Elk Grove Village. Of the first 45 buyers, 12 came from Elk Grove Village, and the most of the rest from surrounding Northwest Suburbs according to Davis.

United is developing tennis courts and a swimming pool at the project. A planned $22 million community, Village on the Lake, will consist of 725 condominium apartment homes of one and two bedrooms, priced starting at $20,900.

The units will include carpeted living, dining and bedrooms, as well as dishwashers, disposals, refrigerators, and self-cleaning ovens. Also featured is landscaping and an exterior maintenance service program.

Village on the Lake models are open daily for public inspection.

New Officer Named

Mrs. Rae Brown assistant vice president of Baird & Warner, Inc., has been elected secretary of Inter-Comm, a new cross-country real estate referral group composed of Realtors with a specific interest in serving corporate family transfers.

Mrs. Brown, Baird & Warner's public relations director, has been in charge of the firm's own referral program, RESET, since its inception in 1964. Real Estate Service for Employee Transfers (RESET) was one of the country's early programs designed to assist transferees and has been credited with providing leads accounting for up to one third of Baird & Warner's annual sales total of more than 2,500 housing units.

Inter-Comm has a nucleus of Realtor brokers from major metropolitan areas across the nation who participated in a summer organizing seminar at the Broadmoor in Colorado Springs in mid-July.

Mrs. Brown said the new program will service to Chicago area home sellers at new locations when they are leaving Chicago.

She explained that RESET was created primarily to aid corporations seeking assistance in finding housing for their personnel moving into Chicago and 50 suburbs. But the program quickly and increasingly added the service of helping sellers leaving the area through informal cross-country broker cooperation.

The national headquarters for Inter-Comm are located in Kansas City, Mo. Mrs. Brown resides at 12222 Harold Ave. in Palos Heights.

Apartment Are Meeting Topic

Tips on apartment project financing will be offered at the second International Apartment Conference, slated for Sept. 23-26 in Chicago.

The conference is sponsored by the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB). The announcement of the program was made by Edward Zale, president of the Apartment Council of Metropolitan Chicago and the council division chairman of the NAHB apartment council committee.

Zale said programs at the conference, headquartered at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, will include a discussion of the government's Sec. 236 assistance to low and moderate income apartment construction. He said builders and other persons involved and interested in multifamily housing should register now for the sessions. Conference planners have arranged for a group of government officials and other speakers to provide information available on financing, as well as on construction, planning-design, business management and marketing.

Government-assisted financing will be discussed by Eugene Gullledge, HUD Assistant Secretary for Housing Production and Mortgage Credit, and Federal Housing Administration commissioner. Rep. William B. Widnall of New Jersey is also slated to speak at the convention.

There will be an opportunity at the conference for members to explore the program of the National Corporation for Housing Partnerships, designed to aid the financing and management of low and medium income housing.

TIPS TO HOME BUYERS AND HOME SELLERS

FROM MAP MULTIPLE LISTING
REAL ESTATE SERVICE

TIPS TO HOME BUYERS AND SELLERS

Important facts about central air conditioning.

Statistics show that approximately 32% of all the homes in the MAP Multiple Listing Market Area are equipped with central air conditioning systems and that 91% of all single family residences are equipped with some type of air conditioning installation.

When buying a home that is equipped with central air conditioning, be sure you inquire about the age of the system to determine how satisfactorily the unit can be expected to operate and for how long. Inquire about the capacity of the unit to be sure it is adequate for your family needs and also, inquire about the overall efficiency of the unit.

If you plan to install central air conditioning in your home, remember that the addition of central air will certainly enhance the value of the home but seldom if ever can you expect to recoup the ENTIRE cost of the system. Central air conditioning is a personal luxury that usually will add to the salability of the home but cannot be expected to add 100% of the air conditioning cost to the value of the home.

When buying a central air conditioned home, be aware of the capacity and age of the unit and let your MAP Real Estate Salesman advise you of the efficiency of the unit in relation to the home and the size of your family.

A $1,400,000 first mortgage loan has been approved for an existing printing industrial plant in Centex Industrial Park, Elk Grove Village, by Percy Wilson Mortgage and Finance Corp.

The 23-year, 8 per cent loan covers an existing 87,000 square foot building constructed on 327,000 square feet of land occupied by Alden Press, a wholly-owned subsidiary of John Blair & Co.

Loan negotiations were handled by Albert C. Hanna, vice president, and James E. Gruener, assistant vice president, both of the Wilson organization. Representatives of the permanent lender, Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. of Minneapolis, were Merrill Rovang and Bartley Foster.

Baird & Warner Gives Moving Tips

Some tips to make moving easier were recently offered by William D. Sally, vice president and general manager of the management division of Baird & Warner, Inc. The firm manages more than 14,000 rental units in Chicago and suburbs.

Check with the building manager to see when the apartment is available. "Some apartments may be vacant a day or two before your moving day," said Sally. If the manager agrees you can use the extra time for some preliminary house cleaning, moving a few items that you won't entrust to others, and planning furniture arrangements.

"But be sure your new apartment is clear before your moving day," he said. "The old occupants may have moving problems and the result can be chaos."

Pick your moving date. Lose no time contacting a professional mover if you are using one. They are usually booked weeks in advance. Oct. 1 may be booked solid. Suburban lease terminations are generally more staggered and may be less of a problem. Some apartment complexes also have a moving coordinator on the management staff, who should be notified. You may need to work out an alternate moving day. It's a good idea to keep the moving company and managers or moving coordinator at your new and old building fully informed of your moving plans.

If you do your own moving, line up your friends and equipment well in advance. "Plan your friends down as early as possible and pick a time that will enable you to get maximum manpower — or you may find your 'crew' away for a homecoming weekend," suggests Sally. He pointed out that in peak periods equipment agencies that rent trucks, trailers, and haulers often are booked solid.

"Advance arrangements also are necessary if you need a special car attachment for a trailer," he said.

Whether you employ movers or not, there are moving conditions you must consider. Be aware of the elevator situation and the proper building entrance to use. Many buildings have time restrictions on elevators used for furniture and ask that only certain entrances be used.

"Most elevator buildings have freight elevators or special padding for passenger elevators," said Sally. "It is important to schedule these well in advance of your move. Be sure to allow enough time to complete your move."

"Find out who at your new apartment building is responsible for the special elevator keys or padding and where they will be on moving day. Sometimes the building engineer is off on weekends or he may be at another building when your furniture arrives," Sally advised.

PREPARE A CHECKLIST of things to change. "Notify the post office, utilities, and phone company a month or so before the move to assure service at the new address," suggested Sally.

"Add to your list all delivery services, such as: newspapers, milk, laundry, etc. Fill out the change-of-address forms in your magazines, record clubs, business bulletins, etc. and mail. Change-of-address cards are available free at any post office. Don't forget your draft board and voter registration notification."

You may wish to develop a "pick up" list to remind you to check the local dry cleaners, shirt laundry, film processing studio, fur storage firm, etc. Add to this list all the items you have loaned to others or have borrowed.

You should have measured all doors and access ways at the new apartment before you signed the new lease to make sure your furniture will fit. "Now, using these measurements, it might be wise to draw up a floor plan of your new apartment to simplify furniture placement," Sally said.

Practice "priority packing" procedures. If you pack your own things, you should number and identify the contents of individual boxes. "This will save time when you unpack in your new apartment. 'K' boxes go to the kitchen; 'BR' bedroom and so on. Boxes should be numbered in the order to be opened at the new place. Be sure to write your name on each to avoid confusion," Sally said.

Bring along any extra light bulbs, said Sally. Occasionally the former tenant in your new apartment will be a bulb-snatcher and will leave you in the dark. Check with your new manager on the policy toward bulb replacement. Commonwealth Edison will give you free a light bulb for every socket you have.

"Also, be sure to check the location of your new fuse box," Sally said. "Most newer buildings will have circuit breaker boxes, and thus fuse replacement is eliminated. You should know what to do if the lights go out."

Don't overload your wiring. If you add wiring and outlet notations to your scaled-down floor plans, you could vary your lamp and appliance placement in advance and avoid overloading any particular room circuit.

Clean up your old apartment. "Just as you wouldn't like to move in on someone else's mess, think of the person who's moving into your old apartment. Leave a clean apartment behind you or it may cost you part of your security deposit," Sally said.

Check on carton disposal. Before you unpack, check with your apartment manager on the best way to dispose of your old packing cartons.

"Most apartment managements have special packing carton disposal rules that differ from the ordinary disposal of garbage," Sally said.

Organize all segments throughout your moving activity on a series of checklists. "It may take a little extra time at first but saves more time in the long run by eliminating duplication of effort," Sally said.

Tell Support Of Rent Freeze

As part of President Nixon's recently announced economic recovery program, the head of the National Apartment Association would like to add a freeze on property taxes and surcharges affecting real estate plus some type of effort to reduce spending by state and local governments at least five per cent.

NAA president Joe Sexton said the 20,000 members of the apartment group are ready to back up the President in reestablishing economic stability. In a telegram directed to Nixon, Sexton stated: "The National Apartment Association will support and honor your recent action taken on wage, price and rent freeze during the next 90 days. We ask that you solicit cooperation from all local and state governments to cut their spending five per cent and employ no new surcharges or increase taxes that would raise the cost of owning real estate."

Sexton said the effects of the rent freeze will vary from area to area and from apartment owner to apartment owner.

"Some of our people are going to be hurt very badly because they were caught in the middle of a promotional program or just before a general rent hike to bring their cash flow in line with their expenses," Sexton said. The Indianapolis, Ind., investment builder said association members will "take their lumps," but want some type of assurance their sacrifices are not in vain. He added that unless cooperation was gained from all levels of government, the rent freeze would compound problems that have beset apartment owners during the past year.

Sexton said the NAA is obtaining guidelines on the rent freeze and will counsel on the establishment of a working procedure for appeals and variances.

Couple Opens A Card Shop

Mrs. and Mrs. Harry Knaack of Arlington Heights recently leased approximately 3,000 square feet of space at 300 S. Wacker in Chicago, to establish Kimberly's Hallmark Shop.

The new shop is scheduled to open in the fall, Knaack said. It will feature a full line of Hallmark products, party goods and related items.

The total value of the 20-year lease is about $550,000. Howard Berg of Arlington Heights, representing Romanek-Golub & Co., was sole broker in the transaction. The 300 S. Wacker Building is owned by Oliver Tyrone Corp.

Knaack said he is also a Realtor. He is the owner of the Arlington Travel Agency, in Arlington Heights. He and Mrs. Knaack operate Lynn's Hallmark Shop in the Evergreen Shopping Center in Arlington Heights. They plan to open Karen's Hallmark Shop in McHenry late this summer.

$9.5 Billion Spent On Repairs Of Homes

Owner-occupants of single family homes last year spent about $9.5 billion in repair, maintenance and improvement, said Kenneth M. Gunsteens, president of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors.

This indicates the high quality of most existing homes on the market, he added, as the peak buying season of the year arrives. Some reports of a tightening mortgage market should not deter home seekers since sales prices have been increasing 6 to 7 per cent per year, making post-purchase a costly decision.

August is traditionally one of the prime months for home purchases, he said. Most families try to schedule their moves in the summer so as not to interrupt the school year. Many military and corporate transfers take place during the summer as well, Gunsteens said.

Although new construction is proceeding at an annual rate of 2 million units, two to three times as many families will be choosing existing single-family homes, according to the National Association of Real Estate Boards, Gunsteens said.

An investment in an existing single-family home is a sound one for several reasons, Gunsteens said. An existing home has proven itself, he said. If it had any flaws, they have likely been corrected and it probably has many of the extras families desire, such as improved landscaping, fencing, patios — items that must be added to new homes.

There is a wider choice of styles and

Andejeski Named Project Counsel

Ralph Andejeski

Chicago Title Insurance Co. has formed a new Construction Loan Disbursement Department in the Cook County Operations area of Illinois Title Operations.

Ralph E. Andejeski, 207 E. St. James Court, Arlington Heights, has been named project counsel in the new department.

The new department includes the current Extended Coverage Department of Illinois Title Operations and two new units — the engineering unit and disbursement payout unit. It will satisfy a demand from major construction lenders in the Chicago area for two basic services: insurance against mechanics' liens and a guarantee of completion.

Andejeski joined Chicago Title in 1966 and has had extensive experience within various units of the Illinois Title Operations. He was appointed assistant secretary in Dec., 1964 and was named extended coverage counsel in March, 1968.

Andejeski was graduated from Xavier University with a B.S. degree in 1963 and received a J.D. degree from Loyola University in 1966. He is a member of the Illinois Bar.

Richard R. Williams

Richard R. Williams of Arlington Heights was recently appointed vice president of Robert W. Starck & Co., Realtors. He is also the manager of the firm's main office in Mount Prospect.

Williams has been with Starck over three years. He qualified as a member of the million dollar sales club by early September of his second year with the firm and is working toward a two million dollar goal at the conclusion of this year.

Born and raised in the Chicago area, Williams had previously been employed with the Retailers Commercial Agency (a credit investigating firm) for 22 years.

He and his wife, Jaqueline, and three daughters have lived in Arlington Heights for eight years.

Starck & Co. also has offices in Schaumburg and Arlington Heights. The company is a member of Inter-City Relocation Service, Inc., a national referral service.

locations available from which to choose when purchasing an existing single-family home since there are two to three times as many existing homes in the inventory as new ones, according to Gunsteens.

Gunsteens said there are four prime in-redients in selecting a home: whether it fits the needs of the family, what architectural style it will be, what type of neighborhood is desired, and what financing is available on the best terms. He said a Realtor can blend these ingredients in home ownership.

ria. Mrs. Sunagel and her husband, August have six children. They live at 203 S. Prindle Avenue in Arlington Heights.

Mrs. Ryan of 122 North Regency Drive East, Arlington Heights, has been active in local real estate for over a year. Establishing a sales reputation in that short period of time, according to Kamps. She has studied real estate at the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors course and was a sales representative for two book publishers for several years.

"We are most pleased to have Mrs. Currie, Mrs. Sunagel and Mrs. Ryan with our organization," Kamps said. "Our Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect area office has made substantial sales progress in the two years since we joined the Q & T organization and we expect further progress with these staff additions."

Postwar High In New Apartments

Permits for apartments reached a new postwar high for the month of July in the Chicago metropolitan area, according to the Bell Federal Savings Survey of New Building.

The reported number of apartment permits reached 3,098 up 32 per cent from the 2,336 recorded in July 1970. The most significant gain occurred in the unincorporated areas which reported 568 last month compared to 99 a year ago.

Apartment permits issued during July in the Northwest Suburbs include: Arlington Heights, 8; Buffalo Grove, 64; Des Plaines, 12; Palatine, 272; and Schaumburg, 2.

The survey also reported single family homes rising to a total of 1,993, an increase of 32 per cent over the 1,507 recorded in July 1970. Similarly, the greatest increase was noted in the unincorporated areas for single units which totaled 387 in July 1971 from the 234 reported a year ago, an increase of 56 per cent. Total housing, including single and multiple dwellings, increased 32 per cent, rising from 3,843 to 5,091 last month, according to the Bell Survey.

Year to date apartment volume, for the first 7 months of 1971, totaled 19,026 while 13,196 was reported for the same period last year.

Single-family permits, for this same 7 month period, nearly doubled last year rising to 13,350 from 7,065.

Leaders in single-family home building for 1971 are as follows: Bolingbrook, 784 permits; Schaumburg, 588; Hoffman Estates, 441; Streamwood, 392; Tinley Park, 357; Wheaton, 325; Arlington Heights, 293; Bloomingdale, 279; Downers Grove, 193; and Naperville, 174.

Permits for all new housing for the first seven months of 1971 totaled 32,376, 59 per cent above the 20,251 units reported during the comparable months of 1970.

New Home Cost Less to Build

Despite inflation, the average new home cost less to build and was priced lower last year than in 1969.

The reason, according to the United States Savings and Loan League, is that builders are putting up smaller, less expensive homes in an attempt to appeal to larger numbers of potential buyers.

The league's 1971 Savings and Loan Fact Book, a 144-page volume now being distributed to schools, libraries and people with a special interest in housing, notes that the average cost of constructing a single-family dwelling in 1970 fell to $18,500 from 1969's high of $19,225. This was the first such decline since 1958.

The league is the industry's leading trade association and its member-institutions make more home loans than anyone else.

"Reflecting the decline in average construction costs, the median sales price of new single-family homes fell significantly from mid-1969 through the end of 1970," the Fact Book went on. After reaching a peak of $26,900 in May, 1969, the median sales price of new, single-family homes fell to only $22,300 in December, 1970."

For 1970 as a whole, the league publication continued, the number of homes priced at less than $25,000 increased to 259,000 from 202,000 in the preceding year.

This represented 58 per cent of all homes sold in 1970, up from 52 per cent of all homes sold in 1969. The League added that this "indicates that the residential construction industry appears to be responding to the various demographic, sociological and economic factors which have created the need for lower-cost housing."

But the Fact Book also noted that while builders are keeping prices down by building smaller houses, construction and land costs generally are continuing to rise at an inflationary rate. "The price of land has advanced strongly over the years, and is expected to continue upward," the book concluded. "Each year, more builders attempt to maximize land use to produce co-ordinated developments containing a combination of single-family homes, townhouses and garden apartments."

As for land costs, it said the average price of building lots for new one-family homes underwritten by the Federal Housing Administration rose from $1,035 in 1950 to $5,000 in 1970. During 1970, it said the price of the average lot increased by $735.00, the largest percentage increase on record.

Savings Inflows Reverse Pattern

The United States Savings and Loan League recently reported on major money flows at savings associations during July.

Deposit changes at savings associations moved against the usual July trend by running up a gain of $1.4 billion, an increase that contrasts sharply with the usual loss or minor rise in savings typical for the month.

Associations responded to the strong increase in deposits by maintaining their mortgage closings and acquisitions above the $4.1 billion level.

These are the major trends developed from the sample group of 564 associations reporting to the United States Savings and Loan League. This sample group held 32 per cent of the total assets of the business.

Over the years, savings deposits at savings and loans have contracted by as much as $1.5 billion in July, or at best have shown minor increases generally in the low millions. Typically, the failure of savings to grow in July can be traced to the rise in withdrawals that follows the crediting of mid-year earnings. New deposits frequently fail to match rising withdrawals. This usual pattern was reversed last month. New deposits moved up while withdrawals receded to a four-year low.

After some tapering off in savings gains in June, many expected that July would give evidence of a further slackening in savings growth at associations. But this development did not materialize.

The strength in savings can be seen in the seasonally adjusted rate. Savings grew in July at the seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.6 billion, up from the $20 billion of June, but off from the $36 billion rate for April.

July's record gain in deposits will provide strength in the mortgage market over the balance of the summer months. The third quarter of the year sees a contrasting movement in savings and mortgage lending. Lending climbs while deposit growth moderates, largely because of the poor results of July. Frequently the third quarter of the year sees little or no growth in the total deposits of associations.

In the third quarter of 1969, for example, August and September gains did not overcome July's loss of deposits. In the more favorable third quarter of last year, deposit growth provided associations with $2.9 billion. Last month's gain amounted to half that for the full third quarter gain of 1970. July's strong gain coupled with the anticipated increases for August and September and rising loan repayments should keep associations well supplied with funds in the coming months, the report said.

Loan closings in July of $4.1 billion topped the $2.1 billion of a year ago by 97.6 per cent. The total lending volume for the first seven months of the year climbed to $21.3 billion, a volume equal to that of the full 12 months of 1970.

Paving The Way For Lower Rates

Lewis S. Eaton, president of the United States Savings and Loan League, said he was confident that the "overwhelming majority of savings institutions" will exercise restraint in interest rate decisions during the current wage-price freeze.

The league represents 4,000 savings and loan associations with resources in excess of $175 billion. These institutions are the nation's principal residential mortgage lenders.

Eaton's statement was released in response to a request by Treasury Secretary J. Connally that financial institutions "voluntarily keep interest low."

Eaton continued, "We have already informed our members that the federal government expects no increases in interest rates for the duration of the 90-day freeze. Inflation has been the major concern of the savings and loan business in recent years and has been one of the reasons that interest rates have risen as rapidly as they have. We welcome the new determination on the part of the Administration to reduce the threat of inflation and we believe that the overwhelming majority of savings institutions will exercise restraint in interest rate decisions and cooperate thereby with the spirit of the President's new program."

"The reaction of the bond markets since the President's announcement suggests that there is some lessening under way of the upward pressure on interest rates already," Eaton said. "As more of the impact of the President's program begins to be felt and as inflation psychology recedes in the country, this may pave the way for a somewhat lower level of long-term interest rates."

"It should be recognized, however, that long-term mortgage rates are only part of the long-term debt market and that these home loan rates are currently lower than the rates on long-term obligations. Probably a drop in mortgage rates will await a further, substantial decline in corporate bond rates," Eaton concluded.

Mortgage Debts Are Moving Up

The nation's construction industry has a foundation of its own in the ability to borrow money according to Durand A. Holladay, of Continental Mortgage Investors, Boston, Mass.

Continental Mortgage, has made more than $1 billion in mortgage loans since 1962. Holladay is also chairman and managing trustee of Diversified Mortgage Investors, a Boston-based multi-specialty real estate trust which has made more than $400 million in mortgage loans since beginning operations in late 1969.

"The total outstanding mortgage debt for the nation is currently about $484.9 billion. This includes long and short-term mortgage loans which have been made to developers, home buyers, commercial property owners, as well as commercial and residential builders," Holladay said.

The present $484.9 billion is up 31.09 per cent from the $445.8 billion in 1970, which, in turn, was 38.52 per cent above the $425.3 billion mark of 1969, he said. "Based on present rates and trends, the total outstanding mortgage debt should reach $632.06 billion by 1975," said Holladay.

The traditional role of mortgage lenders in the U. S. continues to expand each year.

"Savings and loan associations have historically been the major source of funds for home mortgages," Holladay said. "S&Ls' lending activities have increased since 1964 at an annual rate of 6.5 per cent. That rate will remain strong through 1975, although it may settle to a more conservative 6 per cent annual growth."

"The activities of mutual savings banks has increased steadily since 1964 but at a slightly declining rate. The average annual increase has been about 7.2 per cent but projections indicate that the rate may settle to about 4.5 per cent by 1975," he said.

Commercial banks, which participate strongly in both residential and commercial sectors, have shown an annual growth rate since 1964 of 10.5 per cent. Indications are that banks will continue, at least through 1975, to increase lending activities by about 8 per cent annually according to Holladay.

"The pace of commercial construction has eased during the past 18 months, causing lending rates of insurance companies to remain stable, advancing about 6.12 per cent annually," he said. "The outlook through 1975 is for an annual increase of about 4.1 per cent in this sector."

"The government's growing participation in all phases of the housing industry is highly evident. Since 1964, lending activity by all government and government-allied agencies has increased at an average of 27.5 per cent a year. We can expect that activity to increase about 23 per cent annually through 1975," Holladay said.

Other lenders, such as state and local retirement fund and private pension funds, are increasing their lending activities. Since 1964, this group has shown an annual average increase of about 4.7 per cent in lending activities. The rate should pick up to about 5.4 per cent between 1971 and 1975, Holladay said.

Bolger Offers Realty Service

Terence A. Bolger announced the inauguration in Elk Grove Village of a service designed to assist corporate transferees in the sale of their homes and the location of new homes.

According to Bolger, 10 million families a year — 37 million people — change residences each year. Families are initially concerned with selling their present home and being able to move into a new home without delays. He is a member of Inter-City Relocation Service, a not-for-profit real estate referral organization which has been established to serve the transferred executive in his housing needs.

Here is an unusual opportunity to purchase a choice homesite in the northwest suburban's most prestigious, picturesque village for as little as $2400 down. The homesites are a minimum of one acre with boundaries determined by the natural contour of the land to provide a perfect setting for your future home. Architectural approval is required and no two home designs may be alike. Sites vary from $12,000 to $30,000.

Drive out to Inverness today. Our picturesque 4-silo office is open daily on Baldwin Road just west of Northwest Highway (Route 14) between Palatine and Barrington. Also convenient to Northwest Tollway (north from Route 53 exit). Or Call for an appointment, if you prefer.

1,585,000 Veterans In School, Job Training

There were 1,585,000 veterans enrolled in schools and colleges and job training programs under the GI Bill during Fiscal Year 1971.

Donald E. Johnson, administrator of veterans affairs, disclosed this was the highest participation under VA auspices since 1962, and was a 31-per cent increase over Fiscal Year 1970.

Included in the record-breaking 1,585,000 figure were 917,000 veterans studying at the college level which was a 36 per cent hike in college enrollments over FY 1970. The 1,585,000 total also included, 52,000 attending schools below the college level and 148,000 in apprenticeship and job-training programs, Johnson noted.

Sizeable increases were recorded also in two other VA education programs not included in these totals: vocational rehabilitation training for disabled veterans, and educational assistance for wives, widows and children of deceased veterans and/or those permanently and totally disabled. Vocational rehabilitation increased 25 per cent to a total of 30,000 during 1971. Some 60,000 women and children were aided during 1971, a 14-per cent increase over last year.

Total enrollment including veterans, servicemen, wives, widows and orphans came to 1,675,000 a net increase of 30-per cent over the previous year.

$30,000 Low Cost Insurance Provided For Disabled Vets

A new law authorizes the Veterans Administration to provide up to $30,000 worth of low cost mortgage protection life insurance on a group basis for about 10,000 severely disabled veterans.

Administrator of Veterans Affairs Donald E. Johnson said the new law will cover disabled veterans who are recipients of grants for specially adapted housing ("wheelchair homes"). Johnson said the commercial group coverage will automatically insure an eligible veteran unless he elects in writing not to be insured or fails to timely furnish information on which his premium could be based. The premium paid by the disabled veteran will be based on monthly rates of insuring standard lives only with the government paying the "extra risk" portion and the administrative costs.

Johnson noted that VA makes grants for wheelchair homes (equipped with ramps, etc.) of not more than 50 per cent of their cost, up to a maximum of $12,500. The veteran usually may obtain a VA guaranteed loan for the balance.

He explained that "it is this unpaid balance on the first mortgage, excluding delinquent payments, that the mortgage life insurance would pay off should the veteran die before his debt is retired."

Information on the insurance, including sample premiums and application and declaration forms, will be mailed to eligible veterans within 60 days. He pointed out, however, that these veterans were automatically insured when the President signed the bill on August 11, 1971.

Premiums for the mortgage protection can be deducted from the monthly compensation the veteran receives from the agency. "Premiums will be lower than the veteran would pay a commercial insurer," the VA chief pointed out.

Dads, when's the last time you sat down with your son and honestly worked on a project together? If you're like me and most other fathers with young sons, you're probably too busy playing golf, watching your favorite game on TV, keeping up with the Joneses socially or what have you. Sure the boys have all sorts of things to keep their spare time occupied all year round, but why not get started with them on a model aviation project right now. It could be a simple "Paper & Stick" type model. (The type that you may have built as a young lad.) We have a good selection of these starting at 69¢. Or it could be a Contraline Model using that old 1/2 A motor your son has kicking around. We can even set you up with a Complete Radio Control Outfit for less than $100.00.

THE PRODUCTION system at the Cockrell Vending Services plant in Schaumburg interested a group of 32 Japanese visitors who plan to use vending machines in Japan. Matthew Cockrell of Rolling Meadows, owner of the plant, is showing the commissary process.

Machine Brewed Saki Coming Up?

The Cockrell Vending Service Inc. facility in the Plum Grove Industrial Park, Schaumburg was toured by a group of visitors from Japan recently.

Matthew Cockrell, owner, said many of the firm's innovations appeared new to the Japanese.

The group was composed mainly of small business owners from Japan interested in placing vending machines in their facilities.

According to S. Nishi, of the Japan Mono Corporation in Chicago, sponsors of the tour, vending machines are not widely used in Japan. However, rising labor costs may change this condition.

Cockrell, with the help of an interpreter explained the vending operation and the plant's method of re-manufacturing machines to keep them up-dated.

The Cockrell vending commissary proved most interesting to the group. The process of preparing, wrapping and sealing of foods for vending machines seemed totally new to the group, he added.

Cockrell was surprised to find the group unfamiliar with the use of refrigerated delivery trucks.

The re-manufacturing of the machines, where worn parts are replaced also interested the Japanese, said Cockrell.

Cockrell's company remanufactures a machine a day on a year round basis to keep every vending machine up to date.

The Japanese are in the United States for a two week tour that began in San Francisco. They plan to visit other vending operations across the states.

16,000 Pounds Of Cement Make A Boat

When a man decides to build a $35,000 50-foot concrete boat, he needs a lot of skill, a bit of patience and about 16,000 pounds of cement.

"That's about how much we used," said Jack Voeller, the man who made the decision to try his hand at shipbuilding. Work on the boat that will eventually weigh nearly 20 tons began last December. Recently it took nine people about nine hours to cement the boat's decks.

"We used a special mixture, spreading it on like plaster," explained Voeller. "The hull and decks are finished. Now you can walk on the main deck and go down into the hole."

STRIPPING OUT the wooden molds and working on the vessel's interior are the next steps for the amateur ship-builder. "It's just like building the inside of a house," Voeller said.

When he's not working on the outside of the boat which he and his wife plan to make their permanent home in about eight years, he's making furniture for the inside. The vessel will include three carpeted staterooms with six berths, a galley, four closets, book shelves, two bathrooms and a shower.

During the warm weather Voeller spends a lot of time working on his nautical project, now dry-docked at 400 River Rd. in unincorporated Mount Prospect. But soon winter will set in.

"That won't bother me," said Voeller. "I'll just build a little house over the entrance to the hole. It'll be like working inside a building."

State's Cases Increase 132%

There's irony in the definition of the word "venereal," as in venereal disease. It grows out of the name of Venus, the goddess of love.

"Of or pertaining to venery or sexual love," the dictionary says. "... relating to sexual intercourse." But these are unlovely illnesses — serious illnesses which can lead to blindness, mental deterioration, crippling, heart disease or even death.

Worse, the incidence of VD is rising in frightening degree. And there is one brutal fact which cannot be ignored: It is affecting not only prostitutes and their patrons, but thousands of young people — middle-class teenagers and young adults under the age of 30.

It doesn't make pretty reading. It would be nice if it didn't have to be written. But health authorities are deeply concerned, because eradication programs aren't working. The authorities feel that progress can be made only when the public — and that includes teen-agers — is fully informed.

Thus, here is a comprehensive review of what has been called the nation's most serious communicable disease problem.

Q—What is venereal disease?

A—A communicable disease which is spread from person to person by intimate contact. "VD," as it is generally called, usually refers to syphilis and gonorrhea in this country. A number of other venereal diseases are common elsewhere in the world, but occur infrequently in the United States.

Q—Why hasn't penicillin brought VD under control?

A—It is ironic that since we have found an effective treatment in penicillin, the disease continues to flourish instead of declining. Fifty years ago, VD was universally feared. It was common knowledge that it required a prolonged course of painful treatment, and those whose cases were not recognized faced permanent crippling and death.

However, with the discovery of penicillin during World War II, people became less concerned because they felt there was a "quick cure" if they became infected. There was a de-emphasis of public education on venereal disease, and the attitude toward it became matter-of-fact. As a result, VD now tops the list of our communicable disease problems.

Q—What is syphilis?

A—The disease dates back to antiquity. Some called it "pox" or "the great pox" to distinguish it from small pox. It has been called lues, an old word for pestilence. The modern name derives from a poem written by an Italian physician in the 16th Century, in which one of the characters was called Syphilis. In the poem, he was afflicted with the then-prevalent venereal disease which now bears his name. The disease, one which affects the whole body, is caused by a corkscrew-shaped organism called a spirochete.

Q—What are the signs of infection?

A—The first signs develop within 10 days to three weeks after sexual relations with an infected person. An ulcerating, but painless, sore appears on the sex organs or elsewhere on the body. There is usually some swelling of the lymph nodes in the groin. The primary lesion is more easily detected in males than in females, since in females it may be hidden within the vaginal area, on the cervix.

Although the presence of syphilis at this early stage does not always show up in blood tests, doctors can confirm diagnosis through microscopic studies.

The next stage occurs from one to three months later. There is a generalized, non-itching eruption, often involving the palms of the hands and the soles of the feet. There may be other symptoms, such as sore throat, pain in the joints, and some loss of hair. If the disease is not treated at this stage, the rash and the other symptoms subside. This is very misleading to the patient, who believes — falsely — that he has recovered. What has actually happened is that the disease has gone into a latent phase, during which time severe and permanent damage may result.

Q—Can one have syphilis and not know it?

A—Yes. The painless cancre may go unnoticed, or may be considered nothing more serious than a cold sore on the lip. Since the cancre will heal by itself, whether it is treated or not, the patient may believe he is cured when it disappears.

Q—What happens when a person is not treated?

A—The germs of syphilis may remain hidden in the body for as long as 10 or more years before any damage appears. Suddenly, the patient may become crippled, develop heart symptoms, blood vessel disease or blindness, or show mental symptoms. He may even die.

Q—Can a pregnant woman pass syphilis on to her unborn child?

A—Yes. The micro-organisms which cause the disease can pass through the interlocking blood streams of the mother and baby. When this happens, the child may be deformed or may be born dead.

Q—Can the child be protected against the infection?

A—Yes. Most states now require that a pregnant woman have a blood test early in pregnancy so that she may be treated if syphilis is present. This protects the infant from congenital syphilis if adequate doses of penicillin are given the mother during the first 18 weeks of pregnancy. Treatment in later stages cannot correct the changes in the unborn baby's bones and teeth, but it can cure the active disease and prevent further damage.

Q—Is there a simple test for syphilis?

A—Yes. There are several, of which the Wassermann test is perhaps the best known. Many states require such a test before a marriage license is issued. The various tests, all of which reliably identify a substance present in the blood of persons with syphilis, are collectively referred to as STS: serological tests for syphilis.

Q—Are these tests always accurate?

A—They are not infallible. Both false positive and false negative results occur in a small percentage of cases. However, the STS are a great aid in diagnosis and in case-finding by population screening, especially when they are accompanied by a physical examination.

Q—What would contribute to a false positive test?

A—The false positive has been associated with smallpox vaccinations and various other immunizations, certain acute infections and on occasion, with other disorders. These associations are unusual, however, and the correct diagnosis can be determined by careful examination, a detailed patient history and repeated or special laboratory tests.

Q—What is gonorrhea?

A—It is another communicable venereal disease which is caused by a gonococcus, a micro-organism shaped like a coffee bean. The germ produces an acute inflammation of the genital and urinary tracts.

Q—What are the signs of this disease?

A—Painful, burning sensation is felt when the bladder is being emptied. There is a discharge from the sex organs. The symptoms commonly occur within three to nine days after exposure, and are less discernible in women than in men. As in syphilis, the acute symptoms of gonorrhea may disappear with or without treatment, but permanent damage may be done to the reproductive organs and the urinary tract.

Q—Can the gonococcus affect the eyes?

A—This can happen when an infected person rubs his eyes with his fingers. By law, silver nitrate drops or penicillin must be placed in the eyes of all newborn infants to prevent gonorrheal eye infection, a requirement which has virtually eliminated this condition in the newborn.

Q—Can a person acquire gonorrhea by other than sexual contact?

A—There is a very slight chance that this could happen. Once outside the body, the gonococcus germ dies quickly; thus there is little possibility of accidental infection by external contacts as in public washrooms.

Questions & Answers For Family Health

As a Public Service, The Herald offers its readers these answers to many common questions people have about health and medicine. All material has been approved by The Illinois Medical Association and The California Medical Association.

Telltale Signs Of Infection

Q—What should a person do if he or she suspects venereal infection?

A—Prompt medical treatment is absolutely essential because of the contagious nature of the disease and the potential harm to the infected person. All medical records are confidential, though it is most important that public health authorities receive the names of contacts, so that they themselves can be treated.

Q—Will the Wassermann test detect gonorrhea?

A—No. There are separate tests for each of the diseases.

Q—What is the usual treatment for VD?

A—Current treatment emphasizes the use of penicillin as the antibiotic of choice. Patients who are sensitive to penicillin may be treated with other antibiotics. Some strains of gonococci have developed a resistance to penicillin, but cures are still possible by using massive doses of penicillin or other antibiotics.

Q—Is the prostitute primarily responsible for the spread of VD?

A—There was a time when the prostitute was the key figure in sexual promiscuity and the spread of VD — but not any more. Most cases of VD today are found in middle-class teenagers and young adults under 30.

Q—What can parents do to educate their children on the hazards of promiscuous behavior?

A—Sex education should be a matter of gradual home education which begins very early in childhood and continues through the school years. Obviously, not all sexual behavior in youth can be controlled by parents, teachers, physicians, ministers and other counselors. But certainly one factor can — and that is ignorance. Both teen-agers and parents must learn how to recognize evidence of venereal infection and what to do about it. They should know the dangers of promiscuity, association with infected persons, and of ignoring an infection.

They should be aware of treatment facilities, and should, most certainly, cooperate with health authorities in reporting the identity of sexual contacts so that the spread of VD can be curbed.

IMPORTANT: If you have further questions, consult your own physician.

'Chief' Watchetaker, A Rainmaker

by TOM TIEDE

ELGIN, Okla. — (NEA) — When George Watchetaker stands up to make rain, everybody laughs. Dressed in Comanche Indian tradition, his face streaked with colored paint, he starts moving around on the steaming black-top like he has a burr in his britches. Up, down, this way and that. He shouts, sings, mumbles and groans. And as a windup he spits to the north, south, east and west.

Then he stops. Giggles, giggles. And then, by God, no fooling, it rains.

In a nation which has suffered an uncommon amount of dry weather lately (22 states are having either moderate or severe drought), George Watchetaker is as absurd but nonetheless as welcome as a Nor'easter out of Oklahoma. Full-blooded Comanche, and looking every drop of it, he has been called on twice this spring to make rain — and done it, for all to see and witness, both times.

In Wichita Falls, Tex., at the invite of the local newspaper, he brought moisture to one of the driest cities in the nation. And hardly had observers (and doubt-founded meteorologists) gotten over that than he traveled to a South Florida shopping center where, billed as Chief-Rain-in-the-Face, the phenomenon prevailed again.

"YOU SHOULD have seen their faces in Florida," Watchetaker (pronounced Wa-che-gukey) says, rubbing his hands. "None of them believed I could do it. That's the way some people are. They have no faith. Then I did my ritual. And I stepped back. 'George' they shouted, 'where's the rain?' Then there was a plop...plop...plop, plop, ploploploplop. Man, all the windshield wipers got going, and the ceent got slick and shiny and everybody rushed over to me. 'George,' they said, 'how did you do it, George, how did you ever make it rain for us?'

Well, says the Indian, "actually I didn't do it, the Great Spirit did."

George Watchetaker, 55, is no fraud. He's genuine. He's no miracle worker, he doesn't know a cumulus cloud from a cactus bristle, he never promises anything, and most emphatically, he has no uncanny powers, either real or imagined. He says he simply knows how to pray: "You call him God, somebody else may call him Buddha or Allah. I call him the Great Spirit. He's one in the same for us all. He's the same one who makes the trees grow and the winds blow and the rain fall. I believe in Him. I think most people do. So when I ask for rain I am not working any magic. I am asking for Him to help me, to help my people, to help the land and the flowers and the animals. Sometimes, when all of these things are deserving, the Great Spirit grants the prayer."

ALL OF THIS, for some, may be a bit hard to swallow. But there seems no doubt George Watchetaker believes it. He is not so pious as he sounds, but he says he is devoted to certain fundamentals of religion. "You see," he says, "Indians have had their religions long as the white man has had his. Once the white man called our religion heathen or savage. Now we are trying to show that the religion has been pretty close to the white man's all along. Only one difference: Indians practice what they preach; the white man sometimes doesn't."

Watchetaker indeed practices what he preaches. Otherwise, like so many angry

Indians today, he'd be out on the social warpath. Born in a tent under the scrutiny of Fort Sill Indian agents, he remembers being spanked in school if he ever spoke his native Comanche language.

He grew up among men and women whose once fierce spirit had been broken by government paternalism and mismanagement. He was cuffed about by Indians who would drink for lack of anything else to do. He was housed in a shack, fed with federal surplus, and poor from his first breath on. Even his name is the stuff of privation; he says it means "go run good" and roots to the day when grandmother hid in the fields from a cavalry raiding force.

Yet there seems little bitterness about him. He is no milkop to be sure ("I learned a long time ago I either had to be Indian or white man and I damn sure didn't want to be white"), but he has no open wounds. He knows people chuckle at his rain ritual, he has even accepted them calling him "chief," but he endures it for two reasons: One, some money and notoriety ("everybody likes to be famous") and, two, "Maybe I have a chance here to teach the white man some Indian tradition."

The teaching is as simple as George Watchetaker is simple: Never ask for things needed or not. And most importantly: "Have some faith. You white people have lost all your confidence. Like in this drought. Why do you need to hire Indians? If you haven't forgotten how to pray, do it yourself. The Great Spirit will listen — even to white men."

DEAR DR. LAMB: Would you please write about scabs. What causes them? If they are not treated will they become malignant? What treatment is recommended?

Dear Reader: These are scaly round or oval spots that develop on the surface of the skin. They occur most often on the face, back of the hands and on the trunk of the body. They can have a brown, gray or yellowish scablike appearance. The scab covers an area of skin where the oily skin glands have been particularly troublesome. Apparently the skin of some people is inherently more susceptible to these than in others.

Steven J. DeHaven, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. DeHaven, 713 S. Elmhurst Rd., Mount Prospect, is one of almost 700 cadets who graduated recently at the U. S. Air Force Academy in Colorado. The characteristic of the skin is probably more important than age since they can occur even in younger years. Some skin specialists now simply call them keratosis, omitting the term scab (possibly because some skin specialists also had them and didn't care for the designation of scab). They are more frequent in middle age and beyond.

Very often the scab appears where the skin has been injured, such as from a razor nick. Exposure of the skin to sun and wind contributes to the development of keratosis. That is why they are most frequently noted on the hands and face.

Yes, if not treated they can become malignant. They will not go away without treatment, but they are easily removed. There are a number of salves that remove the spots by a "chemical burn." I think all of these should be seen by a doctor and removed. If it is already malignant then it must be treated like a skin cancer and may require surgical excision.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I read your article which said that acne scars can be removed. I went to a plastic surgeon and he told me he could not help me because I have dark skin and if he sanded my face it would leave marks on my face. Can you help me? I just don't feel right this way.

Dear Reader: I have answered your letter because it points up an important problem in removing scars from skin. The process works best in very light-skinned people. The removal of a layer of skin gives it a lighter pink color which makes it very noticeable in individuals with any appreciable amount of pigment in their skin. A good plastic surgeon can tell you on an individual basis if you can get improvement or not. I suspect the doctor you have seen knew what he was talking about and gave you good advice. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Please send your questions and comments to Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D., Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. While Dr. Lamb cannot answer individual letters, he will answer letters of general interest in future columns.

The Lighter Side

Everyone Responds To 'Sacrifice'

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To me, the most beautiful thing about the current economic crisis is the way everyone has responded to President Nixon's call for "sacrifices."

Virtually every segment of the economy has exhibited a willingness to sacrifice something for the commonwealth. Business leaders, for example, are willing to sacrifice labor, and labor leaders are willing to sacrifice business.

It truly warms the heart to see so much altruism.

Wall Street's reaction to the wage-price freeze typified the sacrificial spirit abroad in the land. Making of the stock market a sacrificial altar, investors performed so many acts of self-deprivation they pushed the Dow Jones industrial average to a record one-day gain.

THEN CAME the statesman-like reaction of AFL-CIO President George Meany, who urged the 13 million union members he represents to sacrifice any labor contracts containing frozen wage increases.

And should further self-denial be needed, Meany suggested that the workers engage in sacrificial strikes.

Setting a pattern for sacrifices by consumers across the nation was Mrs. Virginia Knauer, Nixon's special assistant for consumer affairs.

No sooner had the President announced the wage-price freeze than Mrs. Knauer announced she was going to buy a new car and have her kitchen remodeled.

My wife, in particular, was impressed by Mrs. Knauer's example. She immediately headed for a furniture store to make a sacrificial purchase of a couple new chairs.

Although it has been only a week since Nixon enunciated his new economic policy, the entire country already is awash in an ever-rising tide of sacrificial activity. In some cases, more than awash.

GOVERNMENT agencies that have charge of administering the wage-price freeze are veritably swamped with petitions for sacrificial exemptions.

The new 10 per cent surcharge on imported goods also has inspired an outbreak of nobility.

For instance, Scotch drinkers, who are notoriously public-spirited, are sacrificially buying up just about every bottle in sight that was imported before the new impost was imposed.

Current supplies of other imported goods probably won't be on the shelves long either. So if you fancy such merchandise, I'd advise you to make a quick trip to your dealer before the sacrificers get it all.

Two key words for veterans and dependents, "compensation" and "pension," are often used interchangeably, but their official meanings are vastly different.

COMPENSATION, the Veterans Administration explains, is paid because of a disability or death that resulted from military service.

PENSION, on the other hand, is paid on the basis of need to wartime veterans or their dependent survivors when the veteran is totally and permanently disabled from causes not traceable to military service, or when he dies of such causes.

Payments for compensation may go to a veteran. If he has been disabled by an injury or a disease that originated or was aggravated while he was in active military service. When death results from military service or from a service connected disability after service, compensation payments go to the veteran's unmarried widow or dependents whose incomes fall below levels set by law. The amount of the pension varies with the recipient's income from other sources.

Payments for pension may be made to eligible veterans or surviving dependents. Income from other sources is not considered.

Information on these benefits and other Veterans Administration programs may be obtained from any VA office.

IN ANOTHER action:
The Veterans Administration reminded families of veterans and servicemen that it is a good idea to keep abreast of the new benefits and programs provided for them.

Citing one example, the veteran's agency explained that wives and children of veterans (permanently and totally disabled because of service-connected disabilities) are now eligible for educational benefits.

It was noted, too, that wives and children of servicemen (missing in action or prisoners of war for more than 90 days) have schooling benefits available to them. Furthermore, widows and children of veterans (who died as the result of service-connected disabilities) are also eligible for educational help.

VA-GUARANTEED home loans are available to wives of missing and/or POW servicemen and for unremarried widows of veterans whose deaths were service-connected.

VA also pointed out that widows and minor children may receive two types of monthly payments—dependency and indemnity (DIC) (if the veteran's death was service-connected), or pension payments, if his death was non-service-connected. In certain cases, VA said, parents may be eligible for DIC checks.

Wives and children, or whoever is the designated beneficiary, are entitled to the veteran's or serviceman's life insurance proceeds upon his death.

Exempting insurance payments and service-connected disability or death, most VA benefits are based on at least 90 days of military service by the veteran or serviceman. Post Korean and Vietnam era veterans and servicemen must have at least 181 days of service to qualify for GI home loans and educational benefits.

Full details on these and other veteran's benefits are available from any VA office or veteran's service organization representative.

SOAR with the Scouts

America the beautiful is in danger of disappearing under the garbage. Every year our citizens get rid of seven million cars, 100 million tires, 20 million tons of paper, 24 billion bottles and 48 billion cans. Some of it is thoughtfully disposed of, but a lot of it is just dumped or flushed.

The Scouts don't have the whole answer, but they have part of it.

Project SOAR Save Our American Resources.

SOAR is a thought-out, thorough, year-long program for Scouts and Cubs. It's anti-litter, anti-pollution, pro-land, pro-water, pro-air.

The Scouts have the program and the manpower they need. They are now looking to you for some manpower and dollarpower.

Pot Luck

Italians are noted for their warm hospitality and love of the good life, so next time you're planning an old-fashioned potluck supper, when friends and family gather for good food and good times, set the mood with Italian-style food.

Italian Style

Team up coffee ice cream, a chocolate cereal crust and aerosol whipped cream and you have an out of this world cool and frosty pie — Frozen Chocolate Mocha Dessert. It's an ideal recipe to add to the repertoire of busy hostesses with its make-ahead convenience.

The crunchy rocky-road crust, made from semi-sweet chocolate pieces, a little butter, crushed corn flakes and miniature marshmallows, is the perfect contrasting texture for the scoops of creamy coffee ice cream. Shape the crust in a 9 1/2 inch fluted metal tart pan — available now as a premium from Reddi-Whip.

About half an hour before dessert time, remove the tart pan sides and transfer pie to the refrigerator to soften. At serving time, garnish gloriously with giant puffs of Reddi-Whip, around and on top.

Readers interested in receiving the B.I.A. Cordon Bleu tart pan for all kinds of dessert fun may send $1 plus red lock tab from Reddi-Whip cap with address and zip code to Reddi-Whip, P. O. Box 828, Fullerton, Calif., 92638.

FROZEN CHOCOLATE MOCHA DESSERT

1 (6 ounce) package semi-sweet chocolate pieces

2 tablespoons butter

2 cups corn flakes, coarsely crumbled

1 cup miniature marshmallows

1 pint coffee ice cream

1 (7 ounce) can aerosol whipped cream

Melt chocolate and butter in top of double boiler over hot (not boiling) water stirring constantly. Add corn flakes and stir to coat well; reserve 2 tablespoons for garnish. Stir marshmallows into remainder and press evenly and firmly in bottom and up sides of 9 1/2 inch fluted metal tart pan with removable bottom. Either scoop or spread ice cream in shell. Freeze about 2 hours or until firm. One half hour before serving, remove sides of tart pan and place on serving plate; transfer to refrigerator to soften. Flute aerosol whipped cream generously in, around and on top of ice cream. Sprinkle with reserved cereal mixture. Makes 6 servings.

Make Cottage Cheese Salad For Barbecue

It's barbecue time throughout the country again! So, here's a tip for barbecuers. Half the battle of supplying a well-rounded meal in the yard or on the patio on warm evenings is avoided if one or two dishes are prepared ahead of time.

It might be a dessert, or a salad or both, but if you have them ready to serve, cooking your steak, roast, hamburgers chicken or other entree on the grill will be your only task. You'll be assured not only of enjoying it more, but also of providing a well-balanced meal.

This fresh raspberry ring mold centered with a cottage cheese pineapple filling is suggested by home economists at Meadow Gold Dairies as a refreshingly hearty salad which you can prepare early in the day and then keep in the refrigerator until dinnertime. A tip: Add the filling to the mold just before serving so the cottage cheese will not seep into the gelatin.

CHEESE FILLED RASPBERRY RING

- 1 package strawberry flavored gelatin
  - 2 cups boiling water
  - 1 3/4 cups cold water
  - 2 cups frozen red raspberries
  - 3 cups cottage cheese
  - 1 cup pineapple chunks
- Dissolve gelatin in hot water; add cold water and chill until partially thickened. Fold in raspberries and pour into a 1 1/2 quart ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp salad greens. Fill center with cottage cheese and pineapple mixture. Garnish with red raspberries.
- Note: 1 1/4 cups fresh sweetened red raspberries may be used.

Pie Treat Is Peachy

Many fresh fruits discolor rapidly when cut and peeled. For a showy fresh peach pie (or any fruit pie or fruit-based dessert) use an ascorbic acid mixture dissolved in water and brushed on the fruit to keep fruit from turning brown. Peaches, apricots, nectarines, bananas and light-fleshed plums require such quick help to avoid the unappetizing discoloration which really doesn't affect the taste, only the sight, appeal.

PEACH CRUMBLE PIE

- 1 package (3-oz.) vanilla pudding and pie filling
  - 1 1/2 cups milk
  - 2 cups graham cracker crumbs
  - 2 tablespoons sugar
  - 1/3 cup melted butter or margarine
  - 4 to 6 small peaches, halved, pitted and peeled
  - 2 teaspoons Fruit-Fresh mixed with 1/4 cup water
  - 1/2 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
  - 1/4 cup butter or margarine
  - 1 cup finely chopped pecans
- Prepare filling according to package directions using only 1 1/2 cups milk. Cool. Mix crumbs, sugar and melted butter. When well-blended press mixture into the bottom of an ungreased 9-inch pie pan. Chill. Fill pie shell with pudding. Brush peaches with Fruit-Fresh mixture. Place halves rounded side up on top of pie filling. Combine remaining ingredients in a skillet and bring to a boil. Bubble for 2 minutes. Cool. When ready to serve, sprinkle nut mixture over top of pie. This pie also can be prepared using a baked 9-inch pie shell with fluted edge. (Apricots may be substituted for peaches.) Makes one 9-inch pie.

Cereal Treat For Breakfast

Not long ago the rooster's crow often heralded morning. Now it's more likely an alarm clock that wakes us. Other things have changed, too — breakfast, for instance. It's lighter as a rule, and easier and faster to prepare, as in Fruit Spangled Cereal — a colorful combination of Life cereal, fresh pears, strawberries and ice cream.

This oat cereal contains an added amount of protein. There are 5.1 grams in a one-ounce serving (2/3 cup) of this cereal. A one-ounce serving also supplies 100 per cent of the minimum daily requirements for thiamine riboflavin and niacin, plus 15 per cent of the daily iron requirement.

A breakfast of fruit or juice, cereal and milk, bread and spread plus milk to drink starts the day right. Serve Fruit Spangled Cereal with cinnamon toast, milk and coffee, then see for yourself!

FRUIT SPANGLED CEREAL

- 2 2/3 cups Life cereal
- 1 1/2 cups fresh pears, diced
- 1 1/2 cups fresh strawberry slices
- Vanilla Ice Cream

In a tall glass or cereal bowl alternate layers of cereal, pears, strawberries and ice cream. Garnish each serving with a thin pear slice and a strawberry. Makes 4 servings.

Maxi Meatball Sandwich

Lunches and dinners on the run often center around a sandwich not really formal enough to call a main dish, but simply a hearty snack. The Maxi Meatball Sandwich is different though. It's a great deal more than just a hasty sandwich.

Mrs. John A. Flink

She Updates Old Family Recipe

by LOIS SEITLER

Now is the time that Italian prune-plums are in season and can be used so effectively in kuchen — better known, perhaps, as coffee cakes.

Mrs. John A. Flink of 266 N. Eighth Ave., Des Plaines, makes hers from an old family recipe brought to this country from Austria-Hungary by her grandmother many years ago.

"My grandmother made her own yeast dough, but my aunts simplified the recipe by substituting a packaged hot roll mix," Sandy Flink explained.

Easy to make with this convenience food, the dough rises once by itself and then again after being covered with pitted prune plums and sugar. Sour cream is drizzled on top and cinnamon is sprinkled over all.

Whenever parsnips are in season, Sandy makes another of her grandmother's specialties, a Meat and Vegetable Soup.

"It's essential to use all the ingredients called for in this recipe as the omission of any one, especially the parsnips, alters the flavor," she emphasized.

Sandy cooks a large piece of chuck in water first. Then several vegetables are added and, after they are cooked, the broth is strained and used to cook dumplings. Meanwhile, the vegetables and meat are kept warm in the oven.

THE DUMPLINGS are quite unusual as they are made with cream of wheat, and they also absorb the good flavor of the broth.

"Unlike some dumplings that are tricky, these are foolproof," Sandy explained, "and you can even peek under the cover and test for doneness while they are cooking."

"They have a solid texture, and if you over-cook them and they become chewy, they still taste good," she said.

A complete meal-in-one, no flavors or nutrients are lost in this wholesome dinner. Sandy serves the dumplings and broth first, followed by the meat and vegetables. A horseradish or dill sauce or catsup are appropriate condiments with the meat.

If you wish a salad, this good cook suggests leaf lettuce tossed with a sour cream dressing. The dressing is sweet and tastes equally good when mixed with cucumbers or Chinese cabbage.

Sandy grows her own leaf lettuce as well as other vegetables in her garden, all of which she utilizes during the summer months. But cooking is her primary hobby, and her husband calls her an "experimental cook" because she likes to try so many different types of food. With this interest, she and John were "naturals" for membership in their neighborhood Gourmet Progressive Dinner Group. Sandy is also a member of the AAUW and the Northwest Suburban Chi Omega Alumnae Group. The Flinks have two children: a son, Chipper, 5 years old, and a baby daughter, Holly 9 months old.

PLUM KUCHEN

1 package hot roll mix
¼ pound butter
¼ cup granulated sugar
Italian Prune-plums (about 20 to 25, depending on size)
1 to 1½ cups sugar
½ pint sour cream
Cinnamon
Mix packaged roll mix according to

MRS. JOHN FLINK of Des Plaines has taken the work out of Grandmother's Plum Kuchen recipe. Instead of making her own yeast dough the way Grandmother did, Mrs. Flink substitutes a packaged hot roll mix. The dough rises once by itself then again after being covered with pitted prune plums and sugar.

package directions, adding butter and the ¼ cup sugar. Allow to rise.

Cut and pit plums. Thin sour cream slightly with a little milk or cream.

After dough has risen, spread it in a 9 by 13-inch pan and arrange plums, buttery fashion, on top of the dough cut-side up, in rows close together. Sugar according to ripeness of plums, using 1 to 1½ cups depending on taste. Drizzle sour cream over all. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Allow to rise again.

Bake at 400 degrees about 45 minutes. Cake should be golden brown around the edges. Cut in squares to serve. Serves 12.

MEAT AND VEGETABLE SOUP

3-pound piece of chuck with small bone
3 quarts water
2 large onions, studded with several whole peppercorns
2 tablespoons salt
3 large whole carrots

3 large whole parsnips
3 ribs celery, with tops
1 small bunch parsley

3 small turnips

2 small potatoes (optional)

Place meat, salt, onions and water in a pan and simmer, covered, for one hour. Add all vegetables whole and simmer, covered, about another hour or until done. Strain broth and keep meat and vegetables warm while cooking, the following Cream of Wheat Dumplings:

2 egg yolks

1/3 cup oil or melted butter

2/3 cup cream of wheat

Salt

2 egg whites

Beat egg yolks; add oil or melted butter. Stir in cream of wheat and season with salt to taste. Beat egg whites and fold into batter. Let stand 4 to 5 hours before cooking. (Be sure you make this before starting to cook the meat and vegetables.)

Drop dumpling batter by teaspoonsful into hot, strained broth. Cook, covered, until desired softness is reached, 20 to 25 minutes. You may uncover pot at any time and test for doneness.

Serve dumplings in the broth first, followed by the meat and vegetables. Accompany with horseradish or dill sauce or catsup. Serves 4 to 6.

SOUP CREAM DRESSING

1½ tablespoons mayonnaise
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons sugar
½ cup cream
1 tablespoon cider vinegar

Blend mayonnaise, salt and sugar. Add cream slowly and mix well. Add vinegar just before tossing the salad and serving. Dressing is especially good on leaf lettuce, cucumbers or Chinese cabbage.

Ocean Perch French Onion Soup

Sip A Soup Of Seafood

"Soup puts the heart at ease, calms down the violence of hunger, eliminates the tensions of the day, and awakens and refines the appetite."

We heartily agree with this quote from Escoffier, France's most renowned chef. We contend, however, that soup with tender, succulent pieces of fish fillets added is enhanced a thousandfold and becomes heartily enough to not only awaken the appetite but to satisfy it as well.

Ocean Perch French Onion Soup has been such a well-liked recipe that we think it warrants offering again for new homemakers or those who may not have tried it before. This recipe is similar to the original French onion soup recipe as far as flavor is concerned. It has been simplified, however, with packaged onion soup mix for today's busy homemaker (and who isn't?) as well as enhanced with succulent fish for extra heartiness. The Crusty Cheese Slices follow the French version and add to the delight of this unusual soup. For your preparation ease and your family's satisfaction, try Ocean Perch French Onion Soup soon — it's bound to be a repeat entrée that will be asked for again and again.

OCEAN PERCH

FRENCH ONION SOUP

1 pound ocean perch fillets or other fish fillets, fresh or frozen

2 packages (1 3/8 or 1 1/2 ounces each) onion soup mix
5 cups boiling water
Crusty Cheese Slices

Thaw frozen fillets. Skin fillets and cut into 1/2-inch pieces. Add soup mix and fish to boiling water; stir. Cover pan and return to the boiling point. Reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Serve topped with Crusty Cheese Slices. Makes 6 servings.

CRUSTY CHEESE SLICES

6 slices French bread, 1/2-inch thick
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Place bread on a cookie sheet. Brush with butter and sprinkle with cheese and parsley. Toast in hot oven, 400 degrees, for 10 to 12 minutes or until lightly browned. Makes 6 servings.

ITALIAN CHEESE CAKE OR RICOTTA TART

Crust:

1/3 cup soft butter
1/3 cup sugar
3 egg yolks
¼ teaspoon salt
Grated rind of 1 lemon
1½ cups flour

Cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, one at a time. After well blended, add salt and lemon rind. Last add flour, mixing well. When mixture is smooth and well blended remove from bowl and knead several times with the heel of your hand. Wrap in waxed paper and chill for 30 minutes. Meanwhile make filling.

Filling:

5 cups (2½ pounds) Ricotta cheese
4 egg yolks
1½ cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
Grated rind of ½ orange
½ cup chopped white raisins.
½ cup candied citron and orange peel

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. In large mixing bowl combine Ricotta cheese with egg yolks, sugar, vanilla and orange rind, mixing well. Fold in chopped raisins and candied fruit. Butter either a 9-inch flar ring or spring form pan. Roll dough between two sheets of waxed paper to a 12-inch circle. Remove top sheet of waxed paper and flip dough into flar ring or spring form pan. Remove remaining sheet of waxed paper and fit pastry into pan. Pour in filling and trim edges. Bake 45 minutes until filling sets and top browns lightly. Top of crust should also be lightly browned. Remove from oven and cool. When cooled, chill for several hours in refrigerator before serving. Makes one 9-inch tart.

FROZEN ITALIAN CHEESE CAKE (CHEESY TORTONI)

1 cup finely crushed chocolate wafers
½ cup melted butter
1 8-ounce package cream cheese, softened
¾ cup sugar
2 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ teaspoon salt
1 cup whipping cream
¾ cup sugar
1 cup finely chopped seedless raisins, plumped
½ cup quartered maraschino cherries
1 cup chopped pecans

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Crush chocolate wafers in your blender. Combine with melted butter and press firmly into the bottom of a 9-inch spring form pan. Bake for 5 minutes. Cool.

In mixing bowl, cream softened cream cheese with ¾ cup sugar. Add egg yolks one at a time. Then add vanilla and salt, mixing until well blended. In a separate bowl whip cream. Beat egg whites until stiff, gradually add remaining ¼ cup of sugar. Continue beating until stiff peaks form. Fold meringue and whipped cream into cheese mixture. Now fold in fruit and nuts. Turn into pan with crust. Freeze until firm. Garnish with shaved chocolate and halved cherries, if you wish. Makes 9-inch cheesecake.

To Freeze: For longer storage, after the cake is firmly frozen, freezer-wrap, date, label and return to freezer.

To serve when frozen: Remove from freezer one half hour before serving.

SICILIAN CREAM PUFFS

8-10 large cream puffs
1 pound ricotta cheese
¼ cup milk
¼ cup confectioners sugar, sifted
¼ cup finely grated semi-sweet chocolate
12 large red candied cherries, chopped
¼ cup white seedless raisins
1 tablespoon rum
1 4½-ounce container whipped dessert topping

In a large mixing bowl beat cheese until smooth. Add milk and confectioners sugar and continue beating until fluffy. Fold in chocolate, cherries, raisins, and rum, mixing well. Now gently fold in whipped topping and refrigerate until ready to serve. When ready to serve, cut tops from cream puffs and fill with cheese mixture. Serve immediately. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

by CHARLES E. FLYNN

Bill Essery, a descendant of the Cree Nation of Indiana, ranks as one of the most unusual characters I've met. Raccoon, commentator on international affairs, trapper, fishing guide, gourmet cook, and member of the school board at Oka, Ontario, are all descriptive terms for this sharp-eyed and sharp-tongued 46-year-old who knows the Canadian bush as well as you know the back of your hand.

When he learned of my interest in cooking, Bill promptly issued an ultimatum that he desired neither assistance nor suggestion about culinary duties he performed at our daily shore lunches while fishing Lake Kabinakagami from Pine Portage camps.

On a cold and rainy day Bill produced a fish chowder from freshly-caught and filleted wall-eyed pike which is worthy of your consideration. That day it was soul-satisfying.

The dish is called "Kala Moyakka" and prepared in this fashion will serve four hungry people. Bill had a few flares of his own as he prepared the dish over an open wood fire miles from civilization.

FOR YOUR enjoyment this version can be converted to a patio setting and on the first cool evening, try it. You'll need little else but relishes and bread and butter for a filling meal.

In a large kettle boil 6 medium-sized potatoes quartered and 1 large Spanish onion, chopped, for 10 minutes. Add 1½ pounds of chunked fillets of fish (almost any kind will do). Salt and pepper to taste, but be generous with the pepper. Boil until fillets are cooked but not falling apart.

Add 1 cup milk and 2 tablespoons of butter and a No. 303 can of cream style yellow corn. Simmer for 2 to 4 minutes longer and serve while hot.

When Bill prepared Kala Moyakka I suggested floating a very thin slice of onion atop the cup of chowder. That's when I ran afoul of Mr. Essery's temper. However, I still recommend this addition.

A Zesty Bushel Basket Platter

History tells us there were oranges growing around St. Augustine in 1879, thus making Florida's citrus industry almost 400 years old!

Whether they realized it or not, the early Spaniards hence made a valuable contribution to the modern search for the Fountain of Youth. We have learned much about the importance of proper foods in our daily diets to ensure longer, healthier and therefore happier lives, and citrus fruits play no small part in the drama. High in vitamin C content, low in calories, and always delicious whether you purchase citrus in fresh, frozen, chilled or canned form, oranges and grapefruit add nutritional value as well as fine flavor to breakfast, lunch and dinner menus.

One of the most convenient, easiest ways to utilize citrus is with the frozen juice concentrates. Frozen grapefruit juice concentrate imparts refreshingly tart, tingly taste to a recipe for a simple sauce of undiluted concentrate and melted butter or margarine, lightly flavored with garlic. If you have trouble getting your family to eat nutritious vegetables, make hot, cooked fresh, frozen or canned vegetables irresistibly appetizing by serving them with this piquant sauce. A Bushel Basket Platter assortment might consist of cauliflower buds, squash, green beans, carrots, celery, cabbage and mushrooms.

BUSHEL BASKET PLATTER

- 1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
- 3 tablespoons frozen Florida grapefruit juice concentrate, thawed, undiluted
- 1 garlic clove, optional
- 4 cups sliced vegetables, cooked

Melt butter in skillet; add undiluted grapefruit concentrate and garlic clove. Let mixture cook over low heat about 4 minutes. Remove garlic clove and pour over hot cooked vegetables.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Note: Use vegetables in season, such as: cauliflower buds, squash, green beans, carrots, celery, cabbage, mushrooms, etc. Drained canned vegetables or frozen cooked vegetables may also be used.

Chicken-Banana Kabobs

Dim View For Good Nutrition

by JEANNE LESEM

UPI — Poor nutrition feeds on itself. An economics professor writing for a professional journal blames price increases on fruits and vegetables for helping lower consumption of these vitamin-rich foods, which are necessary to good nutrition.

Lowered consumption in turn decreased demand, which led to limited supplies, which led inevitably to even higher prices.

Between 1965-1966, fresh produce prices rose an average of 23 per cent. The cost of individual items rose even more — 50 per cent in the case of cabbage, 43 per cent for grapefruit and 35 per cent for lemons.

This vicious circle and its implications were described by John B. Parrish of the University of Illinois recently in the Journal of Nutrition Education. It is published by the nonprofit Society for Nutrition Education, whose funding has come from such agencies and organizations as the National Institutes of Health, the American Heart Assn., the Nutrition Foundation, Inc., and independent food and drug manufacturers.

The supply - and -demand dilemma is only a small part of the worsening picture. Parrish predicted that our nutritional habits will get worse as our discretionary income gets better.

He also blamed increasing urbanization, diet and health food fads, the snack habit, more eating out and a corresponding decrease in the variety of home-prepared foods.

Farm families and workers moving to cities virtually ended the era of regular Saturday home-delivery of fresh produce, butter, cheese and eggs by small farmers to their urban customers. Even urban families began to give up home gardening as their discretionary income increased.

These days, farmers themselves opt for limited-variety, convenience foods, Parrish wrote. The farmer with a big operation earns enough to buy what he wants in town and the small one is so busy working that there's little time to cook.

Until World War I, about 90 per cent of all food eaten in American homes was prepared there. The present figure is said to range between 55 and 60 per cent.

THAT WOULDN'T be bad if the resulting diet were a balanced one with a fair share of produce rich in Vitamins A and C. According to Parrish, the prewar diet was heavily weighted with green and yellow vegetables, which provide large amounts of both elements, as do many fresh fruits.

By 1940, the decline was well underway. Parrish wrote that annual per capita consumption of fresh fruits slid from 139 pounds in 1940 to only 78 pounds in 1968. Total per capita consumption of vegetables dropped 61.4 per cent between 1945 and 1968.

Americans have filled the gap largely with snack and snack-related foods such as potato and corn chips, nuts, puffed snacks, cracker sandwiches, flavored crackers, pretzels, cheese, cold cuts, hamburgers, hot dogs, barbecue meats, soft drinks and beer.

Restaurant meals also became heavily weighted with high-calories, items that provide ample protein but few if any of the necessary vitamins available in fruit and vegetables.

A trend toward meal skipping also took its toll, Parrish wrote. Meal skipping by teen-agers has been widely publicized, but Parrish quoted one national survey that showed adults were equally remiss. Eleven per cent said they voluntarily skipped the evening meal, 16 per cent habitually skipped breakfast and 29 per cent said they skipped lunch — because they were either too busy or not hungry.

The article added that many nutrients lost this way are not apt to be made up fully in later meals.

Dieting for weight loss or weight maintenance has a similar effect, Parrish noted.

He suggested a double-barreled program to reverse the trend. He would combine massive nutrition education with fortification and enrichment of food for the entire population.

Chicken-Banana Kabobs:

Kabob cookery is too good to be limited to lamb or beef. There are many compatible and colorful combinations of meat, fruit and vegetables that can be assembled on a skewer and grilled with delicious results. And when it comes to easy and attractive summer party fare, kabobs are unbeatable. These Chicken-Banana Kabobs, for instance, are unusual and impressive yet are a snap to make.

The recipe, developed in The R. T. French Company's test kitchen, calls for chunks of boned chicken breasts alternated with bananas and cucumbers. A savory but subtle baste made with an envelope of chicken gravy mix and lemon juice enhances the flavors.

Serve with a Summer Salad Bowl of lettuce and crunchy and complementary Bleu cheese croutons with a simple dressing. Round out the meal with garlic bread, heated on the grill, and for dessert Peach Melba — vanilla ice cream in a peach half topped with raspberry syrup.

This suggested menu is both good eating and balanced to provide servings from each of the Basic Four Food Groups needed daily to maintain good health and energy.

CHEICKEN-BANANA KABOBS

- 1 envelope (1 1/4-oz.) chicken gravy mix
- 1/4 cup oil
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1/4 cup water
- 3 whole chicken breasts, boned and cut in 1-inch squares
- 2 to 3 bananas, cut in 1-inch chunks
- 2 cucumbers, sliced

Stir together contents of envelope of gravy mix, oil, lemon juice, and water. Alternate on 6 skewers chicken, banana, and cucumber. Brush with gravy mixture. Grill over hot coals or broil until done, turning and brushing with gravy mixture frequently. 6 servings.

SUMMER SALAD BOWL

- 1/4 cup salad oil
- 2 tablespoons catchup
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 2 teaspoons instant minced onions
- 2 heads romaine lettuce, washed
- 1 cup Bleu cheese croutons

Combine oil, catchup, vinegar, and onion in a jar and shake vigorously. Break greens into bite-size pieces. Serve dressing over greens mixed with croutons. 6 servings.

Serve The Fairest Of Them All

Wine lovers, whether amateur or connoisseur, are beguiled by the dry white wines of France. Their qualities are fresh, fruity and flavorful. Some oenologists declare the finest white table wines in the world originate from the handkerchief-sized vineyards of France's famed province of Burgundy — Chablis, Pouilly-Fuisee and Montrachet are celebrated whites of this region. But other French wine producing areas are equally famous for their lovely, enchanting white wines — notably Alsace, Bordeaux, the Loire Valley and the Cotes de Provence. For example Alsatian Riesling, the crisp Bordeaux white called Graves and soft and fruity Sancerre or Vouvray from the valley of the Loire.

Because white wines are made without grapeskins, the color of the grape makes no difference — white wines can be made from black grapes. French white wines may be drunk young — also they are particularly favored by epicures because they "marry" happily with a wide range of foods. But these fresh and fair wines also stand alone — it is common in France to serve chilled white wine as an aperitif, a custom which many Americans have adopted.

During the summer months, French white wines are more in demand than ever. For one reason, they are always served chilled (but never icy cold). For another they set fish and other light entrees off to refreshing advantage. White wine perfectly accompanies chicken, veal and ham as well as fish or shellfish. For more elaborate fish recipes — those with a cream or cheese sauce as this recipe for Crevettes Thermidor — a mellow dry white wine is the ideal gastronomic choice. You may choose a delightful Montrachet, or Pouilly-Fuisee or Vouvray.

The variety of these enchanting white wines from France is an endless delight to the wine-lover. They are also a boon to the innovator in the kitchen, for many recipes sparkle with the addition of white wine. This recipe suggestion, an adaptation of a haute cuisine classic, is called Crevettes Thermidor — shrimp in white wine, cream and cheese sauce. Serve it with rice and a properly chilled bottle of one of France's most exquisite specialties — a dry, fruity and refreshing white wine.

CREVETTES THERMIDOR

- 2 pounds medium shrimp
- 2 shallots, chopped
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1/3 cup French dry white wine
- 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
- 1/4 cup butter
- 1/4 cup flour
- 1 1/2 cups light cream
- 1 cup grated French Gruyere cheese

Salt and pepper

1/4 cup whipped heavy cream
1 cup grated French Gruyere cheese
Cook shrimp in boiling salted water until they just turn pink. Shell and devein. Sauté shallots in butter. Add dry white wine and mustard. Simmer until liquid is reduced to 1/4 cup. Melt butter and stir in flour. Gradually stir in light cream. Stir in wine and shallots. Cook while stirring over low heat until sauce bubbles and thickens. Stir in grated cheese. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Reserve 1/3 of the sauce. Stir shrimp into remaining sauce. Spoon mixture into a shallow 1 1/2 quart casserole. Combine reserved sauce with whipped cream and grated Gruyere cheese. Spoon over top of casserole. Place into a preheated hot oven (400 degrees) and bake for 30 to 35 minutes or until richly browned and bubbly. Makes about 6 servings.

Lightning Bolt At 40 — Executives Face Unemployment

by KAREN RUGEN
For an executive in the $15,000 a year and over bracket, being laid off can be as jolting as a lightning bolt.
The sudden bounce from the security of a mahogany desk to the uncertainty of the search for a new job can throw a man into unemployment shell shock. Or it can hurdle him into the "depths of despair."
Just ask Bill Richmond.
"When they first told me, I had this sinking feeling. Then I was thrown into shock. All of a sudden my colleagues seemed to think I had gotten the plague," said Richmond as he sat smoking a cigar in the backyard patio of his brick Mount Prospect home. "It took me many months to recuperate from that shock."

BILL RICHMOND, not his real name, is a mechanical engineer with a college degree. Working his way up from draftsman, he has headed engineering teams in the steel manufacturing business and has experience in product development, design and sales. During most of his nearly 20-year career, his earnings have reached to more than $15,000 a year.
Suddenly at age 43, he was asked to leave his job as chief engineer with a small Chicago firm. That was more than a year ago. He has been faced with unemployment ever since.

"For the first five months, I worked around the house. I was in a mild state of shock," said Richmond, a short, dark-haired bachelor who lives with and helps support his parents. "I didn't want to register for unemployment; I didn't want to receive benefits from anybody."
The absence of a weekly paycheck finally pushed Richmond to the Illinois State Employment office. Lined up with other executives from the Northwestern suburbs, he stood in the Des Plaines office to make his unemployment claim. Each time he was sent upstairs to the employment service. And each time, he was turned away without a job.

"Finally they just told me to leave because as an engineer I had little chance of finding a job. They tried to help. But how can employers be hiring when they're laying off?" he said. "And I didn't want to leave my profession. I put too many years into my education for that — I'm a night school product."

Praise Plan For Citizen Aid To Curb Vandalism

by NANCY COWGER
Enthusiasm is high among three police chiefs having jurisdiction within Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 territory over a proposal to curb vandalism in schools.
The plan was formulated by Sherwood Spatz, board of education member, who is seeking citizen volunteers. Patterned after similar programs used in Chicago and other suburbs, Spatz's idea is to enlist parents as observers in or around school buildings during the hours when vandalism most frequently occurs. The observer could be any person living within the district. He would either stay on school grounds, visit them frequently on foot or in a car, or observe them from home if he lived near enough.
The volunteers will be asked to watch the schools at all times, but most especially on weekends, when vandalism is most common. On seeing anything suspicious around school building sites or playgrounds, the observer would immediately call the proper police department. He would not be expected to take any action against vandals himself and, in fact, would not be permitted to do so.

DIST. 54 has buildings in Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, and Schaumburg. The police chief in each village this week commended Spatz for developing the plan and urged citizens to volunteer their help.
"I think it's wonderful. It does what we've been asking for a long time, only it puts it closer to the schools," said John O'Connell, Hoffman Estates chief. "It would be like having an extra pair of eyes," he added.

O'Connell said his department has organized similar observer programs with Civil Defense personnel in the past, usually on Halloween. "We might put as many as 10 or 20 cars on the street, manned by Civil Defense people," he said.
While the Civil Defense group uses radios to contact police, O'Connell feels it would be just as effective for school observers to call police via telephone. This would not clutter radio wave lengths, he said.
CHIEF SAM Poletto of Hanover Park also is enthusiastic about the idea, terming it an "excellent suggestion and one that this department will encourage and help."
"We will appoint a member of the department to act as liaison with Spatz's

Plan Sticker Crackdown

Nearly 300 Hoffman Estates drivers who have not purchased their 1970 vehicle stickers could save themselves time, money and aggravation by buying the village tags immediately.
Police know who they are, and expect to ticket them for the violation of a village ordinance soon.
"It will only be a matter of time before we get each and every one of the violators, and they will not only pay for a sticker, but also pay a fine for not having displayed one," said Police Chief John O'Connell this week.
Six teenagers, two girls and four boys, worked 343 hours this summer, at a cost to the village of $671, locating cars in the village with no village stickers. The boys travelled village streets, recording the state license numbers of autos lacking village stickers. They reported the numbers to the girls, who searched out the numbers in village files to see which were registered to village residents.

The boys found a total of 2,952 vehicles without Hoffman Estates stickers. Of these, 298 were registered to Hoffman estates residents, 22 of whom already had been cited for not having stickers. The remaining vehicles were registered from other communities.
"WE NOW have the information on the owners of these vehicles, with names and addresses, and a concentrated effort will be made to cite the remaining violators for failure to comply with the local licensing ordinance," said Chief O'Connell.
O'Connell said figures indicate about 90 per cent of all village residents have purchased their vehicle stickers, as required. "Hopefully we will have 100 per cent, but if we can achieve a figure close to the 100 per cent we can term it a success," he said.
The cost of the program will be more than made up by proceeds from fines to offenders and fees when they purchase stickers, said O'Connell. If only 100 of the persons identified by the teenagers purchase their stickers after being cited, the village will receive $1,000 for sticker fees. And likely, many more than that will purchase the stickers, he said.

This was the second summer Hoffman Estates has used the program, and likely

Rosner Corp. To Headquarter Here

The Hoffman Rosner Corp. will build its new headquarters building in Hoffman Estates, on Roselle Road next to the Suburban Bank.
"We are most happy Hoffman Rosner has decided to construct in Hoffman Estates which is the first community in Illinois they developed," said Mayor Frederick Downey, announcing the plans this week.
The building will provide an increased tax base for Hoffman Estates and the local school district and employment opportunities for the people of Hoffman Estates and surrounding areas, he added.
The two story structure will offer 17,000 square feet and will have an assessed valuation of $315,000, Downey said. Building permits have already been issued, he added.

Mayor Marries

Hanover Park Mayor Richard Baker announced his marriage to Mrs. Carol O'Brien Pierce Wednesday.
The mayor and Mrs. Pierce were married in a civil ceremony in Kane County.
A dinner reception was held in the Indian Lakes Country Club following the afternoon ceremony.
Mrs. Pierce worked as a village administrative assistant to the mayor in 1970 and is now employed by the Daily Courier News in Elgin.

WELL UNDER WAY IS the new police and municipal building for Hoffman Estates. The $1.1 million structure is being constructed on the north side of Golf Road, west of the Golf-Higgins Roads intersection. Village officials plan a move-in to the new facility next summer.

Garbage Rate Stays Same Temporarily

Hoffman Estates residents will have garbage pick-up service from Barrington Trucking Co. under a new contract, beginning Sept. 1, without an increase in rates until after President Richard Nixon's price and wage freeze has ended.
Current rates, adopted by the village board June 1, may be temporarily lowered because they were adopted anticipating a Sept. 1 increase in costs to village hall now postponed.
The current charge to single family homeowners and duplex residents is $1.85 for curb service and $2.95 for back door pick-up.
Prior to June 1 the rate was $1.35 monthly for curb service and $1.85 for back door pick-up.
After the Nixon freeze ends the rates will jump to $2.68 for curb service and $3.68 for back door pick-up. A clause provides a jump in the cost of back door pick-up to $4.48 after Barrington Trucking finalizes negotiation with its labor force following the price wage-freeze.
THE CONTRACT also calls for a reduction of fee charges if the village adopts a system of plastic or paper bags for holding refuse. The discount will be 14.9 per cent for curb service and 18.5 per cent for back door pick-ups.
In addition to charges billed to homeowners, the village levies a tax of 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation on all property in Hoffman Estates. Apartment, townhouse and condominium developments are excluded from the new contract and will hire their own scavenger service independently.
The new contract, covering a 28 month period, was approved Monday following weeks of negotiation with Barrington Trucking.
The new contract expires Dec. 31, 1973 allowing the village to take bids for a new contract after scavengers have signed new labor contracts. This way bids can be submitted without having to anticipate what labor costs will be, said Trustee William Cowin, who participated in the recent negotiation.
The new contract was entered after negotiations rather than by competitive bidding because bids submitted by three scavenger services in July came in "extraordinarily high," according to village officials.
Barrington Trucking Co., which currently serves Hoffman Estates, was party to the negotiations because it was lowest of the three bidders.

This Morning In Brief

The World

President Nguyen Van Thieu conferred with U. S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker then told his provincial campaign workers the South Vietnamese presidential elections would be held as scheduled Oct. 3. Although the U. S. has adopted a hands-off policy, the embassy has made it no secret a one-man election could hurt prospects for continued U. S. economic aid.

Dozens of workers fleeing for safety when a bomb alert was sounded were trapped under tons of rubble when a powerful explosion ripped through the headquarters of Northern Ireland Electricity Board. One man was killed and 36 injured in the blast blamed by the British army on the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

International trade officials said that the United States could not expect concessions such as upward currency revaluation from other countries until it removed its new 10 per cent surcharge on imports or set a firm date for the removal.

The State

The Chicago Bar Association demanded that State's Attorney Edward Hanrahan take a leave of absence until he is tried on criminal charges of conspiring with 13 others to obstruct justice following a 1969 raid on a Black Panther headquarters. The CBA also urged Criminal Court Judge Joseph Power to "step out of the case," asking that a judge from outside of the county be brought in to handle any further proceedings.

The Nation

The government reported the first monthly decline in three years in family welfare recipients and attributed it to a cutback in state benefits for the needy. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said that during May the number of families on welfare rolls dropped by 16,000 — from 10,228,000 to 10,212,000.

Vice President Spiro Agnew launched a counter-attack on "nit-picking" Democrats and labor leaders who have criticized President Nixon's wage-price freeze. Agnew predicted one of Nixon's bitterest critics, AFL-CIO President George Meany will eventually go along with the President's program. Meanwhile, Meany and Leonard Woodcock, of the United Autoworkers, met to discuss legislative strategy as organized labor kept up its steady stream of criticism. Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield predicted a long Senate fight to reform Nixon's economic recovery plan.

The War

Communists blew up a portion of one of the biggest U. S. ammunition dumps in South Vietnam and shelled five other American bases in what military spokesmen said could be the opening of a major pre-election offensive by the Viet Cong. The Cambodian high command reported 300 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed in eight hours of fierce fighting along Highway 6 north of Phnom Penh.

Graham, Regner Join Lincoln County Study Unit

State Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, Rep. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and Mayor Fred Downey of Hoffman Estates are the last to join the list of members on the New County Study Committee (NCS) investigating the possible disannexation of six Northwest suburban townships from Cook County to form Lincoln County.

With the addition of the three names, the NCS committee now involves a total of nine representatives from the six-township area of Barrington, Palatine, Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Hanover.

Graham and Regner were chosen to serve on the committee because of their background in legislative procedures and the information they can provide in researching the new county idea, according to Wendell Jones, a Palatine trustee and co-ordinator of the Lincoln County plan.

Downey could serve as a municipal liaison for the committee through his mayoral responsibilities, Jones said.

Besides Graham, Regner and Downey, the committee includes Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher, LeMotte Stitt and W. Richard Impey, both Arlington Heights attorneys, Mrs. Glen Ann Jicha, former Palatine Township Republican committeewoman, and Merwin Soper and Jones, Palatine trustees.

"Hopefully we'll be able to meet within the next two to three weeks for an initial organizational session," Jones said yesterday. He suggested the nine-member NCS committee break down into subgroups to study various aspects of a new county.

Possible subgroups to conduct further research include groups to look into establishment of a new court system and police structure, financial burdens of forming a new county and taxation and legal questions in seceding from an existing county.

"We won't ask any residents to sign petitions unless the committee first determines whether action to form a new county is even feasible," Jones said. "Once that is determined, the next logical step would be to form a larger group than the NCS committee to go out and get the 60,000 names for the petition."

Jones and Soper first proposed the Lincoln County idea early this month when they issued an eight-page report on the rationale for the disannexation. Under their six-township area, a new county government would be created for an estimated combined population of 350,000, which would make the government more local and representative, the report stated.

Mrs. Kelby To Be New Park Baton Instructor

A new instructor will be teaching baton for the Hanover Park Park District fall session that begins Oct. 1.

Mrs. Carole Kelby of Glen Ellyn has been named as baton instructor for the park district program. Mrs. Kelby is the director of the Velvet Viking Cadets Drum and Twirling Corps.

She is credited with winning the Illinois State Championship in 1969, 1970 and 1971, national championship in 1969 and 1970 and grand national championship in 1970, and the international championship in 1969.

Registration for the eight-week baton session will be held Sept. 7-18 in the Longmeadows Recreational Building from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Orientation day for registered students is set for Sept. 24 at the Anne Fox School.

The baton program is continuous. Each session runs eight weeks with a $5 fee paid every session. Classes will be limited in size with children advanced according to their abilities. Classes are offered in beginning, intermediate, advanced and senior baton instruction.

The program is open to girls five years old and up. Practices are held at the Anne Fox School on Friday afternoons and evenings according to age groups.

In addition to class instruction, the group enters parades in the area and twirling competitions. A spring recital for parents and friends will be also held

Homeowners Assured By Atcher

A standing room only crowd of Schaumburg residents attending Tuesday night's village board meeting were assured by Mayor Robert O. Atcher that their officials act in the best interest of homeowners.

More than 150 homeowners, primarily composed of residents of Levitt's Sheffield Towne in the western end of the village and the Lancer Park subdivision in the eastern section of Schaumburg, came to tell town officials of their current displeasure with the two builders.

The Levitt residents were concerned over builder's plans to have an existing recreational complex south of Bode Road shared with residents who will occupy townhouses and condominiums to the north.

People in Lancer Park asked the village to refrain from accepting publicly dedicated streets in their subdivision until the builder has corrected storm drainage and other problems.

"AFTER WHAT I saw tonight, I will recommend that the village board make certain that the storm drainage problem is solved completely prior to acceptance of streets," Atcher said about flooded streets he visited earlier Tuesday in Lancer Park.

Village Engr. Joe Zgonina has recently been asking for acceptance of the publicly dedicated streets and courts in Lancer Park.

After acceptance by the village, the builder is responsible for the upkeep of dedicated roads for the 18 months.

Atcher proposed a special meeting with members of the homeowners association to discuss problems with the builder.

The homeowners will meet with village officials next Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Great Hall.

Atcher told Levitt residents that somewhere along the line the state legislature will grant municipalities more authority to ensure developers keep promises made to potential homeowners.

"THOSE WHO are the unhappiest are people who were told by builder's salespeople things that they well knew could not be true. We feel that we can accumulate enough support to make developers live by their promises," he said.

Villages can now intervene only where a proposal is before the village board, granting approval on building permits and such.

"We do have the authority, however, to withhold such approval until problems are solved," the mayor said. "We've given them (Levitt) the law and they will live with it," Atcher said.

A thunder of applause followed Atcher's statement.

A group of the Levitt homeowners association members met Sunday with James Leakow, project manager and were given the assurance there will be a new recreational area.

Terms of the builders pledge were the same as presented to the village board this week, according to Atty. Jim Rosenberg, spokesman for the Levitt homeowners.

Gets Continuance On Felony Charge

A continuance was granted to Vincent M. Motsch, 37, of 426 Bode Rd., Hoffman Estates, when he appeared Tuesday in Cook County Felony Court, Niles, on charges of taking indecent liberties with a child, a felony.

The continuance to 11 a.m. Sept. 7 was requested by John Keefe, Motsch's public defender, to allow time for a psychiatric examination. Prosecution is being handled by assistant state attorney Daniel Miroballi, and Judge Marvin J. Peters is presiding in the case.

Motsch also is charged with illegal possession of a firearm owner's identification card, a misdemeanor. The charges stem from an alleged incident Aug. 16 in a field on Grand Canyon, when Motsch purportedly molested an 11 year old Hoffman Estates boy.

Motsch was ordered held in Chicago's House of Correction until his next court appearance.

Complex Is Now Free And Clear

Schaumburg's 12-acre civic complex located in the Weathersfield subdivision is owned free and clear by the village.

A final payment of $14,840 was made Tuesday. The expenditure covers the costs of renovating buildings on the 12-acre site. The property and existing buildings were donated 12 years ago by Campanelli Brothers, developers of Weathersfield.

The cost of upgrading the civic center was originally supposed to be paid by Citizens Utilities, using a $250 per home donation obtained when the firm was given the franchise to serve Schaumburg. The money, held in an escrow account could not be recaptured when Schaumburg bought the utility system. Other financing had to be negotiated.

Remodeling of buildings, installation of streets, parking lots, Civic Park pool and tennis courts and other recreational lands totaled $273,000 over and above the gift of land and buildings, said Mayor Robert Atcher.

"We made arrangements to retire this debt over a period of time and as of this moment it is all owned free and clear by the Village of Schaumburg," he added.

Planned Unit Project To Help Police Dept.

The police department for the first time will directly benefit from the approval of a planned unit development when it receives two new squad cars donated by a builder.

The 97-acre complex will be built at Irving Park and Wise roads by Building Systems, Inc., and Melvin Isenstein on land being acquired from Campanelli Investment Corp.

A contribution of one squad car will be made when phase one of the complex is started and a similar contribution at the beginning of phase two.

"This is purely voluntary on our part since there is no established village policy on such contributions," Ash said Tuesday.

The request was made by zoning board member, Dr. Martin Coniglio.

The development will have over 1,000 units including 972 apartments 309 condominium units and 48 townhouses, a commercial site, two swimming pools and other recreation facilities.

The developer has also agreed to an $88,000 cash contribution to Dist. 54 and a $100 per unit contribution to Schaumburg's proposed cultural center. Development will occur over a 5 year period.

"In the past Schaumburg has looked out for the interest of its school districts, park district and all other taxing bodies since certain facilities must be here to serve residents," Atcher said.

"This is the first time that we have gotten something other than land . . . and it just may turn out to be a habit," he added.

Attends Workshop

Matthew Van Wallene of Hoffman Estates was one of 37 Catholic laymen attending a week-long workshop at St. John's University, Collegeville, Minn., August 1-7 in preparation for eventual ordination as permanent deacons in the Catholic Church.

Upon ordination, a deacon's chief duties include preaching, officiating at baptisms, weddings and funerals, distributing Holy Communion and working with people who may need his help.

Levitt Must Meet Recreation Needs

The velvet glove of the village board came down with force in Schaumburg Tuesday to insure Levitt and Sons will provide adequate recreational facilities to meet the needs at its 750 acre planned unit development (PUD).

James Leakow, project manager for Levitt and Sons, said a recreational area will be built to serve multi-family areas to be constructed north of Bode Road. Construction will begin next spring.

When Leakow was presenting preliminary plans for unit four of Sheffield Manor last week he said the company was considering having residents share recreational facilities existing in the development.

These facilities are operated under a homeowner's association; however, the developer presently has a controlling vote.

THE PLANS commission recommended approval of the plan but, Trustee Herbert J. Aigner recently noted the lack of recreational facilities.

Other officials expressed displeasure with the failure to include leisure time facilities. Leakow was instructed to return with altered preliminaries.

The village agreed Tuesday to approve the plan commission recommendation but will not issue building permits until they have seen plans for the recreation center.

Occupancy permits will not be issued either until a starting date for the center, which Leakow says will contain a swimming pool and tennis courts, has been announced by Levitt and Sons.

The center will be built in unit five of the Sheffield Manor but will be started with unit four.

Leakow said completion of unit four is expected in late March or April next year and promised pool construction will begin when ground becomes workable next spring.

Village Slates Sticker Crackdown

it will be the last, said Chief O'Connell. It was necessary this year and last to hire the teenagers to track down violators, said O'Connell, because the state refused to provide the village with a list of licenses issued to village residents. If Hoffman Estates had received that list, it could have compared it with village records of stickers issued, and cited any persons not listed in both places.

The state now has agreed to furnish its records in future years, said O'Connell, and the teenagers' work no longer will be necessary.

Praise Citizen Aid Plan

committee. He will be available to give the watchers advice," said Polotto. "This system should receive the communities' full support and be extremely effective," he added.

In Schaumburg, Chief Martin J. Conroy added his support to the program and suggested a means of encouraging all residents to use the observer procedures. "I don't think it should be just limited to schools. Persons in the community, if they see things, do not have to give us their names. If they just give us the information. We'll check it out," said Conroy.

TO ENCOURAGE any citizen to call police about suspicious behavior, Conroy suggested someone ask Illinois Bell Telephone to adjust public telephones to allow free calls to any police or fire department. Now, said Conroy, citizens trying to call fire or police departments from a public phone must hunt for a dime. If they don't happen to have one, they cannot make the call. In other parts of the country, emergency calls are free, said Conroy.

At any rate, said Conroy, he encourages Spatz's plan. "This is not something new to us. We have been doing this the past four or five years with our Civil Defense people," he said. "All they are eyes, and they tell us what they see. We always hope people will aid in reporting things to police." This kind of assistance "gives us more mileage, and more coverage to the community," he said.

Spatz developed the plan because of the frequency and high cost of vandalism in district schools. Each year the district pays an estimated $10,000 for glass to replace broken windows. Not included is the cost of labor by district maintenance workers who repair windows and other building fixtures.

Any resident who wishes to volunteer for the program is urged to call the district office at 529-4200, giving his name and address. Volunteers will be contacted by Spatz to help plan and organize the program at their local schools. He is seeking volunteers for most of the district's 21 school buildings.

Lightning Bolt At 40 — Executives Face Unemployment

by KAREN RUGEN
For an executive in the $15,000 a year and over bracket, being laid off can be as jolting as a lightning bolt.
The sudden bounce from the security of a mahogany desk to the uncertainty of the search for a new job can throw a man into unemployment shell shock. Or it can harden him into the "depths of despair."
Just ask Bill Richmond.
"When they first told me, I had this sinking feeling. Then I was thrown into shock. All of a sudden my colleagues seemed to think I had gotten the plague," said Richmond as he sat smoking a cigar in the backyard patio of his brick Mount Prospect home. "It took me many months to recuperate from that shock."

BILL RICHMOND, not his real name, is a mechanical engineer with a college degree. Working his way up from draftsman, he has headed engineering teams in the steel manufacturing business and has experience in product development, design and sales. During most of his nearly 20-year career, his earnings have reached to more than $15,000 a year.
Suddenly at age 43, he was asked to leave his job as chief engineer with a small Chicago firm. That was more than a year ago. He has been faced with unemployment ever since.

"For the first five months, I worked around the house. I was in a mild state of shock," said Richmond, a short, dark-haired bachelor who lives with and helps support his parents. "I didn't want to register for unemployment; I didn't want to receive benefits from anybody."
The absence of a weekly paycheck finally pushed Richmond to the Illinois State Employment office. Lined up with other executives from the Northwestern suburbs, he stood in the Des Plaines office to make his unemployment claim. Each time he was sent upstairs to the employment service. And each time, he was turned away without a job.

"Finally they just told me to leave because as an engineer I had little chance of finding a job. They tried to help. But how can employers be hiring when they're laying off?" he said. "And I didn't want to leave my profession. I put too many years into my education for that — I'm a night school product."

Forest Preserve Plan Cut Down By County Chiefs

Wheeling's hopes to annex to the village a narrow strip of land in the Cook County Forest Preserves have been shattered by county officials.

Annexation of the forest preserve would have made it possible for Wheeling to annex Pal-Waukee Airport and other tax rich property.

But village Trustee John Koeppen, who has been working on the annexation of the land since 1968, says the village is going to keep working on the mechanics needed for the annexation in case Cook County officials change their minds.

KOEPPEN READ a letter from Cook County Commr. Ruby Ryan at Monday night's village board meeting indicating that the county board acting as forest preserve district commissioners had voted not to allow any of the forest preserve land to be annexed by municipalities.

Before receiving Mrs. Ryan's letter, Koeppen had given other village officials hope that for the first time the county might be willing to allow the annexation.

Wheeling wants the land as an arm southward.

By annexing the forest preserve land on the west side of the Des Plaines River from the current limits at Manchester drive south to Camp McDonald Road, Wheeling would become contiguous to a wealth of commercial property and to Pal-Waukee Airport.

The forest preserve annexation would allow those areas to become a part of the village if their owners wished. The area would provide much property tax revenue.

THE VILLAGE had originally proposed annexing a 240-acre plot of forest preserve land on both sides of the Des Plaines River, but county officials had made a counter proposal that only the land west of the river be annexed.

The county's refusal now to go along with any annexation stems from the fact that legislation proposed by the county dealing with forest preserve lands in municipalities has not been enacted by the state legislature.

The legislation sought by the county would have allowed the forest preserve district to maintain control over concessions operated in the forest preserve land even though the land had been annexed to the village.

In July the village board had ordered that a surveyor be hired to draw up maps and legal descriptions of the land so the village could annex it once it obtained Cook County permission.

Koeppen said Monday the surveying work should be completed despite the county board's recent refusal of the annexation plan "so that if the legislation passes in the fall or the spring we can go ahead."

NOT ONLY IS IT ILLEGAL to park your car like this in a fire lane in front of stores at Wheeling shopping centers, but you're likely to get a ticket. A crackdown on enforcing fire lane parking laws was ordered by the village board last week.

Only Minor Damage By Storm Here

The storm which blew through the Northwest suburbs Tuesday night did relatively little damage to the Wheeling and Buffalo Grove area.

High winds knocked down part of a wall of a building under construction in the industrial district at the end of Shepard Avenue in Wheeling.

The minor building damage was the only significant incident reported in Wheeling, although police said the storm set off a number of burglar alarms.

No incidents of flooding were reported to police in Wheeling.

There were scattered power failures in both villages, and one section of Buffalo Grove was without power for about four hours.

Selling Stag Films

Wheeling Police received a report Tuesday afternoon that a man was selling watches and stag films from the back of a station wagon parked at Hintz and Elmhurst roads. The man and car had gone when police arrived.

Teachers Will Learn About Drugs

District 21 teachers will spend a day next week learning about drugs in preparation for a drug education curriculum to be introduced in the district schools this fall.

The teachers will be taught not only how to recognize drugs and understand their effects, but also the reasons why youngsters may feel a need to take drugs, according to Marge Beu, district director of instruction.

The Sept. 3 program will include a 9:30 a.m. speech by Dr. Robert Wilfar of the graduate division of Forest Hospital in Des Plaines.

His speech will focus on the pharmacological aspects of drugs, experiences with drug addicts, and an explanation of the psychological drive for drugs, Miss Beu said.

FOLLOWING THE talk the district teachers will split into separate sessions for primary, intermediate, and junior high school groups.

Each of the three separate groups will then meet with a policeman who will give a presentation explaining drug analysis and telling the teachers how to recognize the symptoms of youngsters who are drug users, she said.

Policemen from the Wheeling and Buffalo Grove police departments have already agreed to help with the program and a third policeman has been requested from the Arlington Heights police department, Miss Beu said.

District 21 serves Wheeling, the Cook County portion of Buffalo Grove, and parts of northern Arlington Heights and Prospect Heights.

AFTER THE sessions with the policemen, the teachers will be given the specifics of the curriculum on drug education as it will be taught in the various grade levels, she said.

The new program will be taught in homeroom classes at the elementary school level, she said. In the district's three junior high schools, the program will vary. In some schools it will be taught as part of the social studies program while in others it will be included in science classes or in a language arts class, she said.

The program may be taught by team teaching in some of the schools, she said.

In addition to that, new curriculum, four other new programs will be introduced in the district this fall, she said.

Teachers will receive information from their school principals on curriculums on "You and the Law," "Environmental Education," "Consumer Education" and the newly formalized kindergarten curriculum, she said.

For the first time this year district teachers will be required to attend only one day of orientation programs instead of a week of meetings before school starts. The reduced requirement is the result of a new state law, Miss Beu said.

THERE WILL BE a week's worth of voluntary orientation programs for the teachers, however, she said.

On Monday, an optional workshop for teachers who are new to the district will include an explanation of the various special services in the district, such as language arts facilities, the learning disabilities program, and school psychiatrist. That afternoon the teachers will tour the district in order to learn about the types of homes local children come from and to familiarize themselves with various industries and businesses in the district, she said.

This Morning In Brief

The World

President Nguyen Van Thieu conferred with U. S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker then told his provincial campaign workers the South Vietnamese presidential elections would be held as scheduled Oct. 3. Although the U. S. has adopted a hands-off policy, the embassy has made it no secret a one-man election could hurt prospects for continued U. S. economic aid.

Dozens of workers fleeing for safety when a bomb alert was sounded were trapped under tons of rubble when a powerful explosion ripped through the headquarters of Northern Ireland Electricity Board. One man was killed and 36 injured in the blast blamed by the British army on the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

International trade officials said that the United States could not expect concessions such as upward currency revaluation from other countries until it removed its new 10 per cent surcharge on imports or set a firm date for the removal.

The State

The Chicago Bar Association demanded that State's Attorney Edward Hanrahan take a leave of absence until he is tried on criminal charges of conspiring with 13 others to obstruct justice following a 1968 raid on a Black Panther headquarters. The CBA also urged Criminal Court Judge Joseph Power to "step out of the case," asking that a judge from outside of the county be brought in to handle any further proceedings.

The Nation

The government reported the first monthly decline in three years in family welfare recipients and attributed it to a cutback in state benefits for the needy. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said that during May the number of families on welfare rolls dropped by 16,000 — from 10,228,000 to 10,212,000.

Vice President Spiro Agnew launched a counter-attack on "nit-picking" Democrats and labor leaders who have criticized President Nixon's wage-price freeze. Agnew predicted one of Nixon's bitterest critics, AFL-CIO President George Meany will eventually go along with the President's program. Meanwhile, Meany and Leonard Woodcock, of the United Autoworkers, met to discuss legislative strategy as organized labor kept up its steady stream of criticism. Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield predicted a long Senate fight to reform Nixon's economic recovery plan.

The War

Communists blew up a portion of one of the biggest U. S. ammunition dumps in South Vietnam and shelled five other American bases in what military spokesmen said could be the opening of a major pre-election offensive by the Viet Cong. The Cambodian high command reported 300 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed in eight hours of fierce fighting along Highway 6 north of Phnom Penh.

Lincoln County Study Unit Grows

State Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, Rep. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and Mayor Fred Downey of Hoffman Estates are the last to join the list of members on the New County Study Committee (NCS) investigating the possible disannexation of six Northwest suburban townships from Cook County to form Lincoln County.

State Sen. John A. Graham

Mayor Fred Downey

State Rep. David J. Regner

With the addition of the three names, the NCS committee now involves a total of nine representatives from the six-township area of Barrington, Palatine, Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Hanover.

Graham and Regner were chosen to serve on the committee because of their background in legislative procedures and the information they can provide in researching the new county idea, according to Wendell Jones, a Palatine trustee and co-ordinator of the Lincoln County plan.

Downey could serve as a municipal liaison for the committee through his mayoral responsibilities, Jones said.

Besides Graham, Regner and Downey, the committee includes Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher, LeMoiné Stiff and W. Richard Impey, both Arlington Heights attorneys, Mrs. Glen Ann Jicha, former Palatine Township Republican committeewoman, and Merwin Soper and Jones, Palatine trustees.

"Hopefully we'll be able to meet within the next two to three weeks for an initial organizational session," Jones said yesterday. He suggested the nine-member NCS committee break down into subgroups to study various aspects of a new county.

Possible subgroups to conduct further research include groups to look into establishment of a new court system and police structure, financial burdens of forming a new county and taxation and legal questions in seceding from an existing county.

"We won't ask any residents to sign petitions unless the committee first determines whether action to form a new county is even feasible," Jones said. "Once that is determined, the next logical step would be to form a larger group than the NCS committee to go out and get the 50,000 names for the petition."

Jones and Soper first proposed the Lincoln County idea early this month when they issued an eight-page report on the rationale for the disannexation. Under their six-township area, a new county government would be created for an estimated combined population of 350,000, which would make the government more local and representative, the report stated.

Farm Auction To Be Held

The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Nurses' Club will hold a "Back to the Farm" auction Oct. 3 at the Arcadia Farm on Arlington Heights Road, one block north of Checker Road in Buffalo Grove.

The auction, to be held from noon to 5 p.m., will raise funds for the club's scholarship program and for its lending closet.

The club has already received auction contributions from as far away as Ohio. Local residents who wish to donate items, excluding clothing, were asked to call Mrs. Stanley Russell at 299-2649.

Homemade items will be on sale and refreshments will include "home-cooked" food. Prizes of handmade quilts will be awarded.

The nurses' club has awarded $3,150 in scholarships to women studying to be nurses. It loans, at no cost, beds, walkers, crutches and other hospital equipment from its lending closet. More information on the closet can be obtained from Mrs. Joseph Wonderly at 537-3182.

Seek To Stop Cycle Races At Track

Officials and residents of Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are taking steps to prevent a motorcycle race planned for the night of Sept. 10 at Arlington Park Race Track.

The opposition stems from several reasons, including fears that motorized racing may become a continuous event at the track, concern over excessive noise the race will cause, the "inconvenience" the bright night lights at the track will cause nearby homeowners and the "type of people motorcycle racing might usher into town."

Some Arlington Heights officials are taking preliminary steps to block the event, or at least prevent future racing of this type.

Race track officials have made no comment on the event or the opposition to it. One spokesman, however, did say, "this type of event has been held all over the country many times before with very few problems such as these people are talking about."

TRUSTEES MRS. Alice Harms and Ted Salinsky are attempting to gain the support of one other trustee opposed to the event so a special meeting of the village board can be called to examine what the village can legally do to halt the program.

Although Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the race was permitted under current village regulations, other trustees have asked and are now awaiting a legal opinion on the subject from Village Atty. Jack Siegel.

The question of using the night lights, which the Illinois Racing Board did not permit for the thoroughbred racing, was cleared up by Hanson who said the use of lights for events other than horse racing is permitted by the state.

Hanson also said the village will receive 3 per cent of the total gate receipts. Tickets for the event range in price from $4 to $6.

Salinsky said, "If this is a permitted use then someone really bungled the job because the next thing we'll have is demolition derby out there."

Mrs. Harms said, "I'm opposed to this on the basis that if this is allowed how could we prevent possible expansion of use other than those existing at the time of annexation?" which was in 1969.

THE RACE IS the Yamaha Gold Cup Motorcycle Race offering a $15,000 purse and gold trophy for the estimated 200 riders who will participate in the 10-event program which starts at 8 p.m. on Sept. 10.

Sanctioned by the American Motorcycle Association, the riders will race at speeds up to 130 miles per hour.

The race is sponsored by Madison Square Garden Corp., the parent company of Arlington and Washington Park Race Tracks. Trojan Enterprises from California are also sponsors.

In May of this year Madison Square Garden staged a similar race at Roosevelt Raceway in New York which drew over 20,000 fans.

BOTH 2ND WARD Aldermen William Aherns and Thomas Waldron told the Rolling Meadows city council this week that some of their constituents "fear the noise and the possibility that racing may become a continuous thing."

Waldron said yesterday "some of the people also believe that motorcycle racing brings the wrong kind of people into the area."

In addition, the Rolling Meadows Board of Health is now considering the purchase of a "noise meter" to measure the loudness of the event in terms of noise pollution.

Village Seeks New Powers

Procedure to allow Wheeling to acquire the "almost unlimited powers" granted to home rule municipalities under the new Illinois Constitution are being investigated by Village Atty. Paul Hamer.

In a report to the village board this week Hamer explained House Bill 3017 provides for a referendum for towns of less than 25,000 population to adopt "home-rule" government.

Under the new constitution communities with populations larger than 25,000 automatically have the additional powers of home rule government.

Wheeling has a population of approximately 15,000 people.

Hamer said in his report the bill allowing smaller communities to adopt home rule by a referendum has not yet received Governor Richard B. Ogilvie's signature.

HAMER TOLD the village board that when the bill is signed into law he will obtain a copy and outline procedures for a home rule referendum for the village board's information.

Home rule for Wheeling would mean an end to several of the problems which have plagued the village in recent years.

Because it would give the village all powers which are not specifically denied to it in the state constitution it would allow the village, for example, to pass the law banning door-to-door solicitation.

Wheeling passed a non-solicitation law several years ago only to have it thrown out by the Illinois Supreme Court because the state legislature had not given municipalities the power to pass such a law.

A similar reason, lack of statutory authority, was given by village officials when they ended a ban on mobile home parks in the village and for having no ordinance requirements for the post of village manager.

Home rule generally would give Wheeling broad general powers to regulate the protection of public health, safety, morals, and welfare to tax and incur debt, and to license for purposes of regulation.

The village would still have some limits on its powers, however, including bans against licensing to raise revenue, and bans on local income taxes or taxes on occupations. It also wouldn't allow the village to punish felons or to imprison for more than six months.

Over 4,000 Trees Sprayed In Summer

A total of 3,858 trees on village property and 482 trees on private property were treated in Wheeling's tree spraying program this summer.

The spraying program is designed to combat cottony maple scale, a disease which results in white, popcorn-like nests on maple trees.

Total cost of the spraying program was $7,035.34, based on a rate of $2.75 for each tree on private property and $1.48 for each tree on the public parkway.

The village board this week approved payment of $6,683.57 to the Fowler Tree Surgery Co. for the spraying work done.

The remainder of $351.77 owed the company will be held for 45 days in case of any problems.

Propose Contest To Design Flag

A contest for local school children to design a flag for the Village of Wheeling may be held this fall.

Village officials delayed action on adopting a flag with the village seal to give such a contest further consideration.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said Wheeling's Jaycees had proposed such a contest with prizes for children participating.

Police said he was absent without leave from Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland, where he was undergoing training.

To Review Tekton Corp. Final Plans

Wheeling's Plan Commission will begin a review tonight of the final development plan for the Tekton Corp. quadrominium project on North McHenry Road.

The property has been proposed as a 456 unit development — 114 buildings with four units in each. The buildings look like single-family homes.

The plan for the 39-acre development includes 20 one-bedroom units, 228 two-bedroom units and 208 three-bedroom units.

Indoor garages, a retention basin, a swimming pool and a play area are also proposed as part of the development.

The units would be sold like condominiums rather than rented.

The property is bordered on the north by the proposed right-of-way for Lake-Cook Road.

Lightning Bolt At 40 — Executives Face Unemployment

by KAREN RUGEN
For an executive in the $15,000 a year and over bracket, being laid off can be as jolting as a lightning bolt.
The sudden bounce from the security of a mahogany desk to the uncertainty of the search for a new job can throw a man into unemployment shell shock. Or it can hurdle him into the "depths of despair."
Just ask Bill Richmond.
"When they first told me, I had this sinking feeling. Then I was thrown into shock. All of a sudden my colleagues seemed to think I had gotten the plague," said Richmond as he sat smoking a cigar in the backyard patio of his brick Mount Prospect home. "It took me many months to recuperate from that shock."

BILL RICHMOND, not his real name, is a mechanical engineer with a college degree. Working his way up from draftsman, he has headed engineering teams in the steel manufacturing business and has experience in product development, design and sales. During most of his nearly 20-year career, his earnings have reached to more than $15,000 a year.
Suddenly at age 43, he was asked to leave his job as chief engineer with a small Chicago firm. That was more than a year ago. He has been faced with unemployment ever since.

"For the first five months, I worked around the house. I was in a mild state of shock," said Richmond, a short, dark-haired bachelor who lives with and helps support his parents. "I didn't want to register for unemployment; I didn't want to receive benefits from anybody."
The absence of a weekly paycheck finally pushed Richmond to the Illinois State Employment office. Lined up with other executives from the Northwestern suburbs, he stood in the Des Plaines office to make his unemployment claim. Each time he was sent upstairs to the employment service. And each time, he was turned away without a job.

"Finally they just told me to leave because as an engineer I had little chance of finding a job. They tried to help. But how can employers be hiring when they're laying off?" he said. "And I didn't want to leave my profession. I put too many years into my education for that — I'm a night school product."

Proposed Bond Issue Tax Hike Below Estimate

New figures supplied to School Dist. 96 indicate that its proposed $335,000 bond issue will raise taxes much less than had been anticipated.

And with the bond market "in its best shape ever," the cost could drop even more, according to a financial consultant to the district.

The new tax figure — which is about 40 per cent lower than the original figure — is not final but Dist. 96 Supt. William Hitzman said it is "more realistic" than the original estimate.

THE ORIGINAL ESTIMATE had indicated that the bond issue, if passed in the Sept. 25 referendum, would initially raise Dist. 96 tax rate, 33 cents per each $100 of assessed valuation or roughly $98 on a house with a market value of about $40,000.

The new estimate indicates that the initial increase will be only 18 per cent per $100 of assessed valuation or roughly $38 on the same $40,000 house.

The 18-cent increase would be reflected in tax bills received by Dist. 96 residents next spring. District officials expect the tax rate for the $335,000 in bonds to decrease each year as new developments are built. These projects will give the district a larger tax base and, with more property owners to share the cost, the cost per taxpayers would decrease.

Just how much it will decrease depends on the actual growth of district and the number of years the district takes to pay off the bond issue.

At a school board meeting Monday night William Seipel of the Illinois School Consulting Service presented three possible retirement schedules, each based on an interest rate of 5.75 per cent.

However, Seipel said that since President Nixon began his new economic policy, "The bond market improvement has been the greatest in its history." If the bonds were sold this week, Seipel estimated they could be sold at "close to four per cent."

HOWEVER, SEIPEL said he could not estimate what the actual interest rate on the bonds since they will not be sold until after the referendum. Market fluctuations, he said, could raise or lower interest rate in the meantime.

Seipel presented three possible methods of retiring the bonds: over 10, 12 or 14 years — and said that the 10-year schedule would be best for Dist. 96.

At the suggestion of member Thomas Rusk, the school board agreed not to decide on a retirement schedule until consulting with citizens groups.

Using a "conservative" 5.75 per cent interest rate, the 10-year schedule shows that the bond issue would cause the Dist. 96 tax rate to increase 18 cents per $100 assessed valuation this year. This increase would be reflected in property tax bills received next spring.

If development of the district goes according to the district's projection, the 18 cent increase would drop to 10 cents next year, and when residents receive their property tax bills in the spring of 1978, the Dist. 96 tax rate for bond retirement would be slightly below the current rate.

However, Seipel pointed out that these figures assume "you have no future bond issues."

The 12-year and 14-year schedules would cause the added taxes for the $335,000 bond issue to drop more quickly but the district would continue paying for the bonds over a longer period and have a higher total interest cost, according to Seipel.

The 10-year plan would cost the district $335,000 in interest; the 12-year plan $423,000 and the 14-year plan, $508,000.

THE BOND ISSUE is one of two proposals that will be presented to the voters in the Sept. 25 referendum. The other is a rent levy which would enable the district to build a school with state funds. The money would be repaid with revenue from the rent levy.

According to earlier Dist. 96 estimates, the rent levy would add about 37 cents to the tax rate for the 1972-73 fiscal year. If the district grows as expected, this rate would drop to 30 cents for the 1973-74 fiscal year and to 17 cents for the 1978-80 fiscal year.

These figures were not affected by the revised bond estimates.

Proposed Swim Pool Law Takes Dive

The Buffalo Grove Village Board Monday night junked a proposed swimming pool ordinance, which took over a year to prepare, and instead decided to revise the present one.

In a close 4 to 3 vote, with Village Pres. Gary Armstrong breaking the tie, the trustees voted down the proposed ordinance, which had bounced back and forth from the plan commission, the legislative committee and a citizen's committee.

THE CURRENT SWIMMING pool ordinance is contained in the Building Officials Conference on Housing in America (BOCHA) code, which is in effect in the village.

The trustees want to lift that section out of the code, revise it and distribute it to residents in a "layman's language bulletin," according to Armstrong.

HOWEVER, NO WORK will be done on the swimming pool ordinance until after Labor Day, when the swimming season is over for the summer, the trustees said.

The revision and the distribution of swimming pool regulations is needed because the current ordinance is being ignored by most residents who own swimming pools, according to Armstrong.

Also at the meeting the trustees were told that the condition of the Lake County sewage treatment plant "is in a state now where it's very bad," and would take as much as $50,000 to remodel it.

Frank Krebs, of the Hattis Associates, the village engineering consultant, said he is preparing recommendations on work to be done.

Krebs' statement was prompted by Trustee James Shirley who asked why a strong odor of sewage has been coming from the plant.

BILL DAVIS, director of public services, responded first saying that the sludge is being drawn off and is in the process of being dried. Davis said a deodorant is being applied to the sludge to make it smell like "sweet oranges."

To this, Shirley, a Lake County resident replied, "It sure doesn't smell like oranges to me."

In other action, Albert Frankel, of 880 Shady Grove Ln., was appointed to the police pension board and the trustees amended the subdivision ordinance increasing engineering fees which the developer must pay.

Only Minor Damage By Storm

The storm which blew through the Northwest suburbs Tuesday night did relatively little damage to the Wheeling and Buffalo Grove area.

High winds knocked down part of a wall of a building under construction in the industrial district at the end of Shepard Avenue in Wheeling.

The minor building damage was the only significant incident reported in Wheeling, although police said the storm set off a number of burglar alarms.

No incidents of flooding were reported to police in Wheeling.
There were scattered power failures in both villages, and one section of Buffalo Grove was without power for about four hours.
In the University Drive area, where the lights were out for four hours, lightning struck the chimney on a house at 14 University Dr. A number of basements were flooded in the area also, according to one resident.

President Nguyen Van Thieu conferred with U. S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker then told his provincial campaign workers the South Vietnamese presidential elections would be held as scheduled Oct. 3. Although the U. S. has adopted a hands-off policy, the embassy has made it no secret a one-man election could hurt prospects for continued U. S. economic aid.

Dozens of workers fleeing for safety when a bomb alert was sounded were trapped under tons of rubble when a powerful explosion ripped through the headquarters of Northern Ireland Electricity Board. One man was killed and 35 injured in the blast blamed by the British army on the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

International trade officials said that the United States could not expect concessions such as upward currency revaluation from other countries until it removed its new 10 per cent surcharge on imports or set a firm date for the removal.

The State

The Chicago Bar Association demanded that State's Attorney Edward Hanrahan take a leave of absence until he is tried on criminal charges of conspiring with 15 others to obstruct justice following a 1968 raid on a Black Panther headquarters. The CBA also urged Criminal Court Judge Joseph Power to "step out of the case," asking that a judge from outside of the county be brought in to handle any further proceedings.

The Nation

The government reported the first monthly decline in three years in family welfare recipients and attributed it to a cutback in state benefits for the needy. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said that during May the number of families on welfare rolls dropped by 16,000 — from 10,228,000 to 10,212,000.

Vice President Spiro Agnew launched a counter-attack on "nit-picking" Democrats and labor leaders who have criticized President Nixon's wage-price freeze. Agnew predicted one of Nixon's bitterest critics, AFL-CIO President George Meany will eventually go along with the President's program. Meanwhile, Meany and Leonard Woodcock, of the United Autoworkers, met to discuss legislative strategy as organized labor kept up its steady stream of criticism. Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield predicted a long Senate fight to reform Nixon's economic recovery plan.

The War

Communists blew up a portion of one of the biggest U. Lightning Bolt At 40 — Executives Face Unemployment

by KAREN RUGEN
For an executive in the $18,000 a year and over bracket, being laid off can be as jolting as a lightning bolt.
The sudden bounce from the security of a mahogany desk to the uncertainty of the search for a new job can throw a man into unemployment shell shock. Or it can hurl him into the "depths of despair."
Just ask Bill Richmond.
"When they first told me, I had this sinking feeling. Then I was thrown into shock. All of a sudden my colleagues seemed to think I had gotten the plague," said Richmond as he sat smoking a cigar in the backyard patio of his brick Mount Prospect home. "It took me many months to recuperate from that shock."

BILL RICHMOND, not his real name, is a mechanical engineer with a college degree. Working his way up from draftsman, he has headed engineering teams in the steel manufacturing business and has experience in product development, design and sales. During most of his nearly 20-year career, his earnings have reached to more than $15,000 a year.
Suddenly at age 43, he was asked to leave his job as chief engineer with a small Chicago firm. That was more than a year ago. He has been faced with unemployment ever since.

"For the first five months, I worked around the house. I was in a mild state of shock," said Richmond, a short, dark-haired bachelor who lives with and helps support his parents. "I didn't want to register for unemployment; I didn't want to receive benefits from anybody."
The absence of a weekly paycheck finally pushed Richmond to the Illinois State Employment office. Lined up with other executives from the Northwestern suburbs, he stood in the Des Plaines office to make his unemployment claim. Each time he was sent upstairs to the employment service. And each time, he was turned away without a job.

"Finally they just told me to leave because as an engineer I had little chance of finding a job. They tried to help. But how can employers be hiring when they're laying off?" he said. "And I didn't want to leave my profession. I put too many years into my education for that — I'm a night school product."

Village Board Adopts '71 Tax Levy Ordinance

Palatine's 1971 tax levy ordinance, which should keep taxes next year about the same as this year, was formally adopted Monday by the Palatine Village Board.
The ordinance calls for an increase of approximately .017 per $100 assessed valuation over the 1970 tax rate, developing a projected 1971 tax rate of .5636.
"As near as we can tell, the tax rates next year would be about the same as this year because of an increase in the total assessed valuation," Mayor Jack Meedie said. The tax rates are based on a projected village assessed valuation of $102 million compared to the 1970 valuation of $97.2 million, an increase of about five per cent.
The rate will be collected from Palatine residents next spring after tax bills are received.

Under the projected rate of the levy, property assessed at $10,000 would be taxed at $56.36 for all municipal services. Of this amount, $23 would go to the public library, the largest of the several funds included in the village budget.
According to figures calculated by Village Mgr. Barton Braun, rate increases are projected for village Social Security and employee annuity funds so that a deficiency in these areas built up over several years can be eliminated. Larger expenditures for Social Security have occurred than were previously anticipated in other tax levy authorizations.
The village corporate and general fund will remain at approximately the same level, although slight increases are projected in the civil defense fund and school crossing guard fund.

An additional crossing guard at the intersection of Rose and Palatine roads and payment of warning sirens and an emergency generator for civil defense necessitated the two minor increases.
Figures for the 1971 tax levy ordinance are based on the current year's budget. However, tax collections based on the 1971 levy will be the money available for next year's operating budget. According to Braun, any adjustment which may be made in these tax rates will not affect current operations, but will have to be taken into consideration in the formulation of next year's budget.
In 1968, the total municipal village tax rate was .436 per $100 assessed valuation, in 1969 it was .490 and in 1970 it was .538.

Study Slow Teacher Pacts

Richard Martwick, county superintendent of schools, Tuesday reported his office was investigating delays and breaks in teacher salary negotiations.
Charging that "inflammatory statements" had been issued by both sides since the announcement of President

Nixon's wage price freeze, Martwick said he saw a threat to "good faith negotiations."
"The President made it clear that the decree cannot be used as an excuse or a bludgeon. Therefore, we must not allow teachers or school board to either delay, break off or make a sham of negotiations," he said.
He reported his office had taken several steps, including:
—Offering to make available his personnel to aid negotiations;
—Insisting "both teachers' representatives and school boards resist inflammatory and irresponsible statements;"
—Promising to forward findings from any investigation to the Federal authorities for prosecution.
Martwick, speaking at a press conference in his offices in Chicago's Civic Center, was pressed by reporters to name individuals who had threatened to break off negotiations.
HIS LEGAL COUNSEL, Normal Finkel, responded to the flurry of questions by stating, "We don't want to come down on either side," and that the office's purpose was "conciliatory."
Martwick was later asked if the statement was a "subtle threat" for districts to shape up. "Yes, I'd rather you'd say 'conciliatory' than a 'threat,'" he said.
Finkel said the office has the power to enter a teacher-board dispute to determine the facts, and then report those findings to the state superintendent, and that the office can act as a counsel to "various school personnel."

He asserted, however, the office was not planning to take over the running of schools, adding that the office had the moral authority to publicize facts leading to possible federal prosecution.
After the conference, Martwick said he hoped teacher negotiations were settled by the last week of office.
He said that three persons in his office — Finkel, director of human relations, William McGhee and teacher scholarship and liaisons director Dale Love — would be responsible for the action.
Martwick stressed his office has no power over teachers' unions, but that he had the "tremendous power" of fact-finding in conflicts between teachers and school boards.
Finkel said the office has received communications indicating that in some districts negotiations were not continuing in good faith, although he would not identify any groups. Martwick reported 54 districts in Cook County remained without contracts for the 1971-72 school year, and that there was a good possibility that groups did not want to come up with a satisfactory agreement at this time.

Cracker Barrel

ALMOST A RECORD. The Palatine Village Board practically raced through its meeting this week, concluding all business and reports in 29 minutes. Although a quickie, the meeting missed breaking the all-time speed record by a few minutes. Better luck next week.
HOTTEST SPOT IN TOWN. Standing just 10 minutes on the corner of Broadway and Johnson one evening this week proved to be an educational experience — no one reads signs. Within the short amount of time, three separate cars turned the wrong way into a one-way street, with the police station less than one block away.

PRACTICING THEIR ACT for Sunday's ice show, "Summer On Ice," are Kathy Pierce, 11, and Mike Meyer, 12.

'Summer On Ice' Scheduled Sunday

"Summer on Ice" is the theme of Sunday's ice show at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex.
Featuring youngsters and some older skaters who participated this summer in five ten-week learn-to-skate and figure skating programs, the show is the climax of the summer program.
Approximately 100 skaters ranging in age from four to over 40 have been working on the program for the past month.
Thirty-five different acts will be performed with approximately 15 solos.

Four amateur champions will also perform solo numbers.
The program is divided into two parts with "Summer in the City" the title of the first half and "Summer at the County Fair" the theme of the second.
Highlights of the show, which will be performed at 2:30 and 7:30 p.m., are "Oklahoma," "Sesame Street" and "Bugler's Holiday." "Big Spender" will feature a trio of girls who arranged their own choreography.
Teachers of the summer ice program and choreographers for the acts were Pat Gulbransen, Cindy Watson, Patty Burns, Carol Edwards, Jackie Diemenn and Bob Gorenson. All of the teachers are members of the Professional Skaters Guild.

The ice show is sponsored by the Skating Club of Rolling Meadows Summer Figure Skating School and sanctioned by the United States Figure Skating Association.
Tickets for the show are 50 cents and may be purchased at the sports complex.

Her Recycling Is Daily Job

by JOANN VAN WYE

Recycling is a 24 hour a day job for Mrs. Alice McFeggan of 2044 Dove, Rolling Meadows.

"Once you get into something like this (recycling) you just can't get out," says Mrs. McFeggan.

In she is, Mrs. McFeggan is recycling chairman of the Pollution and Environmental Problems and is a member of the Rolling Meadows Recycling, Ecology and Beautification Committee.

While she has been personally interested in ecology for several years, her involvement on a community level started approximately a year ago.

She explained that it was the holiday season and she had just finished entertaining a large group of people and was taking the garbage out. She was suddenly appalled at all of the glass jars and bottles she was hauling out to the curb.

The wheels started turning and she contacted nine families and asked them to bring her their glass containers when they were finished with them. It was only a matter of a week before she had gathered 2,000 pounds of glass. She expanded to 15 families following the success. At this point, her garage had become the drop-off station for so many families that she has lost count. In addition to glass, people drop off newspapers and tin.

WHILE HER GARAGE has become the half way house between individual homes and recycling stations, Mrs. McFeggan is hesitant to take any credit. She says most of the credit should go to the young people of the community who have amazed her with their enthusiasm about ecology.

With Mrs. McFeggan's prodding, several youth groups and individual youngsters have become interested in recycling. Her house is the first one contacted by any group having some kind of a recycling drive. She figures that what she has recycled through her house alone this year would have been enough to fill five houses.

Mrs. McFeggan has also encouraged youngsters to personally meet with city officials and local businessmen to get help in their recycling drives.

"Without my young people to back me up, I could never recycle as much as I do," said Mrs. McFeggan. She says that local youngsters come over to her house and flatten cans, remove labels from glass and cans and remove metal rings from twist-off bottle caps.

Mrs. McFeggan's interest in ecology goes beyond recycling on a personal level, but she has tried to concentrate her efforts in one area on the public level so she doesn't spread herself too thin.

Eventually Mrs. McFeggan would like to ease off handling so much "garbage" out of her garage and see close convenient recycling stations located in the area where people could take things to be recycled.

Lincoln County Study Unit Grows

State Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, Rep. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and Mayor Fred Downey of Hoffman Estates are the last to join the list of members on the New County Study Committee (NCS) investigating the possible disannexation of six Northwest suburban townships from Cook County to form Lincoln County.

With the addition of the three names, the NCS committee now involves a total of nine representatives from the six-township area of Barrington, Palatine, Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Hanover.

Graham and Regner were chosen to serve on the committee because of their background in legislative procedures and the information they can provide in researching the new county idea, according to Wendell Jones, a Palatine trustee and co-ordinator of the Lincoln County plan.

Downey could serve as a municipal liaison for the committee through his mayoral responsibilities, Jones said.

Besides Graham, Regner and Downey, the committee includes Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher, LeMone Stitt and W. Richard Impey, both Arlington Heights attorneys, Mrs. Glen-Ann Jicha, former Palatine Township Republican committeewoman, and Merwin Soper and Jones, Palatine trustees.

"Hopefully we'll be able to meet within the next two to three weeks for an initial organizational session," Jones said yesterday. He suggested the nine-member NCS committee break down into subgroups to study various aspects of a new county.

Possible subgroups to conduct further research include groups to look into establishment of a new court system and police structure, financial burdens of forming a new county and taxation and legal questions in seceding from an existing county.

"We won't ask any residents to sign petitions unless the committee first determines whether action to form a new county is even feasible," Jones said. "Once that is determined, the next logical step would be to form a larger group than the NCS committee to go out and get the 60,000 names for the petition."

Jones and Soper first proposed the Lincoln County idea early this month when they issued an eight-page report on the rationale for the disannexation. Under their six-township area, a new county government would be created for an estimated combined population of 350,000, which would make the government more local and representative, the report stated.

Area Exec Talks To President Nixon

A Palatine executive who is national director of the Recreational Vehicle Institute, Inc., attended a White House briefing July 27 on the general national economic picture.

F. M. Radigan, who lives with his wife and son at 310 N. Clark Dr., was one of 150 representatives of the largest trade associations in America. Radigan represented 440 dealers of recreational equipment such as campers, motor homes and travel trailers.

Radigan was also at the White House to talk with President Richard Nixon and his aides about the upcoming 200th birthday of the United States. Radigan's organization will provide vehicles for "Open House U.S.A." "the biggest birthday party ever held," according to Radigan.

The program is designed to bring over to the U.S. about 100,000 foreigners to tour the country in the recreational vehicles, Radigan said. About 1,000 vehicles will be used, all donated by the association's members.

THE VISITORS will travel in caravans of 25 vehicles each, and will go to such places as the Florida Everglades, the Grand Canyon and the Mississippi River. The visitors will also see the big cities, including Chicago, Radigan said. Hotels, travel agencies and cities are cooperating everywhere, he said.

The governor of Virginia has okayed a trial run next year, Radigan said, when travel agents from Europe will come here and take the proposed journey. Hopefully, he said, they will go home and encourage people to come here in 1976.

"The program is a tremendous effort to promote peace and understanding between our people and people of other lands," Radigan said.

The briefing was held, Radigan said, primarily because the trade associations are unique in that they reach back to all kinds of businesses. Among those briefing the executives were Secretary of Housing and Urban Development George Romney, and presidential advisor Donald Rumsfeld.

A number of topics were discussed Radigan said, including tax aspects for non-profit organizations and employment assistance for Vietnam veterans.

ARLINGTON PARK Race Track officials have not commented on the opposition now mounting over the Yama-Sept. 10 at the track. Residents and officials alike from Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are hoping to prevent this race, or at least any future races.

Cycle Race Halt Is Sought

Officials and residents of Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are taking steps to prevent a motorcycle race planned for the night of Sept. 10 at Arlington Park Race Track.

The opposition stems from several reasons, including fears that motorized racing may become a continuous event at the track, concern over excessive noise the race will cause, the "inconvenience" the bright night lights at the track will cause nearby homeowners and the "type of people motorcycle racing might usher into town."

Some Arlington Heights officials are taking preliminary steps to block the event, or at least prevent future racing of this type.

Race track officials have made no comment on the event or the opposition to it. One spokesman, however, did say, "this type of event has been held all over the country many times before with very few problems such as these people are talking about."

TRUSTEES MRS. Alice Harms and Ted Salinsky are attempting to gain the support of one other trustee opposed to the event so a special meeting of the village board can be called to examine what the village can legally do to halt the program.

Although Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the race was permitted under current village regulations, other trustees have asked and are now awaiting a legal opinion on the subject from Village Atty. Jack Siegel.

The question of using the night lights, which the Illinois Racing Board did not permit for the thoroughbred racing, was cleared up by Hanson who said the use of lights for events other than horse racing is permitted by the state.

Hanson also said the village will receive 3 per cent of the total gate receipts. Tickets for the event range in price from $4 to $8.

Salinsky said, "If this is a permitted use then someone really bungled the job because the next thing we'll have is demolition derby out there."

Mrs. Harms said, "I'm opposed to this on the basis that if this is allowed how could we prevent possible expansion of use other than those existing at the time of annexation?" which was in 1969.

THE RACE IS the Yamaha Gold Cup Motorcycle Race offering a $15,000 purse and gold trophy for the estimated 200 riders who will participate in the 10-event program which starts at 8 p.m. on Sept. 10.

300 Bottles Of Beer On Wall . . .

One hundred bottles of beer on the wall aren't enough for big Ed.

With 6-foot 6-inch Ed Hauser, the singing doesn't get under way until at least 300 bottles.

Hauser is the proud collector of 328 dusty old beer bottles all stacked neatly on the top shelf in the liquor section of Elk Grove Drugs Inc., in the Park and Shop at Higgins and Arlington Heights roads.

You name the beer and big Ed has got the bottle. If he doesn't have it he wants it.

Hauser says he enjoys collecting old bottles.

"It's the nostalgia, I guess. That's the trend nowadays."

There's a bottle of Bucket of Blood from Reno, Nev., Mickey's Malt Liquor, Elephant Malt Liquor, Rolling Rock Extra Pale, and Miller's (with the label of the little lady on the half moon).

Some brews are out of existence, says Hauser, citing Fox De Luxe.

Some brews few people have heard of, he says, naming Leinenkugel's of Wisconsin.

They come in green bottles, clear bottles and even an old ruby red Schlitz bottle Hauser says was too expensive to market. Most popular of course is the traditional brown bottle.

"Beer has to be in a colored bottle to protect it from the light," says Hauser, "or else it will go bad."

He adds, "I don't know why Miller's is bottled in a clear bottle. Maybe they have a special formula."

HAUSER BEGAN collecting bottles about four years ago after paging through a liquor magazine and reading a story of a fellow who collected miniature elephants for display in his store.

"So I decided to collect old beer bottles," he says.

"I've had an awful lotta help from people who bring 'em back from vacations," he says. "I also remind the beer truck drivers who visit the rural areas to be on the watch for any old bottles."

Hauser finds he remembers the people who give him bottles.

"There's one Neil Cooney (the local banker) gave me," he says, pointing to a North Star bottle from Minnesota.

He says he doesn't know what the collection is worth.

"I've had offers but I tell 'em I don't know what they're worth."

Hauser says he's branching out to whiskey bottles, but has only a few on the shelf, alongside an old wine press and heavy old cider jug.

The bottle collection is going rather slowly of late note that Hauser has bottles from about 35 states.

Smoking, Campus Policy On District's Agenda

President Nixon's executive order freezing salaries and discussion of a smoking and open campus policy will be on the High School Dist. 211 Board of Education agenda today at 8 p.m. at the administration center, 1715 S. Roselle Rd., Palatine.

With school scheduled to open Monday, the board will also be asked to make several decisions which affect the opening of school, namely revision of the grading system, and a transportation policy for high school students attending Harper College.

Residents living near William Fremd High School in Palatine appeared two weeks ago supporting establishment of an on-campus smoking area. A decision on whether to have a smoking area in any of the district's four high schools is expected tonight.

Administrators are asking the board to consider changing the grading system from a five-point system to a four-point plan to equalize general grade point averages with letter grades received for coursework.

In addition, bids for Hoffman Estates High School will be discussed and a resolution for sale of $3 million in bonds to begin construction of the school will be presented.

Long-range planning based on a proposed population and enrollment survey and the possibility of the district's bonding power being raised from five to six per cent will also be on the agenda. A constitutional proposal to set the bonding limit at six per cent is being proposed in the Illinois House.

From The Library

by the Staff of the Palatine Library

"Chairman Mao and My Millions" is one of the most interesting and unique books to arrive at the Palatine Public Library this week. What happens when 30 Europeans, each paying $100 a day, tour Communist China with 700 pounds of excess baggage? This story of the inevitable clash of cultures is told by Colette Modiano, French shepherd of this difficult flock, and operator of a French travel bureau. Delightful good humor prevails in the recounting of this tale.

Another new book has arrived this week for travel fans. Venturing into uncharted distances, and often out of communication for years, the great arctic explorers totally captured the imagination of the Victorian world. "Weird and Tragical Shores," by Chauncy C. Loomis, is the story of one of the most extraordinary of all the explorers, Charles Francis Hall, an Ohio businessman, who at age 38 deserted his business and family and set out on arctic adventures.

"Capone," by John Kobler, is a definitive biography of the world's most notorious gangster. Gangsterism and violence were part of his childhood and Capone exhibited early tendencies toward crime. Kobler has now written the intimate, dramatic, in-depth story of Capone, recreating both his public and private lives. A hypnotic presentation.

A NUMBER OF excellent fictional books have also arrived at the library this week, among them James Carver's "The Shadows in Go-Yeu." A South Vietnamese village and Lt. Daniel Marron arriving to replace the executive officer found dead of hundreds of tiny wounds. Much later Marron is still peeling away layers of suspicion and hate involving all personnel. The novel ends with his climatic confrontation with the shadowy secrets of Go-Yeu.

In "The Marbled Men," the time is 1949 and it is the height of the Greek Civil War. The result of this starkly told novel is intense drama and a new twist to the ancient story of war's innocent victims. It's by Aris Fakinos.

Compelling in its suspense, "A Question of Judgment" is a novel that builds with quiet inexorability to a taut courtroom trial where those things which had previously existed in shadows — a remote cottage and sadism — are brought before public scrutiny and the due process of law. In this story a young girl goes to her wholly miserable death. It's by Phyllis Brett Young, and it's new at the library this week.

Candy Criminal -No Charges

A most unusual "criminal" who allegedly has broken into four Inverness homes since June has been arrested by Palatine Police Officer Michael McDonald.

The odd thing about the crimes is that the only thing ever stolen from any of the expensive homes was candy.

McDonald arrested a 15-year-old boy who had been cutting the grass at the homes, according to Palatine Police Lt. Harold Nehmzow. The boy apparently broke into the homes while the owners were on vacation, Nehmzow said.

Nehmzow said the boy has a chemical imbalance which makes him allergic to corn starch, a common ingredient of candy, but nevertheless makes him crave the sweets. The imbalance is apparently hereditary, Nehmzow said, and both the boy's father and sister have it.

But, Nehmzow said, the boy is apparently the least able to control this craving, and the robberies resulted from it.

No charges have been placed against the boy yet, and Nehmzow said because of the unusual circumstances surrounding the crimes, the police will probably just make a "station adjustment" between the boy, his parents and the people whose homes were broken into.

Lightning Bolt At 40 — Executives Face Unemployment

by KAREN RUGEN
For an executive in the $15,000 a year and over bracket, being laid off can be as jolting as a lightning bolt.
The sudden bounce from the security of a mahogany desk to the uncertainty of the search for a new job can throw a man into unemployment shell shock. Or it can hurdle him into the "depths of despair."
Just ask Bill Richmond.
"When they first told me, I had this sinking feeling. Then I was thrown into shock. All of a sudden my colleagues seemed to think I had gotten the plague," said Richmond as he sat smoking a cigar in the backyard patio of his brick Mount Prospect home. "It took me many months to recuperate from that shock."

BILL RICHMOND, not his real name, is a mechanical engineer with a college degree. Working his way up from draftsman, he has headed engineering teams in the steel manufacturing business and has experience in product development, design and sales. During most of his nearly 20-year career, his earnings have reached to more than $15,000 a year. Suddenly at age 43, he was asked to leave his job as chief engineer with a small Chicago firm. That was more than a year ago. He has been faced with unemployment ever since.

"For the first five months, I worked around the house. I was in a mild state of shock," said Richmond, a short, dark-haired bachelor who lives with and helps support his parents. "I didn't want to register for unemployment; I didn't want to receive benefits from anybody."
The absence of a weekly paycheck finally pushed Richmond to the Illinois State Employment office. Lined up with other executives from the Northwestern suburbs, he stood in the Des Plaines office to make his unemployment claim. Each time he was sent upstairs to the employment service. And each time, he was turned away without a job.

"Finally they just told me to leave because as an engineer I had little chance of finding a job. They tried to help. But how can employers be hiring when they're laying off?" he said. "And I didn't want to leave my profession. I put too many years into my education for that — I'm a night school product."

Rezoning Of $10 Million Office Complex Approved

Rolling Meadows City Council approved rezoning for a $10 million office complex in the city's southern industrial park.
Gould Inc., manufacturer of electronic instruments and systems, was granted a special zoning classification for use of 40 acres of land between Golf Road and the Northwest Tollway. The zoning allows an office complex, research and assembly facilities as well as hotels, financial institutions, retail sales restaurant and cocktail lounges.
The approval came after a lengthy city council discussion Tuesday night with Mayor Roland Meyer casting the deciding vote in favor of the project. Opposition to the zoning change was led by Ald. Thomas Scanlan who asked for more specific plans before the rezoning was approved.

Roger Morley, Gould vice-president of finance, acknowledged that final plans have not been drawn up but said an office building to house Gould's international headquarters will be the first phase of construction. He said other tenants will be sought for the office building which may be 20-stories high.
MORLEY ADDED THE office building will be completed in about five years. All other projects, such as a bank and retail stores, would be constructed after the office building is completed.
The new Rolling Meadows zoning classification was patterned after the one in Oakbrook and Morley has stated he hopes for a project similar to the elaborate Oakbrook shopping center.
Gould Inc. presently leases space near O'Hare Airport and plans to move all the administrative offices to the Rolling Meadows site. About 70 persons are employed at the company's O'Hare offices.

Research and warehouse facilities may also be moved to Rolling Meadows from St. Paul and Cleveland but manufacturing of equipment will remain at the 40 plants throughout the United States.
Gould National Batteries and Clevite Company were merged into Gould Inc. in 1969. Gould has been named the principal contractor for the Navy's Mark 48 torpedo and assembly is now being done in Cleveland.
The torpedo project is expected to boost the more than $350 million in company profits last year. Rolling Meadows officials said much of the Gould billing will be made from its new international headquarters here with large sales tax revenue being returned to the city.

Volleyball Players Refuse To Quit

Come Hail Or High Water...

With directions on what to do if a tornado was spotted being shouted from the side, the ten die hard volleyball players

Barely able to move because they were so drenched, the players refused to let the storm stand in the way of their attempt to break the world volleyball marathon record of 126 hours.
The storm, complete with sheets of rain, high winds, thunder and lightning, tornado warnings and hail reaching almost one-half inch in diameter, hit while the seniors, both college and high school, were on the court.
Some left for drier areas but substitutes were quickly retrieved and Meadows Baptist Church was able to rally together six players while Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church mustered together four.
With the game in its 70th hour and the third day of play almost completed, the advisors said they didn't have enough nerve to call it off. Shelter was provided for the spectators and everyone was given directions on what to do in case of a tornado.
SLIPPING AND sliding in mud up to their ankles the players donned sheets of plastic for some protection.

By 8 p.m. when the storm had subsided the players and spectators were back out in force. The father and son hour went on as scheduled at 9 p.m.
The playing area resembled a quagmire more than a volleyball court for most of the night and there was a miniature lake along the net. Sand was hauled in to pour on the court and by mid-morning things had started drying out.
Only remaining problem is a horrendous odor that developed when the dry sand was poured on the quagmire. Sunny skies provided, this should be cleared away with a little airing.
Storms are hardly new to the two groups. The teams started battling it out Saturday night exactly 15 minutes after another severe storm had started.
The game is scheduled to go for 144 hours ending Saturday night at 9 p.m.
By the way, Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church was able to retain its lead through all this. At 1:30 p.m. yesterday Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church led Meadows Baptist Church 3,567 to 3,510.

PRACTICING THEIR ACT for Sunday's ice show, "Summer On Ice," are Kathy Pierce, 11, and Mike Meyer, 12.

'Summer On Ice' Scheduled Sunday

"Summer on Ice" is the theme of Sunday's ice show at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex.
Featuring youngsters and some older skaters who participated this summer in five ten-week learn-to-skate and figure skating classes, the show is the climax of the summer program.
Approximately 100 skaters ranging in age from four to over 40 have been working on the program for the past month. Thirty-five different acts will be performed with approximately 15 solos.

Four amateur champions will also perform solo numbers.
The program is divided into two parts with "Summer in the City" the title of the first half and "Summer at the County Fair" the theme of the second.
Highlights of the show, which will be performed at 2:30 and 7:30 p.m., are "Oklahoma," "Sesame Street" and "Bugler's Holiday." "Big Spender" will feature a trio of girls who arranged their own choreography.
Teachers of the summer ice program and choreographers for the acts were Pat Gulbranson, Cindy Watson, Patty Burns, Carol Edwards, Jackie Diemenn and Bob Gorenson. All of the teachers are members of the Professional Skaters Guild.

The ice show is sponsored by the Skating Club of Rolling Meadows Summer Figure Skating School and sanctioned by the United States Figure Skating Association.
Tickets for the show are 50 cents and may be purchased at the sports complex.

This Morning In Brief

The World

President Nguyen Van Thieu conferred with U. S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker then told his provincial campaign workers the South Vietnamese presidential elections would be held as scheduled Oct. 3. Although the U. S. has adopted a hands-off policy, the embassy has made it no secret a one-man election could hurt prospects for continued U. S. economic aid.

Dozens of workers fleeing for safety when a bomb alert was sounded were trapped under tons of rubble when a powerful explosion ripped through the headquarters of Northern Ireland Electricity Board. One man was killed and 25 injured in the blast blamed by the British army on the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

International trade officials said that the United States could not expect concessions such as upward currency revaluation from other countries until it removed its new 10 per cent surcharge on imports or set a firm date for the removal.

The State

The Chicago Bar Association demanded that State's Attorney Edward Hanrahan take a leave of absence until he is tried on criminal charges of conspiring with 13 others to obstruct justice following a 1969 raid on a Black Panther headquarters. The CBA also urged Criminal Court Judge Joseph Power to "step out of the case," asking that a judge from outside of the county be brought in to handle any further proceedings.

The Nation

The government reported the first monthly decline in three years in family welfare recipients and attributed it to a cutback in state benefits for the needy. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said that during May the number of families on welfare rolls dropped by 16,000 — from 10,228,000 to 10,212,000.

Vice President Spiro Agnew launched a counter-attack on "nit-picking" Democrats and labor leaders who have criticized President Nixon's wage-price freeze. Agnew predicted one of Nixon's bitterest critics, AFL-CIO President George Meany will eventually go along with the President's program. Meanwhile, Meany and Leonard Woodcock, of the United Autoworkers, met to discuss legislative strategy as organized labor kept up its steady stream of criticism. Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield predicted a long Senate fight to reform Nixon's economic recovery plan.

The War

Communists blew up a portion of one of the biggest U. S. ammunition dumps in South Vietnam and shelled five other American bases in what military spokesmen said could be the opening of a major pre-election offensive by the Viet Cong. The Cambodian high command reported 300 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed in eight hours of fierce fighting along Highway 6 north of Phnom Penh.

Her Recycling Is Daily Job

by JOANN VAN WYE

Recycling is a 24 hour a day job for Mrs. Alice McFeggan of 2444 Dove, Rolling Meadows.

"Once you get into something like this (recycling) you just can't get out," says Mrs. McFeggan.

In she is, Mrs. McFeggan is recycling chairman of the Pollution and Environmental Problems and is a member of the Rolling Meadows Recycling, Ecology and Beautification Committee.

While she has been personally interested in ecology for several years, her involvement on a community level started approximately a year ago.

She explained that it was the holiday season and she had just finished entertaining a large group of people and was taking the garbage out. She was suddenly appalled at all of the glass jars and bottles she was hauling out to the curb.

The wheels started turning and she contacted nine families and asked them to bring her their glass containers when they were finished with them. It was only a matter of a week before she had gathered 2,000 pounds of glass. She expanded to 15 families following the success. At this point, her garage had become the drop-off station for so many families that she has lost count. In addition to glass, people drop off newspapers and tin.

WHILE HER GARAGE has become the half way house between individual homes and recycling stations, Mrs. McFeggan is hesitant to take any credit. She says most of the credit should go to the young people of the community who have amazed her with their enthusiasm about ecology.

With Mrs. McFeggan's prodding, several youth groups and individual youngsters have become interested in recycling. Her house is the first one contacted by any group having some kind of a recycling drive. She figures that what she has recycled through her house alone this year would have been enough to fill five houses.

Mrs. McFeggan has also encouraged youngsters to personally meet with city officials and local businessmen to get help in their recycling drives.

"Without my young people to back me up, I could never recycle as much as I do," said Mrs. McFeggan. She says that local youngsters come over to her house and flatten cans, remove labels from glass and cans and remove metal rings from twist-off bottle caps.

Mrs. McFeggan's interest in ecology goes beyond recycling on a personal level, but she has tried to concentrate her efforts in one area on the public level so she doesn't spread herself too thin.

Eventually Mrs. McFeggan would like to ease off handling so much "garbage" out of her garage and see close convenient recycling stations located in the area where people could take things to be recycled.

Lincoln County Study Unit Grows

State Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, Rep. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and Mayor Fred Downey of Hoffman Estates are the last to join the list of members on the New County Study Committee (NCS) investigating the possible disincorporation of six Northwest suburban townships from Cook County to form Lincoln County.

With the addition of the three names, the NCS committee now involves a total of nine representatives from the six-township area of Barrington, Palatine, Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Hanover.

Graham and Regner were chosen to serve on the committee because of their background in legislative procedures and the information they can provide in researching the new county idea, according to Wendell Jones, a Palatine trustee and co-ordinator of the Lincoln County plan.

Downey could serve as a municipal liaison for the committee through his mayoral responsibilities, Jones said.

Besides Graham, Regner and Downey, the committee includes Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher, LeMone Stitt and W. Richard Impey, both Arlington Heights attorneys, Mrs. Glen Ann Jicha, former Palatine Township Republican committeewoman, and Merwin Soper and Jones, Palatine trustees.

"Hopefully we'll be able to meet within the next two to three weeks for an initial organizational session," Jones said yesterday. He suggested the nine-member NCS committee break down into subgroups to study various aspects of a new county.

Possible subgroups to conduct further research include groups to look into establishment of a new court system and police structure, financial burdens of forming a new county and taxation and legal questions in seceding from an existing county.

"We won't ask any residents to sign petitions unless the committee first determines whether action to form a new county is even feasible," Jones said. "Once that is determined, the next logical step would be to form a larger group than the NCS committee to go out and get the 60,000 names for the petition."

Jones and Soper first proposed the Lincoln County idea early this month when they issued an eight-page report on the rationale for the disincorporation. Under their six-township area, a new county government would be created for an estimated combined population of 350,000, which would make the government more local and representative, the report stated.

Area Exec Talks To President Nixon

A Palatine executive who is national director of the Recreational Vehicle Institute, Inc., attended a White House briefing July 27 on the general national economic picture.

F. M. Radigan, who lives with his wife and son at 310 N. Clark Dr., was one of 150 representatives of the largest trade associations in America. Radigan represented 440 dealers of recreational equipment such as campers, motor homes and travel trailers.

Radigan was also at the White House to talk with President Richard Nixon and his aides about the upcoming 200th birthday of the United States. Radigan's organization will provide vehicles for "Open House U.S.A." "the biggest birthday party ever held," according to Radigan.

The program is designed to bring over to the U.S. about 100,000 foreigners to tour the country in the recreational vehicles, Radigan said. About 1,000 vehicles will be used, all donated by the association's members.

THE VISITORS will travel in caravans of 25 vehicles each, and will go to such places as the Florida Everglades, the Grand Canyon and the Mississippi River. The visitors will also see the big cities, including Chicago, Radigan said. Hotels, travel agencies and cities are cooperating everywhere, he said.

The governor of Virginia has okayed a trial run next year, Radigan said, when travel agents from Europe will come here and take the proposed journey. Hopefully, he said, they will go home and encourage people to come here in 1976.

"The program is a tremendous effort to promote peace and understanding between our people and people of other lands," Radigan said.

The briefing was held, Radigan said, primarily because the trade associations are unique in that they reach back to all kinds of businesses. Among those briefing the executives were Secretary of Housing and Urban Development George Romney, and presidential advisor Donald Rumsfeld.

A number of topics were discussed, Radigan said, including tax aspects for non-profit organizations and employment assistance for Vietnam veterans.

ARLINGTON PARK Race Track officials have not commented on the opposition now mounting over the Yamaha Gold Cup Motorcycle Race planned for 8 p.m. Sept. 10 at the track. Residents and officials alike from Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are hoping to prevent this race, or at least any future races.

Cycle Race Halt Is Sought

Officials and residents of Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are taking steps to prevent a motorcycle race planned for the night of Sept. 10 at Arlington Park Race Track.

The opposition stems from several reasons, including fears that motorized racing may become a continuous event at the track, concern over excessive noise the race will cause, the "inconvenience" the bright night lights at the track will cause nearby homeowners and the "type of people motorcycle racing might usher into town."

Some Arlington Heights officials are taking preliminary steps to block the event, or at least prevent future racing of this type.

Race track officials have made no comment on the event or the opposition to it. One spokesman, however, did say, "this type of event has been held all over the country many times before with very few problems such as these people are talking about."

TRUSTEES MRS. Alice Harms and Ted Salinsky are attempting to gain the support of one other trustee opposed to the event so a special meeting of the village board can be called to examine what the village can legally do to halt the program.

Although Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the race was permitted under current village regulations, other trustees have asked and are now awaiting a legal opinion on the subject from Village Atty. Jack Sigel.

The question of using the night lights, which the Illinois Racing Board did not permit for the thoroughbred racing, was cleared up by Hanson who said the use of lights for events other than horse racing is permitted by the state.

Hanson also said the village will receive 3 per cent of the total gate receipts. Tickets for the event range in price from $4 to $6.

Salinsky said, "If this is a permitted use then someone really bungled the job because the next thing we'll have is demolition derbies out there."

Mrs. Harms said, "I'm opposed to this on the basis that if this is allowed how could we prevent possible expansion of use other than those existing at the time of annexation?" which was in 1969.

THE RACE is the Yamaha Gold Cup Motorcycle Race offering a $15,000 purse and gold trophy for the estimated 200 riders who will participate in the 16-event program which starts at 8 p.m. on Sept. 10.

They come in green bottles, clear bottles and even an old ruby red Schlitz bottle Hauser says was too expensive to market. Most popular of course is the traditional brown bottle.

"Beer has to be in a colored bottle to protect it from the light," says Hauser, "or else it will go bad."

He adds, "I don't know why Miller's is bottled in a clear bottle. Maybe they have a special formula."

HAUSER BEGAN collecting bottles about four years ago after paging through a liquor magazine and reading a story of a fellow who collected miniature elephants for display in his store.

"So I decided to collect old beer bottles," he says.

300 Bottles Of Beer On Wall . . .

One hundred bottles of beer on the wall aren't enough for big Ed.

With 6-foot 6-inch Ed Hauser, the singing doesn't get under way until at least 300 bottles.

Hauser is the proud collector of 328 dusty old beer bottles all stacked neatly on the top shelf in the liquor section of Elk Grove Drugs Inc., in the Park and Shop at Higgins and Arlington Heights roads.

You name the beer and big Ed has got the bottle. If he doesn't have it he wants it.

Hauser says he enjoys collecting old bottles.

"It's the nostalgia, I guess. That's the trend nowadays."

There's a bottle of Bucket of Blood from Reno, Nev., Mickey's Malt Liquor, Elephant Malt Liquor, Rolling Rock Extra Pale, and Miller's (with the label of the little lady on the half moon).

Some brews are out of existence, says Hauser, citing Fox De Luxe.

Some brews few people have heard of, he says, naming Leinenkugel's of Wisconsin.

They come in green bottles, clear bottles and even an old ruby red Schlitz bottle Hauser says was too expensive to market. Most popular of course is the traditional brown bottle.

Smoking, Campus Policy On District's Agenda

President Nixon's executive order freezing salaries and discussion of a smoking and open campus policy will be on the High School Dist. 211 Board of Education agenda today at 8 p.m. at the administration center, 1715 S. Roselle Rd., Palatine.

With school scheduled to open Monday, the board will also be asked to make several decisions which affect the opening of school, namely revision of the grading system, and a transportation policy for high school students attending Harper College.

Residents living near William Fremd High School in Palatine appeared two weeks ago supporting establishment of an on-campus smoking area. A decision on whether to have a smoking area in any of the district's four high schools is expected tonight.

Administrators are asking the board to consider changing the grading system from a five-point system to a four-point plan to equalize general grade point averages with letter grades received for coursework.

"I've had an awful lotta help from people who bring 'em back from vacations," he says. "I also remind the beer truck drivers who visit the rural areas to be on the watch for any old bottles."

Hauser finds he remembers the people who give him bottles.

"There's one Neil Conney (the local banker) gave me," he says, pointing to a North Star bottle from Minnesota.

He says he doesn't know what the collection is worth.

"I've had offers but I tell 'em I don't know what they're worth."

Hauser says he's branching out to whiskey bottles, but has only a few on the shelf, alongside an old wine press and heavy old cider jug.

The bottle collection is going rather slowly of late note that Hauser has bottles from about 35 states.

"It's getting harder and harder," he laments. "I'm still looking for an old Atlas Prager bottle."

In addition, bids for Hoffman Estates High School will be discussed and a resolution for sale of $3 million in bonds to begin construction of the school will be presented.

Long-range planning based on a proposed population and enrollment survey and the possibility of the district's bonding power being raised from five to six per cent will also be on the agenda. A constitutional proposal to set the bonding limit at six per cent is being proposed in the Illinois House.

Oh! to be young again and have the advantage of reading the books being published today for young people!

Seven year olds will find fun and scientific information in a new book 'Chemistry In The Kitchen' A kitchen is the only workroom where it's important to know why soap helps water to clean one's hands. One can learn about molecules, about elements, compounds and mixtures and find out why there are bubbles in soda pop. Simple experiments are outlined with such everyday objects as a glass of water, a soap pad, an apple and a piece of aluminum foil.

Another title to appeal to the seven to nine-year-old reader is 'How To Make A Cloud.' For instance, crows clouds are made of tiny ice crystals and they are always high in the sky. Cumulus clouds are puffy, with knobs and bumps, domes and hills. They are hardly ever rain clouds. In addition to an explanation of the clouds, there are experiments for making rain, hail, snow and smog.

Irving Adler's 'Atomic Energy' traces the use of atomic energy from the 1945 destruction of Hiroshima to the construction of atomic power plants which produce electricity of factories, farms and homes. Dr. Adler explains the production of atomic energy and the growing need for it as a source of fuel.

'SHELF PETS' or 'How to Take Care of Small Wild Animals' is most welcome to the library's shelves. Requests come daily about feeding hamsters, housing habits of guinea pigs and what size aquarium is needed for guppies.

Julian May as author, and Rod Ruth as illustrator, have combined their skills in producing a delightful travel book for six year olds. The author lives in a home overlooking the DuPage River. She has made many trips to the Florida Keys where she has studied the strange and interesting forms of plant and animal life that make their homes on the islands off the Florida Coast.

Young readers will learn of tiny deer that swim from island to island, and great white herons and pink spoonbills that fly overhead.

The islands are unlike any other in North America for they are alive. They are made of dead coral which forms rocks known as a reef. The Keys were built 100,000 years ago.

Lightning Bolt At 40 — Executives Face Unemployment

by KAREN RUGEN
For an executive in the $15,000 a year and over bracket, being laid off can be as jolting as a lightning bolt.
The sudden bounce from the security of a mahogany desk to the uncertainty of the search for a new job can throw a man into unemployment shell shock. Or it can hurdle him into the "depths of despair."
Just ask Bill Richmond.
"When they first told me, I had this sinking feeling. Then I was thrown into shock. All of a sudden my colleagues seemed to think I had gotten the plague," said Richmond as he sat smoking a cigar in the backyard patio of his brick Mount Prospect home. "It took me many months to recuperate from that shock."

BILL RICHMOND, not his real name, is a mechanical engineer with a college degree. Working his way up from draftsman, he has headed engineering teams in the steel manufacturing business and has experience in product development, design and sales. During most of his nearly 20-year career, his earnings have reached to more than $15,000 a year.
Suddenly at age 43, he was asked to leave his job as chief engineer with a small Chicago firm. That was more than a year ago. He has been faced with unemployment ever since.

"For the first five months, I worked around the house. I was in a mild state of shock," said Richmond, a short, dark-haired bachelor who lives with and helps support his parents. "I didn't want to register for unemployment; I didn't want to receive benefits from anybody."
The absence of a weekly paycheck finally pushed Richmond to the Illinois State Employment office. Lined up with other executives from the Northwestern suburbs, he stood in the Des Plaines office to make his unemployment claim. Each time he was sent upstairs to the employment service. And each time, he was turned away without a job.
"Finally they just told me to leave because as an engineer I had little chance of finding a job. They tried to help. But how can employers be hiring when they're laying off?" he said. "And I didn't want to leave my profession. I put too many years into my education for that — I'm a night school product."

Prepare New School Rental Contract During 'Freeze'

School Dist. 28 attorneys will draw up a new contract for rental of the River Road School, at Maryville Academy.
At a meeting Tuesday, Maryville and Dist. 28 officials decided that the contract will be in effect only until the national rent freeze ends. Another contract will probably be negotiated later to cover the remainder of the school year.
The Rev. John Smith, superintendent at Maryville, proposed the first contract carry over last year's rent of $5,000 and transfer the responsibility of general maintenance and repair to the school district. The school board has made no commitment to accept the proposal, but plans to submit it to its attorney and state officials for approval. The district attorney will draw up a contract based on whatever is deemed acceptable in Rev. Smith's proposal.
Reverend Smith announced earlier this summer that Maryville can not pay the cost of maintaining the school with $5,000. He called for a rent hike of $17,000, based on a charge of $1.25 per square foot. After meeting with district officials, Rev. Smith lowered the rent to $14,500, which includes $9,500 for repairs.
The more than 300 Maryville children have attended district schools since Catholic Charities, an arm of the Chicago Catholic Archdiocese announced in 1968 it could no longer afford to educate the children. The district is reimbursed 100 per cent by the state for all tuition costs (including building rent) incurred in educating the Maryville children.
Approximately 125 Maryville children are attending district schools outside of the academy, while 150 are attending the River Road School at Maryville.
At the meeting Tuesday, Harold Haney, board president, told the Maryville officials, "we realize that under state law it is our responsibility to educate the Maryville children. The state does reimburse our bill, but unfortunately not till after we pay it. At this point the board is looking for the reasoning behind the increase in cost."
IN EXPLAINING the rent hike, Rev. Smith said, "we charged a lower rent during the first two years, perhaps because of our guilty conscience. We agree it was a shock for you to include the Maryville children in the district. We appreciate the job the River Road School is doing, yet Maryville has a responsibility to not take on Dist. 28's expenses. I don't think people realize what Maryville is putting out for the River Road School operation."
Repairs proposed for the coming year could total $21,000, according to Rev. Smith. These costs include $1,700 for painting, $6,000 for new windows, $4,000 for additional electrical wiring and room heaters and $9,000 for floor repairs. The second and third repairs are necessary to provide adequate heating in the classrooms, said the Maryville superintendent. In addition, he estimated general maintenance and utilities cost about $12,000 annually.
"Considering these costs, I don't think the $17,000 rent fee is unfair," added Rev. Smith. When the school board was first notified of the rent hike, some members were reluctant to pay it. Now, if the board accepts Smith's last proposal (responsibility for all general maintenance and repairs) the district may have to pay more than the proposed $17,000 rent.

TUESDAY SCHOOL board member Neil LeFebvre said, "the question we have to ask ourselves is, are we using the taxpayers' money to the best advantage. Do we want to put money in a building that is deteriorating?"
"In my mind the repairs have to be made," said board member Mrs. Juanita Jacobs. "If we don't, the children will be cold again this winter." Board member Ted Wattenberg added, "I think Rev. Smith's first proposal for a charge of $1.25 per square foot was a bargain." Some of the board members who had the most reservations about the rent hike were not present at the meeting.
Under the arrangement proposed by Rev. Smith for the rent freeze, Maryville would use the $5,000 to pay the utility and insurance bill. Dist. 28 Supt. Thomas Warden said the figure is "about right," indicating it costs the district about $5,000 to pay the same expenses at other schools.
However Wattenberg termed Smith's proposal to transfer the responsibility for repairs and general maintenance to Dist. 28 "impractical." He pointed out it will be difficult to determine when Maryville's responsibility for the school ends and the district's begins.
"I guess we have no other choice because of the freeze," said Haney. "I just wonder if the state will reimburse us for repairs made at the River Road School?" District administrators will contact state officials to determine the legality of the proposal.

Village Honors Employees

Three Village of Mount Prospect employees were honored, one posthumously, by resolutions of appreciation at Tuesday night's special village board meeting.
Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann was commended for his services as acting village manager. Zimmermann was acting manager from the time of Virgil Barnett's resignation, a little over a year ago, to this August, when Robert J. Epley took over the job. At the same time, Zimmermann continued his duties as village attorney.
The resolution was intended as a surprise for Zimmermann as the attorney is on vacation and the resolution had not been listed on the agenda.
A second resolution was passed noting the recent death of Elmer Wille, who served as village trustee from 1941 to 1945, during the term of Village Pres. Inge E. Besander. Wille also served the village for eight years as an electrical maintenance engineer of the Public Works Department.
The last resolution passed noted the 25th anniversary of Clarence Neibaur with the Mount Prospect Fire Department. Mayor Robert D. Teichert said the accomplishment was all the more remarkable because the full-time department has only been in existence about 10 years. Before that time, Mount Prospect had a volunteer fire department.

Kingsmen To Sing At St. Mark Church

The Kingsmen, a group of eight young singers, will appear Sunday at all three services at St. Mark Lutheran Church, 200 S. Wille St., Mount Prospect. The services are scheduled at 8:30 a.m., 9:45 a.m. and 11 a.m.
The group sings a variety of musical styles, from pop and folk rock to classical and hymns. They recently recorded their second record album, titled "One People."

Plan School Street Bridge

The next bridge to be built across Weller Creek will be at School Street.
At Tuesday night's special meeting, the Mount Prospect Village Board passed a resolution providing for the appropriation of $130,000 of Motor Fuel Tax Funds for construction of the bridge next year.
The board also voted to hire Bernard H. R. Hemminger as engineer for the School Street bridge. This will be Hemminger's fourth bridge across Weller Creek, the others being at Emerson and George streets and See-Gwun Avenue.
The new bridge is part of a 1969 plan to build four new bridges over the creek. At that time there were only four streets in Mount Prospect which crossed Weller Creek. They were Mount Prospect and George streets and Main and Emerson streets.
The first two bridges at George Street and See-Gwun Avenue were approved in June 1969. The George Street bridge opened in October 1970 and cost about $72,000. Costing $106,824, the See-Gwun bridge opened last May.
Mayor Robert D. Teichert said that normally the next bridge to be built would be the one at William Street. "But William is only a half street and even though it would be the preferred choice over School Street this would compound the cost. We would first have to complete William Street, making it a full-width street," he said.
A fifth bridge, listed only as a possibility, may be built at Can-Dota Avenue in the future.
The bridge at School Street would be a two-lane, 50-foot span for vehicular traffic. The project also includes money for the pavement improvement of School Street from Louquist Boulevard to Berkshire Lane.
The original bridge, at George Street, became a subject of controversy when residents living north of the creek protested what they saw as a project which would bring an increased traffic flow through their streets.
These residents preferred the village extend Sunset Road through a vacant piece of property owned by School Dist. 57. But at the time school officials reportedly refused to sell the land or any part of it because in future years they might want to build a school on the site.
Today, school district officials are talking about selling the 11 acres, known as East Park, to the Mount Prospect Park District for park use. Officials have decided they do not need a new school there.
The village board approved the George Street bridge despite the objections of those residents who lived north of the creek for two reasons. The board said, in 1969, that the new bridge would provide the police and fire departments with access to areas south of Weller Creek which they did not have before. The board also said the bridge would minimize potential accidents during local emergencies.

Conflict Over Pay Raise Schedule Delays Contract

Disagreement over how teacher pay hikes should be determined is holding up settlement of a 1971-72 contract in Mount Prospect Dist. 57, according to teacher and school board negotiators.

At a negotiations meeting Monday, the school board's bargaining team presented a salary proposal which would give most returning teachers a $75 pay raise plus the yearly increase already included in the current salary schedule. The board's negotiating team and professional negotiator Richard Zwieback met with teacher negotiators for the thirteenth time in attempts to reach a contract settlement before school starts Sept. 7.

According to David Metzler, teacher negotiator, teachers "do not feel an across-the-board raise is equitable." He said raises should be based on a salary index which would give teachers increases based on a percentage of a set salary. The percentage would depend upon experience and education.

"We don't like an index and would prefer not to have one," said Leo Floros, chairman of the board's team. "It's too costly and tends to snowball on you. When salaries get at the higher end of than doubles."

ACCORDING TO Zwieback, under the schedule, the index sometimes more board's latest proposal most teachers would receive a 4.5 per cent pay raise including the hike in the current schedule, which is based on education and experience. He said returning teachers would be receiving an average of about $455 over last year's salaries.

"We're flexible and want to work out something so teachers won't be frozen at a certain point," Zwieback said. "But we won't go into any index system." The board's proposal also includes a $100 pay hike for about 20 per cent of teachers who would not receive a raise under the current schedule unless they increase their education.

"We thought the schedule was based on an index last year but the board doesn't think so," Metzler said. He said last year was the first time teachers used an index to draw up a salary schedule. Although the schedule was approved, an index system was rejected by the board and not included in the final agreement.

ACCORDING TO both sides, the nearly 2-hour meeting was amiable. "It was the most cordial and the most productive meeting because of meaningful discussions," said Floros. "The atmosphere was such that we made more progress last night than at any other meeting."

Floros said he is hopeful that a settlement will be reached at the next negotiations meeting on Aug. 30. However Metzler said he didn't think a contract agreement will be made before school starts on Sept. 7.

"As far as I am concerned, we're not any closer at all," he said. "It's senseless to rush. There's no hurry now because of the wage freeze."

School Salaries To Stay Same As For Last Year

September paychecks for teachers in school districts serving Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights will be based on last year's salaries, school officials announced yesterday.

For teachers to receive their first paychecks, payroll information for districts using computer services at Harper Junior College in Palatine must be turned in today.

"In light of the wage-price freeze we had no other choice," said James Retzlaff, assistant superintendent in River Trails School Dist. 26.

School officials have been waiting for guidelines on President Nixon's freeze from the office of the superintendent of public instruction (OSPI). As of yesterday afternoon, no statement had been made. An OSPI spokesman said the state office is still waiting for a ruling from the Cost of Living Council in Washington, D. C.

"WE ARE FREEZING salaries," said Eric Sahlberg, superintendent in Mount Prospect Dist. 57. He said teachers will not receive the yearly pay hike included in the current salary schedule. "For example, teachers who made $7,500 last year and now hold contracts calling for $7,800 will receive the $7,500."

Sahlberg also said that fringe benefits and extra duty pay will be provided at the same levels as last year. However, if a teacher is sponsoring a different after-school activity than last year, he will be paid accordingly, Sahlberg said.

"These decisions may be adjusted at a later date when we receive guidelines from the state office," Sahlberg said. Salaries will also be contingent upon negotiations, according to Sahlberg, depending upon when the 90-day freeze is lifted and what Nixon does.

Teachers in Dist. 57 and 26 are still negotiating for a 1971-72 teacher contract. In Prospect Heights Dist. 23, teachers and school board members have reached a contract agreement. However, teachers paychecks will still be based on last year's salaries.

Show To Go On-Without The Marquee

The show will go on but the marquee will be missing.

One consequence of the intersection improvements along Rte. 83 (also known as Main Street) from Evergreen Avenue north to Central Road will be the loss of the Prospect Theatre's marquee.

Under present conditions, the marquee slightly protrudes over the public right of way. The new roadwork will aggravate the non-conforming situation, John Zimmermann, acting village manager said at last week's village board meeting.

"For mutual benefit," Zimmermann said that the marquee will come down and be replaced by two flush wall signs, one at each end of the building.

Zimmermann said the owner has estimated it will cost about $4,800 and has agreed to "go 50-50 with the village" on the costs.

The village board agreed to such a plan with the understanding that the village's portion of the bill not exceed $2,250.

Lincoln County Study Unit Grows

State Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, Rep. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and Mayor Fred Downey of Hoffman Estates are the last to join the list of members on the New County Study Committee (NCS) investigating the possible disannexation of six Northwest suburban townships from Cook County to form Lincoln County.

With the addition of the three names, the NCS committee now involves a total of nine representatives from the six-township area of Barrington, Palatine, Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Hanover.

Graham and Regner were chosen to serve on the committee because of their background in legislative procedures and the information they can provide in researching the new county idea, according to Wendell Jones, a Palatine trustee and co-ordinator of the Lincoln County plan.

Downey could serve as a municipal liaison for the committee through his mayoral responsibilities, Jones said.

Work Crews Eye Check Streets For Fallen Trees

Mount Prospect Public Works crews checked village streets for fallen tree branches yesterday in the aftermath of Tuesday night's severe windstorm.

One tree was destroyed and another damaged by lightning, according to a public works department spokesman. She said the popcorn machine at the Prospect Theatre, 18 S. Main St., was damaged by water. According to the spokesman, sewers in that area could not hold the quick accumulation of water resulting from the downpour.

No real emergencies developed in Mount Prospect during the storm that lashed through the Northwest suburbs, according to the Mount Prospect Fire Department. Lightning struck three homes, but firemen said no major fires or injuries resulted.

In Prospect Heights, telephone and electric lines were reported downed in the Euclid-Lake, Mandel Lane and Rainbow Ridge subdivisions. Unincorporated areas of Mount Prospect also reported telephone and electric failures.

"We had emergency vehicles out most of the night," said Chief Charles Nick of the Forest River Fire Department. "We patrolled the area in case of an emergency since we couldn't be reached by phone."

Damage in the Old Town area of Prospect Heights was minor, according to Chief Donald Gould of the Prospect Heights Fire Department. He said the department responded to two false alarm calls on downed electrical wires.

ARLINGTON PARK Race Track officials have not commented on the opposition now mounting over the Yamaha Gold Cup Motorcycle Race planned for 8 p.m.

Sept. 10 at the track. Residents and officials alike from Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are hoping to prevent this race, or at least any future races.

Cycle Race Halt Is Sought

Officials and residents of Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are taking steps to prevent a motorcycle race planned for the night of Sept. 10 at Arlington Park Race Track.

The opposition stems from several reasons, including fears that motorized racing may become a continuous event at the track, concern over excessive noise the race will cause, the "inconvenience" the bright night lights at the track will cause nearby homeowners and the "type of people motorcycle racing might usher into town."

Some Arlington Heights officials are taking preliminary steps to block the event, or at least prevent future racing of this type.

Race track officials have made no comment on the event or the opposition to it. One spokesman, however, did say, "this type of event has been held all over the country many times before with very few problems such as these people are talking about."

TRUSTEES MRS. Alice Harms and Ted Salinsky are attempting to gain the support of one other trustee opposed to the event so a special meeting of the village board can be called to examine what the village can legally do to halt the program.

Although Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the race was permitted under current village regulations, other trustees have asked and are now awaiting a legal opinion on the subject from Village Atty. Jack Siegel.

The question of using the night lights, which the Illinois Racing Board did not permit for the thoroughbred racing, was cleared up by Hanson who said the use of lights for events other than horse racing is permitted by the state.

Hanson also said the village will receive 3 per cent of the total gate receipts. Tickets for the event range in price from $4 to $8.

molition derbies out there."

Mrs. Harms said, "I'm opposed to this on the basis that if this is allowed how could we prevent possible expansion of use other than those existing at the time of annexation?" which was in 1969.

THE RACE IS the Yamaha Gold Cup Motorcycle Race offering a $15,000 purse and gold trophy for the estimated 200 riders who will participate in the 10-event program which starts at 8 p.m. on Sept. 10.

Sanctioned by the American Motorcycle Association, the riders will race at speeds up to 130 miles per hour.

The race is sponsored by Madison Square Garden Corp., the parent company of Arlington and Washington Park Race Tracks. Trojan Enterprises from California are also sponsors.

In May of this year Madison Square Garden staged a similar race at Roosevelt Raceway in New York which drew over 20,000 fans.

BOTH 2ND WARD Aldermen William Aherns and Thomas Waldron told the Rolling Meadows city council this week that some of their constituents "fear the noise and the possibility that racing may become a continuous thing."

Waldron said yesterday "some of the people also believe that motorcycle racing brings the wrong kind of people into the area."

In addition, the Rolling Meadows Board of Health is now considering the purchase of a "noise meter" to measure the loudness of the event in terms of noise pollution.

Lightning Bolt At 40 — Executives Face Unemployment

by KAREN RUGEN

For an executive in the $15,000 a year and over bracket, being laid off can be as jolting as a lightning bolt.

The sudden bounce from the security of a mahogany desk to the uncertainty of the search for a new job can throw a man into unemployment shell shock. Or it can burdle him into the "depths of despair."

Just ask Bill Richmond.

"When they first told me, I had this sinking feeling. Then I was thrown into shock. All of a sudden my colleagues seemed to think I had gotten the plague," said Richmond as he sat smoking a cigar in the backyard patio of his brick Mount Prospect home. "It took me many months to recuperate from that shock."

BILL RICHMOND, not his real name, is a mechanical engineer with a college degree. Working his way up from draftsman, he has headed engineering teams in the steel manufacturing business and has experience in product development, design and sales. During most of his nearly 20-year career, his earnings have reached to more than $15,000 a year.

Suddenly at age 43, he was asked to leave his job as chief engineer with a small Chicago firm. That was more than a year ago. He has been faced with unemployment ever since.

"For the first five months, I worked around the house. I was in a mild state of shock," said Richmond, a short, dark-haired bachelor who lives with and helps support his parents. "I didn't want to register for unemployment; I didn't want to receive benefits from anybody."

The absence of a weekly paycheck finally pushed Richmond to the Illinois State Employment office. Lined up with other executives from the Northwestern suburbs, he stood in the Des Plaines office to make his unemployment claim. Each time he was sent upstairs to the employment service. And each time, he was turned away without a job.

"Finally they just told me to leave because as an engineer I had little chance of finding a job. They tried to help. But how can employers be hiring when they're laying off?" he said. "And I didn't want to leave my profession. I put too many years into my education for that — I'm a night school product."

Prepare New School Rental Contract During 'Freeze'

School Dist. 26 attorneys will draw up a new contract for rental of the River Road School, at Maryville Academy.

At a meeting Tuesday, Maryville and Dist. 26 officials decided that the contract will be in effect only until the national rent freeze ends. Another contract will probably be negotiated later to cover the remainder of the school year.

The Rev. John Smith, superintendent at Maryville, proposed the first contract carry over last year's rent of $5,000 and transfer the responsibility of general maintenance and repair to the school district. The school board has made no commitment to accept the proposal, but plans to submit it to its attorney and state officials for approval. The district attorney will draw up a contract based on whatever is deemed acceptable in Rev. Smith's proposal.

Reverend Smith announced earlier this summer that Maryville can not pay the cost of maintaining the school with $5,000. He called for a rent hike of $17,000, based on a charge of $1.25 per square foot. After meeting with district officials, Rev. Smith lowered the rent to $14,500, which includes $9,500 for repairs.

The more than 300 Maryville children have attended district schools since Catholic Charities, an arm of the Chicago Catholic Archdiocese announced in 1968 it could no longer afford to educate the children. The district is reimbursed 100 per cent by the state for all tuition costs (including building rent) incurred in educating the Maryville children.

Approximately 125 Maryville children are attending district schools outside of the academy, while 150 are attending the River Road School at Maryville.

At the meeting Tuesday, Harold Haney, board president, told the Maryville officials, "we realize that under state law it is our responsibility to educate the Maryville children. The state does reimburse our bill, but unfortunately not till after we pay it. At this point the board is looking for the reasoning behind the increase in cost."

IN EXPLAINING the rent hike, Rev. Smith said, "we charged a lower rent during the first two years, perhaps because of our guilty conscience. We agree it was a shock for you to include the Maryville children in the district. We appreciate the job the River Road School is doing, yet Maryville has a responsibility to not take on Dist. 26's expenses. I don't think people realize what Maryville is putting out for the River Road School operation."

Repairs proposed for the coming year could total $21,000, according to Rev. Smith. These costs include $1,700 for painting, $6,000 for new windows, $4,000 for additional electrical wiring and room heaters and $9,000 for floor repairs. The second and third repairs are necessary to provide adequate heating in the classrooms, said the Maryville superintendent. In addition, he estimated general maintenance and utilities cost about $12,000 annually.

"Considering these costs, I don't think the $17,000 rent fee is unfair," added Rev. Smith. When the school board was first notified of the rent hike, some members were reluctant to pay it. Now, if the board accepts Smith's last proposal (responsibility for all general maintenance and repairs) the district may have to pay more than the proposed $17,000 rent.

TUESDAY SCHOOL board member Neil LeFebvre said, "the question we have to ask ourselves is, are we using the taxpayers' money to the best advantage. Do we want to put money in a building that is deteriorating?"

"In my mind the repairs have to be made," said board member Mrs. Juanita Jacobs. "If we don't, the children will be cold again this winter." Board member Ted Wattenberg added, "I think Rev. Smith's first proposal for a charge of $1.25 per square foot was a bargain." Some of the board members who had the most reservations about the rent hike were not present at the meeting.

Under the arrangement proposed by Rev. Smith for the rent freeze, Maryville would use the $5,000 to pay the utility and insurance bill. Dist. 26 Supt. Thomas Warden said the figure is "about right," indicating it costs the district about $5,000 to pay the same expenses at other schools.

However Wattenberg termed Smith's proposal to transfer the responsibility for repairs and general maintenance to Dist. 26 "impractical." He pointed out it will be difficult to determine when Maryville's responsibility for the school ends and the district's begins.

"I guess we have no other choice because of the freeze," said Haney. "I just wonder if the state will reimburse us for repairs made at the River Road School?" District administrators will contact state officials to determine the legality of the proposal.

Several Taxing Districts Protest Tap-On Fees

Several Prospect Heights taxing districts are objecting to fees charged by the Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District (OTSD) for tapping onto a new sewer system.

Atty. John Haas, representing the Prospect Heights Library District has proposed discussing the situation at a meeting of the two districts, along with the Prospect Heights School Dist. 23.

At a meeting of the park board Monday Haas said, "It is kind of ridiculous for the taxpayers to have to pay both districts for (sewer service to public facilities). I think it would be a good idea for the districts to get together on this."

The park district will be charged $3,500 to tap sewer facilities at the Lions Park bath house onto the new sewer lines. The bath house and pool complex are located at Camp McDonald Road and Elm Street.

THE LIBRARY district has been notified it will be charged a $2,000 tap-on fee. The fee is based on a $1,000 charge for each of the two buildings on the new library site on Elm Street near Camp McDonald Road. A small house already stands on the site, and a new library will be built there within the next two years.

The sanitary district has not officially notified the school district of the tap-on fee for the four schools within its boundaries. Early estimates listed the cost at $10,000 per school. The district has set aside $30,000 of a $1 million bond issue approved by voters earlier this year, to pay fees charged for the three schools at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads. Another $10,000 was set aside by the state for the tap-on fee when it built the Dwight Eisenhower School more than two years ago.

According to Richard Schuld, OTSD superintendent, the fees charged to each of the three districts is "their proportional fair share. We base the fees on the usage of the sewer lines, and we take the overall cost of the system into account." The tap-on fee for residential homes is $250.

Concerning the objection of some public officials to one taxing district charging another, Schuld said, "everyone in the district has to share the overall cost of the sewer system. The boundaries of these districts extend beyond ours. Why should residents in the sanitary district have to pay for service that will benefit people living outside of the sanitary district?"

MELVIN LACE, president of the school board, agreed that the school district should pay some fee since its boundaries are not identical to the sanitary district's. However he said, "It should definitely be lower than the $30,000 proposed for the three school campus." He called for negotiations between the two districts to reach a "reasonable charge."

"We have the option of hooking directly into the Metropolitan Sanitary District interceptor sewer line rather than into the OTSD lines," added LACE.

"The cost would probably be a little less, but then we wouldn't have the maintenance provided by OTSD."

Trustees of the library district say their tap-on fee is too high. Mrs. Robert Lust, president of the library board, said, "We are being charged $1,000 for the new library and $1,000 for the caretakers cottage. This isn't fair because the cottage is a residence and other residences are only being charged $250."

In addition, Mrs. Lust said the library district did not take the "high amount" of the tap-on fee into account when they held a referendum for a $400,000 bond issue in February. Now she said the trustees are looking for ways to cut the cost of the construction.

IN DEFENSE, Schuld stated the library district does not have to pay a tax to the sanitary district. "Actually the district is paying less than a resident who pays the annual tax bill of $50 for 20 years in addition to a $250 tap-on fee."

The entire OTSD system will cost $1.1 million and serve approximately 1,300 buildings in Prospect Heights. Construction of the new system is divided into two phases. Phase one encompasses approximately 750 homes south of Willow Road. Phase two includes 450 homes north of Willow Road.

Although the U. S. has adopted a hands-off policy, the embassy has made it no secret a one-man election could hurt prospects for continued U. S. economic aid.

The State

The Chicago Bar Association demanded that State's Attorney Edward Hanrahan take a leave of absence until he is tried on criminal charges of conspiring with 13 others to obstruct justice following a 1969 raid on a Black Panther headquarters. ### The Nation

The government reported the first monthly decline in three years in family welfare recipients and attributed it to a cutback in state benefits for the needy. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said that during May the number of families on welfare rolls dropped by 16,000 — from 10,228,000 to 10,212,000.

Vice President Spiro Agnew launched a counter-attack on "nit-picking" Democrats and labor leaders who have criticized President Nixon's wage-price freeze. Agnew predicted one of Nixon's bitterest critics, AFL-CIO President George Meany will eventually go along with the President's program. Meanwhile, Meany and Leonard Woodcock, of the United Autoworkers, met to discuss legislative strategy as organized labor kept up its steady stream of criticism. Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield predicted a longer Senate fight to reform Nixon's economic recovery plan.

Lightning Bolt At 40 — Executives Face Unemployment

by KAREN RUGEN
For an executive in the $15,000 a year and over bracket, being laid off can be as jolting as a lightning bolt.
The sudden bounce from the security of a mahogany desk to the uncertainty of the search for a new job can throw a man into unemployment shell shock. Or it can hurdle him into the "depths of despair."
Just ask Bill Richmond.
"When they first told me, I had this sinking feeling. Then I was thrown into shock. All of a sudden my colleagues seemed to think I had gotten the plague," said Richmond as he sat smoking a cigar in the backyard patio of his brick Mount Prospect home. "It took me many months to recuperate from that shock."
BILL RICHMOND, not his real name, is a mechanical engineer with a college degree. Working his way up from draftsman, he has headed engineering teams in the steel manufacturing business and has experience in product development, design and sales. During most of his nearly 20-year career, his earnings have reached to more than $15,000 a year.
Suddenly at age 43, he was asked to leave his job as chief engineer with a small Chicago firm. That was more than a year ago. He has been faced with unemployment ever since.

"For the first five months, I worked around the house. I was in a mild state of shock," said Richmond, a short, dark-haired bachelor who lives with and helps support his parents. "I didn't want to register for unemployment; I didn't want to receive benefits from anybody."
The absence of a weekly paycheck finally pushed Richmond to the Illinois State Employment office. Lined up with other executives from the Northwestern suburbs, he stood in the Des Plaines office to make his unemployment claim. Each time he was sent upstairs to the employment service. And each time, he was turned away without a job.

Officials Seek To Stop Cycle Races At Track

Officials and residents of Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are taking steps to prevent a motorcycle race planned for the night of Sept. 10 at Arlington Park Race Track.
The opposition stems from several reasons, including fears that motorized racing may become a continuous event at the track, concern over excessive noise the race will cause, the "inconvenience" the bright night lights at the track will cause nearby homeowners and the "type of people motorcycle racing might usher into town."
Some Arlington Heights officials are taking preliminary steps to block the event, or at least prevent future racing of this type.
Race track officials have made no comment on the event or the opposition to it. One spokesman, however, did say, "this type of event has been held all over the country many times before with very few problems such as these people are talking about."
TRUSTEES MRS. Alice Harms and Ted Salinsky are attempting to gain the support of one other trustee opposed to the event so a special meeting of the village board can be called to examine what the village can legally do to halt the program.
Although Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the race was permitted under current village regulations, other trustees have asked and are now awaiting a legal opinion on the subject from Village Atty. Jack Siegel.
The question of using the night lights, which the Illinois Racing Board did not permit for the thoroughbred racing, was cleared up by Hanson who said the use of lights for events other than horse racing is permitted by the state.
Hanson also said the village will receive 3 per cent of the total gate receipts. Tickets for the event range in price from $4 to $6.
Salinsky said, "If this is a permitted use then someone really bungled the job because the next thing we'll have is demolition derbies out there."
Mrs. Harms said, "I'm opposed to this on the basis that if this is allowed how could we prevent possible expansion of use other than those existing at the time of annexation?" which was in 1969.

ARLINGTON PARK Race Track officials have not commented on the opposition now mounting over the Yamaha Gold Cup Motorcycle Race planned for 8 p.m. Sept. 10 at the track. Residents and officials alike from Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows are hoping to prevent this race, or at least any future races.

Come Hail Or High Waters—

With directions on what to do if a tornado was spotted being shouted from the sidelines, ten die hard volleyball players continued their marathon game through Tuesday night's downpour.
Barely able to move because they were so drenched, the players refused to let the storm stand in the way of their attempt to break the world volleyball marathon record of 126 hours.
The storm, complete with sheets of rain, high winds, thunder and lightning, tornado warnings and hail reaching almost one-half inch in diameter, hit while the seniors, both college and high school, were on the court.
Some left for drier areas but substitutes were quickly retrieved and Meadows Baptist Church was able to rally to gether six players while Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church mustered together four.

With the game in its 70th hour and the third day of play almost completed, the advisors said they didn't have enough nerve to call it off. Shelter was provided for the spectators and everyone was given directions on what to do in case of a tornado.

SLIPPING AND sliding in mud up to their ankles the players donned sheets of plastic for some protection.

By 3 p.m. when the storm had subsided the players and spectators were back out in force. The father and son hour went on as scheduled at 9 p.m.

The playing area resembled a quagmire more than a volleyball court for most of the night and there was a miniature lake along the net. Sand was hauled in to pour on the court and by mid-morning things had started drying out.

Only remaining problem is a horrendous odor that developed when the dry sand was poured on the quagmire. Sunny skies provided, this should be cleared away with a little airing.

Storms are hardly new to the two groups. The teams started battling it out Saturday night exactly 15 minutes after another severe storm had started.

The game is scheduled to go for 144 hours ending Saturday night at 9 p.m.

By the way, Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church was able to retain its lead through all this. At 1:30 p.m. yesterday Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church led Meadows Baptist Church 3,987 to 3,510.

Park Board Approves Levy

The Arlington Heights Park Board approved a levy ordinance Monday night which will result in a slightly lower tax bill for residents next year.
The estimated rate to be used on next year's tax bills is about 37.5 cents per $100 assessed valuation, a drop of .5 cents compared to the actual rate this year.
The actual rate may be lower than estimated depending on the increase in the district's assessed valuation. The lower rate is the result of a lower levy to cover the cost of construction bonds.
A tax rate of 37.5 would result in the park district's portion of the tax bill being about $65.60 on a home with a market value of $35,000. This figure, which will not be reflected until tax bills are sent to property owners next spring, is a decrease of about 90 cents. Most homes are assessed at about 50 per cent of their market value.
THE ESTIMATED rate was figured by park officials by using an estimated assessed valuation of $23.5 million, reflecting an estimated increase of about $11 million over this year's actual valuation.
If the park district's actual assessed valuation as set by the county assessor's office in early 1972 is higher than the estimate, the resulting tax rate will be lower.
Although the levy ordinance is passed with the estimated rate of 37.5, it could be less than the actual rate depending on the announcement of assessed valuation of the district. The rate used on tax bills received by residents this year was about one cent lower than estimated by park officials when they passed the levy ordinance last August.
The levy ordinance will produce an estimated income of more than $1 million in tax money for the district. This figure is an increase of about $175,000 over the estimated income from tax bills mailed out this year.

Completes Training

Pvt. James F. Hannum, son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Hannum, 525-S. Bristol Ln., Arlington Heights, has completed eight weeks of basic training at the U. S. Army Training Center, Ft. Polk, La.

The 1966 graduate of Arlington High School received his B.B.M. Degree in 1970 from Northwestern Institute, Midland, Mich. He is a member of the Phi Beta Lambda Fraternity.

Clear Up Cloud Over Music Plan

by KURT BAER

There seems to be a lot of confusion on all sides about the Music for Youth program planned for Dist. 25 schools this fall.

Just to recap: Music for Youth is a voluntary parent association organized last spring after the Dist. 25 school board announced it would cut instrumental music from its 1971-72 budget as an economy measure.

The group has announced plans to offer both Suzuki violin instruction (grades K-3) and small group lessons on band instruments (grades 4-8).

The lessons are to be given in the schools during the regular school day, with teachers contracted from the Music Center for the North Shore, Winnetka.

DIRECTOR OF instruction for Dist. 25, James Montgomery, said band rehearsals, or something similar, will be offered during the activity hour in the junior high schools. This group rehearsal will be essentially independent of the Music for Youth program, although there are bound to be students who participate in both.

There is, as the school board said last spring, no provision for instrumental music in the district's proposed 1971-72 budget, and Montgomery has said the band rehearsals will be conducted by teachers who have other, non-instrumental music teaching responsibilities.

More specifically, most of the volunteer band instructors are former instrumental music teachers who this year will be paid as vocal music teachers.

Another area of confusion centers around Music for Youth's request for a $30 contribution per semester for each student who participates in the program. But not all children will have to pay.

The school board had gone on public record insisting that the music program, if it is going to operate on school time, must be open to all children, regardless of whether or not their parents choose to make the $30 contribution.

Supt. Donald V. Strong has been advised that this is the only legal course open to the district.

BUT OBVIOUSLY, if a large number of students enroll in the Music for Youth program without an accompanying donation, the group could find it difficult to meet its final contractual agreement with the Music Center for the North Shore.

Music for Youth says it already has 550 students enrolled for fall lessons and it expects to boost this figure on fee days — today and Aug. 31.

It is impossible to say now just what the final shape of Dist. 25's instrumental music program will be once schools throw open their doors on Sept. 7. But it seems certain that the final chord in the history of this controversial proposal has yet to be sounded.

Lincoln County Study Unit Grows

State Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, Rep. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and Mayor Fred Downey of Hoffman Estates are the last to join the list of members on the New County Study Committee (NCS) investigating the possible disannexation of six Northwest suburban townships from Cook County to form Lincoln County.

With the addition of the three names, the NCS committee now involves a total of nine representatives from the six-township area of Barrington, Palatine, Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Hanover.

Graham and Regner were chosen to serve on the committee because of their background in legislative procedures and the information they can provide in researching the new county idea, according to Wendell Jones, a Palatine trustee and co-ordinator of the Lincoln County plan.

Downey could serve as a municipal liaison for the committee through his mayoral responsibilities, Jones said.

Besides Graham, Regner and Downey, the committee includes Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher, LeMone Stitt and W. Richard Impey, both Arlington Heights attorneys, Mrs. Glen-Anne Jicha, former Palatine Township Republican committeewoman, and Merwin Soper and Jones, Palatine trustees.

"Hopefully we'll be able to meet within the next two to three weeks for an initial organizational session," Jones said yesterday. He suggested the nine-member NCS committee break down into subgroups to study various aspects of a new county.

Possible subgroups to conduct further research include groups to look into establishment of a new court system and police structure, financial burdens of forming a new county and taxation and legal questions in seceding from an existing county.

"We won't ask any residents to sign petitions unless the committee first determines whether action to form a new county is even feasible," Jones said. "Once that is determined, the next logical step would be to form a larger group than the NCS committee to go out and get the 80,000 names for the petition."

Jones and Soper first proposed the Lincoln County idea early this month when they issued an eight-page report on the rationale for the disannexation. Under their six-township area, a new county government would be created for an estimated combined population of 350,000, which would make the government more local and representative, the report stated.

Ampex Recalls 100 Employees

Ampex Corp., one of the largest firms in Centex Industrial Park, has recalled 100 employees within the past few months, according to a spokesman for the firm.

In addition, the Elk Grove Village firm has hired 30 more persons. Total employment at the firm is 1,200.

Most of those recalled and newly hired personnel work in the manufacturing departments of the consumer equipment and stereo tape divisions.

Bill Slatkin, of public relations, said employment dips and rises with the country's economy and that now the firm is recovering with the country's improving economy.

Asked about a reported loss of employees with a move to Redwood, Calif., he said the move has taken place in phases, making it difficult to tell how many employees have been affected.

He said the firm began moving its education and industrial products division to Mountain View, Calif., near Redwood City where the company is headquartered, about one year ago.

Teachers To Get Drug Data

District 21 teachers will spend a day next week learning about drugs in preparation for a drug education curriculum to be introduced in the district schools this fall.

The teachers will be taught not only how to recognize drugs and understand their effects, but also the reasons why youngsters may feel a need to take drugs, according to Marge Beu, district director of instruction.

The Sept. 3 program will include a 9:30 a.m. speech by Dr. Robert Willard of the graduate division of Forest Hospital in Des Plaines.

His speech will focus on the pharmacological aspects of drugs, experiences with drug addicts, and an explanation of the psychological drive for drugs, Miss Beu said.

FOLLOWING THE talk the district teachers will split into separate sessions for primary, intermediate, and junior high school groups.

Each of the three separate groups will then meet with a policeman who will give a presentation explaining drug analysis and telling the teachers how to recognize the symptoms of youngsters who are drug users, she said.

Policemen from the Wheeling and Buffalo Grove police departments have already agreed to help with the program and a third policeman has been requested from the Arlington Heights police department, Miss Beu said.

District 21 serves Wheeling, the Cook County portion of Buffalo Grove, and parts of northern Arlington Heights and Prospect Heights.

AFTER THE sessions with the policemen, the teachers will be given the specifics of the curriculum on drug education as it will be taught in the various grade levels, she said.

The new program will be taught in homeroom classes at the elementary school level, she said. In the district's three junior high schools, the program will vary. In some schools it will be taught as part of the social studies program while in others it will be included in science classes or in a language arts class, she said.

The program may be taught by team teaching in some of the schools, she said.

In addition to that, new curriculum, four other new programs will be introduced in the district this fall, she said.

Teachers will receive information from their school principals on curriculums on "You and the Law," "Environmental Education," "Consumer Education" and the newly formalized kindergarten curriculum, she said.

For the first time this year district teachers will be required to attend only one day of orientation programs instead of a week of meetings before school starts. The reduced requirement is the result of a new state law, Miss Beu said.

THERE WILL BE a week's worth of voluntary orientation programs for the teachers, however, she said.

On Monday, an optional workshop for teachers who are new to the district will include an explanation of the various special services in the district, such as language arts facilities, the learning disabilities program, and school psychiatrist. That afternoon the teachers will tour the district in order to learn about the types of homes local children come from and to familiarize themselves with various industries and businesses in the district, she said.

Rotarians To Hear Goellner

Emil Goellner, Rotary district 644 governor, will visit with Arlington Heights Rotarians at the club's regular meeting at Arlington Park Towers today. Goellner will hold special sessions in the morning with local president Steve Jurco, officers and chairmen, then meet with the entire club at noon.

Goellner this year will direct the 74 clubs of district 644, which comprises over 4,000 Rotarians.

He'll speak to local Rotarians regarding 1971-72 plans in the district, as well as outline activities on the club's national and international scene.

Son Paid While Gone

A Des Plaines city official's son employed this summer by the city received anti-poverty job payments for three days last month while on vacation with his father, it was disclosed last night.

Public Works Commissioner Joseph Schwab last night acknowledged that his son, Steven, 17, had received the anti-poverty job payments for July 12, 13 and 14 but said the payments had been an "honest mistake."

Schwab's testimony came at the second meeting of a special city council committee investigating misuse of funds from the federal Neighborhood Youth Corps (NYC) program.

The Herald disclosed earlier this month that five youths, including young Schwab, the sons of two Des Plaines aldermen, the son of a former alderman and a youth whose father is not connected with the city, were each receiving $37 a week under the NYC program. The NYC payments, which made up a part of the youths' salaries for city summer jobs, were ordered cut off by the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity (CCOEO) after an investigation by that agency.

IN RESPONSE TO questions by Clyde Brooks, head of the NYC program for CCOEO, Commissioner Schwab last night said his son's payroll record for the three days had been approved by Asst. Public Works Commissioner Wallace Schaefer, while Schwab and his son were on vacation.

He said the youth was not paid any wages by the city for the three days and received only the portion of his salary paid by the NYC program. When asked, why Schaefer approved a payroll record for the three days, which had been forwarded to NYC program administrators, Schwab said:

"That I can't answer but that should never have been signed and his name never should have been on there."

Schwab, who said his son cashed the check before Schwab learned of the payment for the three days, said the money will be returned.

The special committee also heard City Comptroller Duane Blietz, Schwab, young Schwab, and Stephen Holmbeck, 16, another of the five youths, whose father is not connected with the city, deny that they knew the NYC program is intended only for youths from poverty-stricken families.

THE TWO YOUTHS said they were told by James Ballew of the Illinois Employment Service (IES), who they said interviewed them for the NYC program, not to fill out portions of NYC job application blanks pertaining to family income.

Ballew, and other witnesses were expected to be called last night after Herald press time.

The special six-member committee was formed last week to investigate the misuse of NYC funds and determine how the city became involved in the NYC program. The CCOEO had demanded repayment of $114.83 in NYC money it says was paid to each of the five youths.

During his testimony, Commissioner Schwab said no one from the CCOEO or the IES ever mentioned to him that they saw anything unusual in the fact that one of the youths receiving the poverty payment had the same name as Schwab.

"Did anyone from any of these offices ever mention, 'Gee, there was a name like yours on one of the paychecks?'" asked City Atty. Robert D'Leonard, a committee member. "Did any of them ever mention that your son was one of the payees?"

"No," said Schwab.

by KAREN RUGEN
For an executive in the $15,000 a year and over bracket, being laid off can be as jolting as a lightning bolt.
The sudden bounce from the security of a mahogany desk to the uncertainty of the search for a new job can throw a man into unemployment shell shock. Or it can hurdle him into the "depths of despair."
Just ask Bill Richmond.
"When they first told me, I had this sinking feeling. Then I was thrown into shock. All of a sudden my colleagues seemed to think I had gotten the plague," said Richmond as he sat smoking a cigar in the backyard patio of his brick Mount Prospect home. "It took me many months to recuperate from that shock."
BILL RICHMOND, not his real name, is a mechanical engineer with a college degree. Working his way up from draftsman, he has headed engineering teams in the steel manufacturing business and has experience in product development, design and sales. During most of his nearly 20-year career, his earnings have reached to more than $15,000 a year. Suddenly at age 43, he was asked to leave his job as chief engineer with a small Chicago firm. That was more than a year ago. He has been faced with unemployment ever since.

"For the first five months, I worked around the house. I was in a mild state of shock," said Richmond, a short, dark-haired bachelor who lives with and helps support his parents. "I didn't want to register for unemployment; I didn't want to receive benefits from anybody."
The absence of a weekly paycheck finally pushed Richmond to the Illinois State Employment office. Lined up with other executives from the Northwestern suburbs, he stood in the Des Plaines office to make his unemployment claim. Each time he was sent upstairs to the employment service. And each time, he was turned away without a job.
"Finally they just told me to leave because as an engineer I had little chance of finding a job. They tried to help. But how can employers be hiring when they're laying off?" he said. "And I didn't want to leave my profession. I put too many years into my education for that — I'm a night school product."

Human Relations Unit To Rule On Low-Cost Housing

A decision is expected tonight from the Des Plaines Human Relations Commission on proposals made to the city by a Chicago area group advocating low-income housing in the suburbs.
John Fankhauser, commission chairman, yesterday said commission members have reviewed proposals by the Concerned Metropolitan Citizens Committee (CMCC) and will decide tonight what recommendations they will make to the city council.
The CMCC, which has also campaigned for low-income housing in Arlington Heights, has urged the city to adopt a five-point program aimed at ending what the group says is "exclusionary" zoning in Des Plaines and at selecting a number of sites for low-income housing.
"The commission members have had a chance to review it and I suppose come to some conclusion in their own minds," Fankhauser said.
THE COMMISSION will meet at 8 p.m. in the Des Plaines municipal building city council chambers, 1412 Miner St.
The CMCC has accused city officials of "unintentional and unconscious racism" in not encouraging development of low and moderate-income housing.
The CMCC claims there is growing evidence of the need for such housing in suburban areas, a need which it says will have to be met either through local efforts or through action at the state and federal levels.
Mayor Herbert Behrel has predicted city council opposition to the proposals made by CMCC. The recommendation of the human relations commission is expected to be referred to the city council health and welfare committee, headed by Ald. Robert Sherwood (2nd).
Specially, the CMCC proposals call for:
—CREATION OF A new zoning classification for multi-family low and moderate-income units. This zoning would be in two categories, including small developments with only low and moderate-income units and larger, mixed-income developments.
This new zoning would require high quality construction, adequate open space, "a maximum number of low-income units consistent with economic feasibility" and units large enough to house sizable families, the CMCC said.
—Selection of sites for low and moderate-income housing, scattered throughout the community. The sites would be chosen so that low-income housing wouldn't be concentrated in any one area of the city.
—Use of all available federal and state funds for low and moderate housing.
—Participation of Chicago area citizens and minority groups in carrying out housing developments.

City Official's Son Drew OEO Pay While Vacationing

A Des Plaines city official's son employed this summer by the city received anti-poverty job payments for three days last month while on vacation with his father, it was disclosed last night.

"No," said Schwab.
The families, the IES, the CCOEO, and the city have all denied that they filled in incorrect family income figures on the NYC program applications signed by family members.

Oakton Community College students relax and study in the student lounge.

2,068 Seek Oakton Admittance

A total of 2,068 prospective students have applied for the 1971 fall semester at Oakton Community College in Morton Grove.

School officials said 545 of the applicants were not accepted because programs are not offered at Oakton to meet the applicants' educational goals.

Of the remaining 1,523 applicants, 1,111 are accepted as full-time and 412 as part-time students. Male students number 682 full-time and 181 part-time and females number 429 full-time and 231 part-time.

Of the full-time applicants, 150 graduated from Maine West High School in Des Plaines, 215 graduated from Maine East High School in Park Ridge and 44 graduated from Notre Dame High School in Niles.

OF THE PART-TIME applicants, 41 are from Maine West, 50 from Maine East and eight from Notre Dame. The remainder are from other high schools in Maine and Niles townships or are residents of nearby areas not served by public junior colleges.

A total of 704 of the full-time and 100 of the part-time applicants are in the baccalaureate transfer program. The career program has 187 full-time and 17 part-time applicants. For the general college program there are 10 full-time and 60 part-time applicants.

The liberal arts curriculum has the most applicants, school officials said, followed by business, education, art, pre-engineering, data processing, natural science, radiological technology and medical technology.

Other curriculums offered include accounting, architecture, child care, dentistry, fire science, forestry, journalism, mechanical technology, mid management marketing, music, office skills, photography, physical education, and nursing.

According to William Koehnline, college president, Oakton has tripled both its faculty and student body since its opening last September.

"IT IS ANTICIPATED that when registration is completed approximately 3,400 students will have registered for the fall 1971 semester," Koehnline said.

In order to accommodate the tripled enrollment, he said, the college has added to its teaching space by completing the remodeling of an additional building on the northwest corner of its campus at 7800 N. Nagle, and by finishing modifications to the other three buildings.

He said curriculums have been broadened to meet the increased demands of students.

According to John Donohue, dean of student personnel, fall classes will begin Aug. 30. He said applications for admission will be accepted until that time.

Tom Warden Joins School District

by BETTY BROOKER

Thomas Warden, former administrator in Elk Grove Township Elementary Dist. 55, favors a conservative approach to education in his new position as superintendent of River Trails Elementary Dist. 26 in Mount Prospect and Prospect Heights.

Warden joined the district last month, replacing Winston Harwood, who had a similar conservative approach to education.

"My chief task is to respond to the school board's and parent's wishes for a conservative and effective education program in this district," said Warden.

He defines a conservative approach as preserving the best of the old fashioned practices and continuously selecting the best of the new trends.

"Whatever new ideas we accept will have to be something that is long lasting," said Warden, a Mount Prospect resident. "And we also have to make sure that what we are hanging onto from the past is giving us what we want."

Giving an example of how he applies his philosophy, Warden, 37, said he prefers the small class load of the past, but not the old fashioned drill approach to education.

Warden's red hair and compact stature suggests a bustling fiery personality. But his appearance is almost a contradiction to his cautious philosophy and calm composure.

WISCONSIN HE IS trying to persuade a school board to follow his recommendations or approve an entire group of persons, Warden is coolly rational, almost bland. He attacks his problems step by step, anxious not to slip.

As a young man working his way through college, Warden showed the same determination. He took semesters off to drive a truck to earn his tuition. However, like Harwood, Warden graduated from college with no intention of entering his present field. With a B.A. degree in history and political science, Warden accepted a job in customer relations with a trucking company.

Soon afterwards, a college class asked Warden to join him in Des Plaines to fill a sixth grade teaching position in Dist. 62. He accepted the job and went back to graduate school at night to pick up a teaching certificate.

FIVE AND A HALF years later, Warden became principal of the Cardinal Drive School in Rolling Meadows Dist. 15. By 1967 Warden had a masters in secondary education and had accepted a job in Elk Grove Township Dist. 55 as principal of the Forest View School in Mount Prospect.

In 1968 Warden moved from the principalship to administrative assistant, as a result of a conflict with the Dist. 55 superintendent. The superintendent left the district a month later, and Warden followed later, in 1970. Warden served as the director of elementary vocational education for the Northwest Education Cooperative until his move to Dist. 26 this summer.

Warden believes his new role as superintendent involves, ideally, "helping other staff members get their jobs done more effectively. I believe a good superintendent is deeply involved in leadership training."

"BUT, REALISTICALLY, a superintendent is often spread extremely thin in his administrative tasks and must rely on other district administrators."

"In small districts, especially, the superintendent is more likely to be a generalist, rather than a specialist. I believe it is safe to say that in the smaller district there is a great deal of emphasis on the budget and business services. My time is mainly taken up with these functions."

Apart from the daily routines of his office, Warden said he would like to unite the seven district schools.

"During the last seven years, Harwood took the district through a heavy growth period. It is now my job to identify common goals for the district schools, and bring them closer together."

In addition, Warden intends to intensify the leadership development in the district and to improve curriculum development.

"I also want to improve the district's public relations so that parents can better understand the district and become involved."

Warden Once A Celebrated Cause

Controversy once swirled around Thomas Warden, now superintendent of River Trails Elementary Dist. 26.

Just over two years ago Warden was a celebrated cause in Elk Grove Township Elementary Dist. 55 when his superintendent relieved him of his duties as principal of Forest View School in Mount Prospect and reappointed him curriculum coordinator.

The Forest View Parents Study Committee came to Warden's defense, demanding that then Supt. Donald Thomas explain why Warden was being reappointed.

A series of stormy meetings, beginning in April, 1969, resulted in the board of education of the district upholding Thomas' decision.

At one point, a Mount Prospect resident wrote to then State Supt. of Public Instruction Ray Paga to ask that he intervene "to see if anything can be done."

AT ONE MEETING where angry parents were questioning Thomas and the Dist. 55 Board, Warden was asked if he agreed with the transfer. He replied that he would go along with the position offered by Thomas but would have preferred to stay at Forest View.

Thomas, who had come under fire a month before he resigned, Warden when the district's business manager and the director of building and grounds were fired, submitted his resignation to the board in June, 1969.

The resignation, accepted by the board in a 5-2 vote, terminated Thomas' contract with the district one year before it was due to expire.

Following Thomas' departure, Warden was appointed administrative assistant to Al Waitman, who served as acting superintendent until Supt. James Krulik took over in July, 1970. Warden left the district in 1970 to become director of EIVE, the elementary vocational education project run by the Northwest Education Cooperative.

Thomas became superintendent of schools in Amsterdam, N.Y., shortly after leaving Dist. 55. This year, like Warden, accepted a new job, this time as superintendent of a school district in Newport Beach, Calif.

Have you ever walked through a city — for a few hours — and known that this was a place where you could spend the rest of your life? That was how Boston affected me.

Al and I pulled into the city in the early afternoon. We were to call the people we were staying with to get directions to their house. Street directions are of very little use in Boston. For all its assets that city has the worst traffic situation I've ever seen. It makes New York and Chicago look easy to drive in.

I was the driver and five minutes of going round and round in one of Boston's infamous "rotaries" (which is similar to the Golf-Wolf traffic circle, but about six lanes wide, and no white lines to separate traffic) I'd had it. Again, a friendly neighborhood policeman put us in the right direction.

BEFORE I CONTINUE I must insert a bit about Boston traffic patterns. They have not yet discovered simple red, yellow and green timed stoplights in that city. Instead, they use flashing red, flashing yellow and flashing green (will someone please tell me what you do at a flashing green) lights or nothing. Imagine a major intersection without even a stop sign. Risky.

The urban planner for Boston adored one-way streets that lead into U-turns or wind up in one-way street going the opposite direction. He also created massive expressways that you can't get on unless you go two miles out of your way.

AND IF THE traffic pattern isn't bad enough the drivers are insane. Apparently the philosophy they have is if you go real fast and don't look, nobody will hit you. Well, when you're traveling real slow, scared to death and looking in four directions at once to see who's going to hit you next, it's a terrifying experience.

Due to the traffic situation we spent a lot of time on foot. Our first day we walked from about 4 p.m. to 3 a.m., stopping only to eat at Durgins (which reminded me of a waterfront equivalent of The Bakery — only it was in Haymarket Square — and has sensational fish).

How can anyone describe Boston? Government Square — where all the city buildings are located — is an ultra modern mass of concrete and glass. Down the street is the oldest building in Boston, originally used for protest meetings and being used for that purpose today.

WE WALKED A WAYS further, passing the cemetery where John Hancock, Paul Revere and Samuel Adams are buried along with victims of the Boston massacre, and wound up at the State House — the state capitol building whose cornerstone was laid by Adams and Revere in 1795.

Then there was Beacon St. — everything I'd hoped it would be — with its famous townhouses and below ground entrances. Here live the rich and some young with their automobiles lining the cobblestone streets.

Boston Commons was left to the city for the use of the people. It was designated as a public grazing grounds and we were told that, even today, a citizen can bring his cattle to graze on this beautiful park. Across the road is another public park, the land again left to the people rather than the government.

COPLEY SQUARE probably impressed me the most. In the background is Trinity Church, founded in 1734 and built in 1829. It is a magnificent Gothic building and somehow seems right in place with the massive concrete square and fountain. It was about 1:30 a.m. when we entered the Square. There were about 20 others there, some playing guitar, some just sitting and talking, some wading around the fountain with their pants rolled up.

The next day we returned to the Square around noon. It was mobbed with people — several of whom were completely immersed in the cool waters of the fountain. My mind kept flashing back to Buckingham Fountain in Chicago and what the city fathers would have to say about fully clothed bathers romping around their spraying waters.

WE TOURED THE Boston Art Museum and viewed its fine collection of "masters." It was really something to see the authentic paintings so often pictured in history books. We could have spent many more hours there but time was short and there was so much more to see.

Harvard was a big disappointment. I expected it to be off somewhere in the countryside. Instead there it was right in the heart of Cambridge (which immediately adjoins Boston) separated from the bustling traffic of the city by huge wrought iron fences.

20 Major Phone Cables Damaged By Storm Here

The rain and high winds that ripped through Des Plaines and other Northwest suburban communities Wednesday night caused "the worst storm damage in the past six years," according to a spokesman for Central Telephone Co.

The spokesman, Martin Brown, said at least 20 major telephone cables were damaged in the violent storm.

Richard Olson, maintenance center supervisor for the telephone company, said each cable contained lines for 100 to 1,800 telephones. He said the damage was the result of "lightning burns" that allowed water to seep inside the cables. The lightning, he said, also blew out many lightning protection devices on telephone poles.

Brown said installation crews were pressed into repair assignments before the storm ended in an effort to restore service as soon as possible. He said he was unable to estimate how many homes were without telephone service.

Brown said full service should have been restored by last night.

A spokesman for Commonwealth Edison agreed with Brown's description of the storm damage, calling it "the most extensive damage in some time."

Paul Parker, district superintendent for the power company, estimated 500 to 600 homes in Des Plaines were without electricity as a result of the storm.

Parker said there were at least 10 incidents of power failure in the city, but most were localized to one-block areas. The largest failure, Parker said, resulted in a power loss to about 300 homes.

Parker said that although full service had been restored by yesterday afternoon, the company was experiencing some problems caused by equipment which was weakened by the storm but did not fail until some time later.

The Des Plaines Fire Department reported a power line down and a blackout in the area of Mount Prospect Road and Oakton Street.

Fire Capt. Lawrence Crosby said the three fire stations received 17 calls during the storm. He said off-duty firemen were called back to duty for three hours.

Crosby said firemen responded to numerous automatic fire alarms which were activated by power failures.

Among other calls during the storm, Crosby said firemen responded to a report of a tree down on a power line at 849 Mason Ln.; a lightning strike on the roof of a home at 519 Walnut; and a fire in an abandoned car at 969 S. Elmhurst Rd.

Crosby said a burning transformer at 1022 Webster Ln., did not present much difficulty for firemen, however. "It was extinguished by rain," he said.

Board To Eye Potter Road

The Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals will consider a batch of rezoning and special use requests involving four properties along Ballard and Potter roads just east of Des Plaines at a local hearing Sept. 8.

Included in the requests for zoning changes are a proposed shopping center at the northeast corner of Potter and Dempster streets, across from Maine East High School, and an apartment complex on 15 acres of land on the east side of Potter north of Dempster.

Both properties, according to the zoning board, are owned by the Croation Fraternal Union of America. A third Croation petition asks the county to rezone one half acre of land at the southeast corner of Potter and Ballard for a gasoline service station.

THE FOURTH PARCEL of land, about six acres at the northwest corner of Ballard and Delphia avenues, is the site of a proposed apartment complex and small shopping area. The land is owned under a secret bank trust, according to the zoning board.

The Croation Union is asking a change from R-4 single-family zoning to R-6 apartment zoning plus a special use permit for a planned unit development on the 15-acre site along the east side of Potter.

At the northeast corner of Potter and Dempster, the Croation Union is seeking a change from single-family residential to B-4 general service business zoning for the shopping center. At the corner at Potter and Ballard, B-2 restricted business zoning has been asked for the service station.

At Ballard and Delphia, according to the zoning board, the owners are asking for a change from single-family residential to high-density apartment zoning, plus a planned development.

The zoning board hearing will be held Sept. 8 at 3 p.m. in the Des Plaines Municipal Building city council chambers, 1412 Miner St.

MODEL AVIATION WITH YOUR SON

Dads, when's the last time you sat down with your son and honestly worked on a project together? If you're like me and most other fathers with young sons, you're probably too busy playing golf, watching your favorite game on TV, keeping up with the Joneses socially or what have you. Sure the boys have all sorts of things to keep their spare time occupied all year round, but why not get started with them on a model aviation project right now. It could be a simple "Paper & Stick" type model. (The type that you may have built as a young lad.) We have a good selection of these starting at 69¢. Or it could be a Contraline Model using the old 1/2 A motor your son has kicking around. We can even set you up with a Complete Radio Control Outfit for less than $100.00.

Stop by and see us.

Glaser In Record Showing

Bob Glaser, Paddock Classic Traveling League President, teamed with John Handegard of Oregon to break one of the oldest records in the annual F.I.Q. World Bowling Tournament in the Milwaukee Arena.

Glaser rolled 1,274 for six games, including a 249 and 242, and Handegard added 1,204 for a 2,478 total, erasing the mark of 2,459 set by the Swedish team in 1958.

The meet runs through Saturday.

Meeting At Hersey

A football rules interpretation meeting will be held next Tuesday, Aug. 31, at 7:30 p.m. in the Little Theater at Hersey High School. Dick Kinseman is manager of the meeting and Lis Astreth of the Illinois High School Association will be the interpreter. All coaches and officials are invited.

The 1971 football code will be discussed, and a film "Football By The Rules" will be shown. Refreshments will be sponsored by the Athletic Officials Service.

Brown To Oak Park

Jim Brown, a coach on the Illinois football staff since 1962, has accepted a position as defensive coordinator at suburban Oak Park under head coach Ed Zembel.

A Mendota product, Brown teamed with brother Bill (now a Minnesota Viking star) in giving Illinois an outstanding 1-2 fullback punch during the 1968-69 seasons. Jim gained 521 yards during his Illinois career.

Brown joined Pete Elliott's staff after a year at Proviso East. He served first as freshman coach and then as a varsity assistant under Jim Valek.

All the Valek staffers who departed in favor of the Bob Blackman regime have taken positions in coaching and or teaching positions.

Semmerling Fence Senior Champ In Maine-Northfield

Maine-Northfield Little League action ended with an exciting playoff game that was suspended because of darkness with Golf Mill Bank leading Semmerling Fence 9 to 2 and ended, after resumption, in a 9 to 9 extra inning victory and the senior league championship for Semmerling.

George Kaufman was the starting pitcher for the Fencers and pitched the innings played prior to the suspension. In the resumed game, he was relieved by Tom Knauer who shut out GMB for the rest of the game and was credited with the win.

The decisive blow of the game was a single by Doug Zorn that drove in Brad Eisenberg for run number nine. Earlier, Mike Karlins, who had a double and a walk, stole home to throw the contest into a tie. Karlins also is credited with making the outstanding catch of the game in the bottom of the final inning when the Bankers' Bruce Long threatened to tie the game again with a long blast into center field which Karlins nailed. Long had previously added to the Bank's tally with two doubles.

The Fencers' Ron Oriowski doubled and singled, Larry Deschamps doubled and Gary Hoffmann had two singles. Rick Jacobson had an RBI and Randy Aberle scored one of the winner's runs.

For Golf Mill Bank, which played a very good season and was the power team in the second-half, there was some very polished play. Ricky Pellegrini made an excellent play at second base and Wally Pinas did the same at short. Harold Mash doubled and singled, Bob Feozor came up with two singles and Matt Osterholt, Jim Dolzal, Pellegrini and Pinas each came through with singles.

This game ended play for MNLL for 1971. League activities continue, however, with the election of officers for next season coming up and the Father-Son Awards Dinner at the White Eagle on Sept. 24.

It Isn't All College 'Rah! Rah!'

How Football Looks To Players

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Last football season was not altogether filled with glory for Jim Coderna, punter for Central Michigan. During a kicking drill, he received the snap from center, took a couple of serious steps forward and kicked his offensive halfback instead of the pigskin.

Nor were garlands showered upon Steve Haag, a linebacker for San Francisco, when he led his team onto the field for the first home game, tripped, and landed on his chin strap.

Yet there are moments, said Carlos Alvarez, Florida flanker, "when you feel you have conquered and overcome nature, man and yourself." However, Alvarez adds that he doesn't like the way football "has regulated athletes, which has curtailed their personal freedoms, and the way it has become commercialized, thus putting too much emphasis on winning and not on the sport itself."

These were some of the memories and attitudes of college football players included in the provocative 1971 press kit issued by Larry Klein, director of National Collegiate Sports Services, a promotional arm of the NCAA. If there is a more imaginative public-relations man than Klein, he has not yet come out of the woodwork.

Klein asked coaches and sports information directors from around the country to nominate the most interesting and/or intelligent players on their returning squads (unrelated to physical prowess). He then sent a two-page questionnaire to 200 nominees, asking such questions as "Is College Football Relevant?" to "Your Most Embarrassing Moment." The first 60 who replied made his list.

There are built-in hazards to this procedure. Too often, coaches and information directors are anxious to seek out players who mirror their own views of their own generation. And the survey was too broad-based to give detailed responses (and perhaps too careful not to ask such pointed questions as views on race). But what is here gives an interesting insight into some of our nation's more thoughtful college football players.

The question, "What I Like Most About College Football," elicited some typical responses: team effort, competition, comradeship, to the reply by San Francisco safety Mike Connolly: "It has given me the opportunity to be tested. It has let me know a little about the man I keep locked up inside. Emotions seem to run rawer and truer and stronger on stage."

"What I Like Least About College Football" drew some of the most incisive remarks, especially pertaining to coaches:

"The impersonal attitude and distant relationships between coach and player, a loss of the coach-player warmth that exists on high school and small-college levels." (Steve Haag)

"The coaching hierarchy and derogation of players. Some coaches fail to realize the goals of the game." (Brian Houseal, Sr., guard, Colgate)

"Sometimes coaches take fun away from the game and put on pressure." (Chip Regine, Jr., end, Brown)

David Doda of Wake Forest says he dislikes the pain from injuries most of all, and John Roush of Ohio University says he most deplors "cruel reality that not all young men can realize the success they had desired."

"The Most Valuable Lesson Learned From College Football":

"The true meaning of discipline, sacrifice and the importance of setting goals as high as the sky and striving for them." (Bill Taylor, tailback, Michigan)

"Because I am deaf, I have to work extra hard to compete and not disappoint the many people who have faith in my ability to play college football." (Gary McBride, tackle, Bowling Green)

And to the question, "The Most Stimulating Work I've Ever Done?":

"Trying to write a short story or poem. It's the most frustrating yet rewarding." (Dennis Ferguson, safety, Utah State)

"Being a 6-foot-1, 240-pounder — but under age (20) — bouncer at a bar." (Dave Joyner, tackle, Penn State)

In a poll of four categories unrelated to football, "Patton" got the most votes for "Best Movie I've Ever Seen," "The Bible" was tops for "Best Book," Martin Luther King was the leader for "Dead American Man I Most Admire" and for "Living American Man I Most Admire," the winner was "my father."

Three Win In Trace Olympics

Three local youngsters won top honors in the Trace Olympics finals held Saturday, Aug. 21, at North Shore Trace, Des Plaines.

Ray Hagen, 10, of 292 Masa, Hermitage Trace, Hoffman Estates, took first place in the freestyle swimming contest for ages 11 and under.

Winner in the freestyle swim for ages 12 to 14 was Rick Laske, 13, of 9735 Sumac, Fairway Trace, Des Plaines.

Both Hagen and Laske were awarded new bicycles as first prize winners.

Lou Ann Copley, 12, of 984 Crabapple, Orchard Trace, Wheeling, took first place in the penny find contest for ages 14 and under.

Some 175 youngsters and adults from 17 Trace residential-recreational communities competed in the Olympics finals, according to Larry Helmich and Fred Choate, district managers of Kassuba Development Corp., developer of the Trace communities.

Olympic finalists were chosen in preliminary competitions held Aug. 14 when some 2,500 residents of all Kassuba Traces took part in four scheduled events at Trace swimming pools.

In addition to a freestyle swim in three age brackets, 11 and under, 12 to 14, and 15 and over; and a penny find for children under 14 and for youngsters 15 and over, the competition included a water-filled balloon throwing contest for boys and girls 11 and over, and a bathing beauty contest for "Little Ladies" under 10.

THE ACCEPTED INFLUENCE IN THE NORTHWEST SUBURBS

'Jewish Costumes Through Ages'

Women attending the get-acquainted social planned for Thursday evening by the Henrietta Seld Hadassah may find that fashion really hasn't changed too much over the years.

"Jewish Costumes Through the Ages," a showing of fashions dating back to biblical times and updated to the early 1900s, is likely to point up that except for modifications many fashions today are quite similar to those of other countries.

Costumes for the show, authentic copies sewn from historical information, will include "knickers," "pedal pushers," peasant-style gowns and capes.

According to Jewish history the "knickers" were the attire of an Algerian Jew of the 1800s. The full cut trousers are in white as are the long stockings. The outfit also includes a black vest and shirt and a black-tasseled blue scarf.

THE FULL CUT "pedal pushers" were worn in 1210 by young Jewish students in Sweden. Over the dark gold trousers the model will wear a poncho fashioned from a square of natural-colored burlap.

A Jewess from Morocco in the early 1700s will be clad in an ornate, black silk, floor-length gown and vest trimmed in gold braid. Her headpiece, in red and similar to today's bridal headpiece, will include a veil.

A German Jewess of the early 1800s will be wearing a large apron over her floor-length gown with fitted bodice and flounce skirt. Her black, floor-length cape features a white pleated collar; her headpiece is bonnet-type.

There will be a dozen of the historical gowns in the show, oldest of which will be a shapeseal shroud trimmed in light blue and swathed around a barefoot model representing the Biblical days. The shroud will also be draped over her head and she will carry an earthen jug.

THE LATEST COSTUME, such as that worn by a German Jewess of the early 1900s, could be the forerunner of today's peasant gowns. The floor-length dress is in pink and white print and features button sleeves and square neckline on a fitted Empire bodice. Her shoes, very near-

THE MINI SKIRT would be out of place — but many of today's fashions have stemmed from this group of ensembles from "Jewish Costumes Through the Ages." The costumes will be included in a show wing of historical will be featured during an ice cream social in the River Trails Park District, 303 S. Lee St., Prospect Heights, beginning at 8 p.m. Guests will have their choice in ice cream toppings at serve-it-yourself tables. Cakes and cookies are being baked by members of the Henrietta Seld group.

Women wishing to attend the social, which replaces the membership tea, may call Mrs. Leonard Kaplan, 286-4685, for reservations.

ly authentic, will be white with clunky heels.

The costumes are mostly made from cotton homespuns varying from coarse to fine.

"Jewish Costumes Through the Ages"

Dear Dorothy: We are redoing an old house and wondered just how much the ampere service entrance should be to take care of the average household of say, two adults and two children? —Abner Y.

The best person to discuss this with is an electrical contractor. Before you get to him, I can give you a quick short course. Many electrical codes require a 100-ampere service line for an average six-room home. This should take care of equipment drawing from 20,000 to 25,000 watts. Basically, 100 amperes are equal to 25 kilowatts and one kilowatt can handle 1,000 watts.

One electrical engineer reported he had a 100-ampere entrance in his home and this took care of a washing machine, dryer, dishwasher, electric range, two window air conditioners and a few other appliances (TV, toaster and so on). One can always add another 100 amps if needs change, but this should only be necessary in a heavily electrified home. The important thing is to have enough circuits. It is wise to have four appliance circuits and six lighting circuits — and there should never be more than 10 outlets to one lighting circuit. Clear, I hope.

Dear Dorothy: Since writing to ask if you knew how one could clean a fiberglass shower stall, I have found the perfect solution. Just dampen the bottom of the shower stall with water, then sprinkle on powdered dishwasher detergent so that the whole area is covered. Leave for 30 minutes. Rinse off thoroughly. The stall should come out sparkling clean. If not, repeat the treatment. —Mrs. Kathleen Mayes.

Even though the company that makes this stall recommends one of the strong liquid detergents, I'm sure this treatment ought to be all right though I wouldn't overdo it. Dishwasher detergent is pretty potent stuff.

'Angel' Is Memorable

by PAT ADAM

A superb cast makes the Ravinia Festival version of "Look Homeward, Angel," a memorable experience instead of just an enjoyable visit to the theater.

With this production in Ravinia Park's Murray Theatre, George Keathley continues the record of theatrical successes in Chicago that made him winner of the first annual Jeff Award for best director. It is well worth a trip to Highland Park to see.

Thomas Wolfe's autobiographical novel, "Look Homeward, Angel," is replete with memorable characters that Ketti Frings has delineated faithfully in adapting the book to the stage. An outstanding cast bring them all to life with even minor non-speaking roles making a contribution.

IRENE DAILEY, winner of the Sarah Siddons Award for her acting last spring in Keathley's Ivanhoe Theatre production of "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds," shares star billing with Irishman Dan O'Hertly. She is Eliza Gant, wife and mother with such an obsession for owning property that she has sacrificed her family to its pursuit. As in the story Eliza overwhelms her husband, W. O. Gant, played by O'Hertly, Miss Dailey outshines her co-star.

In her own way Eliza lives her children: Ben, the newspaperman, played by Alan Mixon; Eugene, played by young David Beard; Luke, portrayed by Jonathan Hogan; and daughter Helen, acted by Erin Tomcheff. This is poignantly apparent at Ben's death from pneumonia when she cannot let go his hand. But in her relentless efforts to save money so she can buy property, Eliza has failed to let her children see she does love them. "We only wanted your love, Mama," cries out young Gene as she strives to defend her pennypinching.

THIS OBSESSION has alienated her husband as well, even once driven him from home. But, forced by age and failing health to come back, he is living again in the Dixieland Boarding House owned and operated by Eliza. Now he takes refuge in drink.

Miss Dailey is outstanding as Eliza and so is Alan Mixon as Ben. Big brother who is more father to young Gene than W. O. Is, Ben has failed to escape the trap in which their mother has caught the family, but he is determined that Eugene shall not.

The 17-year-old Eugene, believed to be Thomas Wolfe himself, is played by David Beard, just turned 19 on opening night, with college roles in "Spoon River Anthology" and "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail" behind him. He is most believable as the lonely youth who has, as he puts it, "from the first time I crawled from my cradle toward the door been trying to escape." Ben's death and his mother's reluctant sale of property free him to go to the state university, and he seizes the opportunity without regret.

TIME AND CAROUSING have drained W. O., "Mr. Gant," as Eliza still addresses him, of the zest which he once brought to his work as a stonemason. He fears death and hates Eliza. Despite star billing, O'Hertly is outshone by Miss Dailey, Mixon and Beard although he is a handsome "Mr. Gant."

Particularly good in supporting roles are Harriet Hall, a resident of Des Plaines, as Laura James, the boarder with whom Eugene falls in love, and Martha Webster as "Fatty," another boarder and probably the only other person about whom Ben cares besides Eugene. It is she Ben wants at his death bed rather than mother or sister.

Also excellent in lesser roles are Art Kasul as Eliza's brother, Will Pentland; Douglas Mellor as Dr. Maguire; Sandy Lipton as Madame Elizabeth; and Erin Tomcheff as Helen.

ROUNDING OUT the superb cast are Joseph Bell as Hugh Barton, Helen's husband; Viola Berwick as Mrs. Clatt, a boarder; Allan Carlson, her son Jake; Joanne Everett as Miss Brown, another boarder; Jonathan Hogan as Luke, the third Gant son; Maureen Steindler as Mrs. Snowden, Karin Woodward as Florrie Mangle and Leslie Hinderer as Mr. Farel, other boarders.

Joseph Niemi's set deserves special mention. He has extended the stage to the front and both sides. Center stage set is the Dixieland Boarding House and front porch while one side becomes the yard with an old-fashioned lawn swing and the other, W. O. Gant's stonemasonry shop. Shop roof, porch roof and lawn trees are suggested through forms, and a scrim permits some action to take place in bedrooms. The blackish blue color of the set invokes a mood but doesn't compete with the action.

KEATHLEY HAS further expanded the stage to the entire theater by making use of through-the-audience entrances that are very effective.

Virgil Johnson's costumes reflect the 1916 setting of the play, and Bengt Nygren's subdued lighting, except for a scene in Gant's shop, enhances Niemi's set.

"Look Homeward, Angel" plays through Sept. 5. Performances are at 6 and 9:30 p.m. Saturdays; 3 and 7:30 p.m. Sundays; 7:30 Tuesdays; and 8:30 p.m. Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays. There is no show on Mondays.

Maxon Puts Gleam In Hunter's Eye

by TOM VON MALDER

The animal heads are noticed first. They hang high on the walls. Some animals, such as the timber wolf, look fierce even in death. Others, like a caribou shot two years ago in Newfoundland, retain their beauty. There also is a moose from Newfoundland and a buffalo head from South Dakota.

The eye then goes to the racks of rifles which line two walls. They have polished wooden stocks and deep black barrels. The sight could worry a pacifist, with his ideas of guns. It also can make a hunter's eye gleam as he decides whether he needs a new rifle.

But to E. W. Maxon, 55, of Prospect Heights, the rifles are part of his livelihood.

MAXON IS THE owner of Shooters Supplies, 500 E. Northwest Hwy., Mount Prospect. For 12 years, he has dealt in firearms and sports equipment at that location.

Through the years, some 30 in all, Maxon has seen changes in his business — not all of which were welcome.

"I used to guide and outfit hunting trips to Wyoming," he said. "But now I can't. Everything is set up like a lottery where there are only a certain number of hunters and catches permitted for each species."

This means a hunter could afford the trip financially but once he got to Wyoming he might not get a permit. "I couldn't guarantee him a catch," Maxon said. "But I still can recommend somebody out there if a hunter's looking for a guide."

Maxon used to sell antique guns but now "can't find enough good ones" to justify his bothering with them. Some of the major rifle manufacturers make replicas anyway.

Then there are forms he is saddled with. "Every time I sell a weapon I have two permits to fill out," Maxon said. "There are so many Internal Revenue forms. It is a big headache for this business today."

MAXON STILL does custom gunsmithing. This can include almost anything from raising the grade of a rifle to cutting chambers and fixing barrel lengths.

"I can make a right or a left-handed gun, for example. Or put in a pistol grip or leave it off. I do what the customer wants."

Sometimes he rebuilds a whole rifle. Since Maxon does all his own work, such a rebuilding job takes an average of four months.

Maxon is just getting into his busiest time of the year, August through December. He said that so far this year sales and receipts are down from last year. Part of the blame belongs with the unions, he said, as "equipment prices have gone way up due to union wage demands."

HIMSELF A HUNTER, Maxon will go to Alaska's Northern Slope this season hunting for sheep and bear. He said the closest he has ever come to a hunting injury was when he shot a charging moose at 42 feet.

Over the years, Maxon also has taught marksmanship. He once took the National Rifle Association exam that qualified him to instruct. Maxon has been a life member of the NRA since 1929.

Maxon said he feels strongly about the "do-gooders" who blame the sportsmen for depleting game. He said with all the money the sportsmen have tied up in equipment and fees they would be the last to want the game supplies depleted.

He said in 1929, the sportsmen put on a voluntary 11 per cent tax on equipment so that game reserves would be maintained. "The do-gooders don't realize that," he said.

Cemetery Building Burglarized Again

A building at the All Saints Cemetery, 710 N. River Rd., Des Plaines, has been burglarized for the second time this summer, according to Des Plaines police.

Police said the burglars entered the building sometime over the weekend and stole $14 in cash. Several items, including a radio and tape recorder were not disturbed, police said.

The burglars apparently entered the building by smashing a window with a fire extinguisher taken from a boiler room in another building. Police said the same extinguisher was used in a burglary at the cemetery in June.

signments are being prepared now for the opening of the school year. Enrollment is open to all youngsters, pre-kindergarten through high school.

The annual synagogue picnic will be held Monday, Sept. 6, at Northwestern Woods in Des Plaines. Lunch will be available. The community is invited to this all day outing, which begins at 11:30 a.m.

Regional Transit Plan Considered

The Northeastern Ill. Planning Commission (NIPC) in early September will consider adoption of an interim regional transportation plan for the eight-county metropolitan area of northeastern Illinois and northwest Indiana.

The plan under consideration is the Interim Transportation Plan prepared by the Chicago Area Transportation Study (CATS), a department of the Illinois Division of Highways.

It is intended to lead to a later comprehensive transportation plan, on which work has been started by the newly formed Regional Transportation and Planning Board.

Member agencies of that board are NIPC, CATS, City of Chicago and the Lake-Porter (Ind.) Regional Transportation and Planning Commission.

The CATS study was released to the public in March. It outlines possible networks for each of the four transportation modes — public, highway, aviation and freight.

At the same time, it singled out public transportation as the single most pressing problem in the greater metropolitan area.

Before the plans was released, several NIPC officials commented that the preliminary plan placed too much emphasis on highway improvement and failed to give adequate attention to mass transportation problems.

A NIPC spokesman said the staff is currently reviewing its recommendations on the report. The NIPC planning committee will review the plan on Sept. 1, with its recommendations subject to action on Sept. 9.

Approval of the interim plan is necessary before federal grants for projects can be sought. The meetings will be held at 1:30 p.m. in Room 2424, at 400 West Madison St., Chicago.

Country-Western Day Is Saturday

The barbecuing of a prize-winning hog will highlight Kruse's Country Day Saturday in downtown Mount Prospect. Proceeds from the special country-western day will go to the Mount Prospect Community Action Plan (CAP), according to Dennis Binder, assistant manager of Kruse's Restaurant, long time village landmark.

The Mount Prospect Community Action Plan is a village-wide effort to establish lines of communication between the adults and young people of the community. CAP sponsors the ICE House as a gathering spot and counseling center, and also administers a hot line program for persons in trouble from drugs or other crises.

Binder's proposal has received the support of Mayor Robert Teichert, other village officials and merchants. The Mount Prospect Federal Savings & Loan Association has joined Kruse's in their request to block off the Emerson and Prospect intersection between their businesses to utilized parking lots for the day's activities.

EVENTS SCHEDULED for Kruse's Country Day include a children's costume contest, bike decorating and bubble gum blowing contests, sack races, a children's pop drinking contest and a rope skipping competition. In conjunction with the Country Day, a bake sale will be sponsored by several Mount Prospect women's groups.

Of major interest to the men will be golf prizes offered to those playing the Mount Prospect Country Club course that day. Scores should be turned in at Kruse's. Trophies will be awarded for low score and low handicap scores for the day.

An adult Country Day costume contest will be judged at 6 p.m. followed by square dancing in the street. Two bands are tentatively scheduled.

A 300-CHAIR movie theater will be set up in the vacant warehouse adjacent to the restaurant. Highlights of the Indianapolis 500 Memorial Race will be shown, courtesy of Andy Granatelli. A second film featuring United Airline's new 747 also will be shown.

A menu including barbecue, hot dogs, huge hotel rounds of beef, corn on the cob and taters will be prepared under the supervision of Sophie Mulso, an employee at Kruse's Restaurant for 25 years. There are also plenty of jobs still available for volunteers, particularly the services of butchers.

Anyone interested in volunteering their time to CAP or donating to the bake sale should call Kruse's Restaurant, CL 3-1200 for details.

KRUSE'S RESTAURANT, 100 E. Prospect, Mount Prospect, will be the site of Kruse's Country Day, an activity packed day to benefit the Mount Prospect Community Action Plan (CAP). A village landmark itself, the restaurant features many antiques in its decor, including this 100 year old lamp above employe Al Ball's head.

School Salary Talk Delays Investigated

Richard Martwick, county superintendent of schools, Tuesday reported his office was investigating delays and breaks in teacher salary negotiations.

Charging that "inflammatory statements" had been issued by both sides since the announcement of President

Nixon's wage price freeze, Martwick said he saw a threat to "good faith negotiations."

"The President made it clear that the decree cannot be used as an excuse or a bludgeon. Therefore, we must not allow teachers or school board to either delay, break off or make a sham of negotiations," he said.

He reported his office had taken several steps, including:

—Offering to make available his personnel to aid negotiations;

—Insisting "both teachers' representatives and school boards resist inflammatory and irresponsible statements."

—Promising to forward findings from any investigation to the Federal authorities for prosecution.

Martwick, speaking at a press conference in his offices in Chicago's Civic Center, was pressed by reporters to name individuals who had threatened to break off negotiations.

HIS LEGAL COUNSEL, Normal Finkel, responded to the flurry of questions by stating, "We don't want to come down on either side," and that the office's purpose was "conciliatory."

Martwick was later asked if the statement was a "subtle threat" for districts to shape up. "Yes, I'd rather you'd say 'conciliatory' than a 'threat,'" he said.

Finkel said the office has the power to enter a teacher-board dispute to determine the facts, and then report those findings to the state superintendent, and that the office can act as a counsel to "various school personnel."

He asserted, however, the office was not planning to take over the running of schools, adding that the office had the moral authority to publicize facts leading to possible federal prosecution.

After the conference, Martwick said he hoped teacher negotiations were settled by the last week of office.

He said that three persons in his office — Finkel, director of human relations, William McGhee and teacher scholarship and liaisons director Dale Love — would be responsible for the action.

Martwick stressed his office has no power over teachers' unions, but that he had the "tremendous power" of fact-finding in conflicts between teachers and school boards.

Finkel said the office has received communications indicating that in some districts negotiations were not continuing in good faith, although he would not identify any groups. Martwick reported 54 districts in Cook County remained without contracts for the 1971-72 school year, and that there was a good possibility that groups did not want to come up with a satisfactory agreement at this time.

Big Names In TV Season Spotlight

by DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Every new television season starts out with the promise of better things. It's like the concept of tomorrow. It must be better than today.

And this '71-'72 season seems to be a particularly interesting season, at least from the vantage point of late summer. There is a higher percentage of new shows this year than last, and, most significantly, the new shows are sludded with big stars.

The main reason for this, of course, is the decline in motion picture production. With few movies to be made, some major movie names have switched to the once-disdained milieu of television. You'll have such stars as James Stewart, Glenn Ford, Rock Hudson, Rod Taylor, Tony Curtis, Shirley MacLaine and Anthony Quinn on TV regularly this year.

This is the year, too, when the FCC took a half-hour each night away from the networks. The idea was to encourage local programming. But, just in case the local stations are too lazy or too poor to do their own, syndicated packages are going all out to take up the slack. They are peddling old shows and, too, they are making some new ones.

So, besides the 21 new shows slated by the three networks, there may be other new shows, depending on what city you live in. And these possible additional series have some fair-sized stars, too — Robert Brown, of Here Come the Brides, is filming something called Primus, in the Bahamas; Jack Albertson has the title role in a medical-adventure half-hour called Doctor Simon Locke; Harry Guardino is playing a special investigator called Monty Nash; and there are several others.

BUT IT IS THE new network shows which attract the most attention. Some of them sound like winners, but there's a need for a lot of luck in the TV business. Last year at this time, there were 25 new January Of those, only ten will be back shows, and seven came along in for a second season — Flip Wilson, The Odd Couple, The Patridge Family, Arnie, The Mary Tyler Moore Show, The Smith Family, All in the Family, Night Gallery, Alias Smith and Jones and McCloud, which becomes part of NBC's ambitious Mystery Movie.

Thus is a three-segment 90 minutes, with Dennis Weaver's McCloud alternating with Peter Falk's Columbo and Rock Hudson's McMillan and Wife. All three deal with crime-fighting, in various aspects.

Crime-fighting is probably the biggest trend this year, and there is also a geographical trend. There are four new shows set in the American southwest.

In Nichols, James Garner plays a sheriff in the southwest in 1914. In Cade's County, Glenn Ford plays a sheriff in the southwest today. In Bearcats, Rod Taylor and Dennis Cole play two investigators in the southwest in 1914 (obviously, that was a good year in the city). And in The Man and the City, Anthony Quinn plays a mayor in the contemporary southwest.

OTHER CRIME-BUSTERS on the new schedule are George Kennedy, starring as Sarge, a cop-turned-priest who still battles crime; William Conrad as a private eye named Cannon; James Franciscus as Longstreet, a blind insurance investigator; Robert Conrad as The D.A.; David Janssen as O'Hara, U.S. Treasury, a T-Mad at work, and Tony Curtis and Roger Moore, as The Per-suers, two gentlemen-adventurers in a made-in-England show.

Even a couple of comedies have a crime flavor — The Partners has Don Adams and Rupert Crosse as bumbling cops and Chicago Teddy Bears involves Dean Jones in the '20s, running a speak-easy and trying to keep out of the clutches of the law and rival gangsters.

There are relatively few new situation comedies. Shirley MacLaine has one, again made in England, as a photo-journalist who roams around Europe. Larry Hagman and Donna Mills, in The Good Life, play a couple who decide to try life as butler-cook to rich folks. Sandy Duncan plays Funny Face, a girl who is a combination coed-and-model. Dick Van

Rock Hudson

Dyke is back, as a TV talk show host with a family. Jimmy Stewart, on his new show, plays a college professor. And Bobby Sherman's Getting Together has him as a song writer.

That leaves only two others — Owen Marshall, with Arthur Hill, is a drama about a lawyer in a medium-sized city, and The Funny Side is a comedy-variety hour with five couples showing varying responses to the same situation, with Gene Kelly and others as the hosts.

It's a line-up that reads well, and the presence of so many stars should make this an attractive season. But the odds against success are still terribly high.

Is our future in the bag?

Some scientists give our planet thirty more years. Then population zero.

No mushroom cloud to ring down the curtain. Just pollution. Silent and simple-minded. Like people scattering trash. Paper. Glass. Plastic. Deadly trivia. That's our destiny. Unless we change our ways. Government and industry are spending millions to do away with pollution. But there's one source of pollution they can't control. People. We have to do that job ourselves.

Your automobile is a good place to start. Don't throw trash from your car. And above all, don't forget the fundamentals...keep your engine in tune. You'll cut harmful emissions decisively. Change your oil and filter on schedule. Try the new, improved gasolines. Service your car's pollution control device regularly. If you don't have one, install one.

All these steps take a little effort. But they must be done. Now.

All Invited To Education Parley

An invitation for Illinois citizens to participate in a statewide conference on educational goals and priorities has been issued by Supt. of Public Instruction Michael J. Bakalis.

The conference, the Illinois Conference on Education: Goals and Priorities, will be held at the Sheraton-Chicago Hotel in Chicago on Sept. 24-26 and is the next phase in the Bakalis plan to further involve citizens in the educational decisions making process.

Registration for the conference will be open. Anyone wishing to register may do so. The registration period will close Sept. 8 and at that time, according to Bakalis, if there is an overabundance of one interest group — parents, educators, students or others — special efforts will be made to "balance" attendance. Bakalis said the open attendance format was the only way to insure a plan for education that is truly representative of the people of Illinois.

"To the best of our knowledge, this is the first time any state has gone to its citizens for the development of a 'master plan' for education. It is the taxpayers who foot the bill. They must have the right to determine the directions education will take in this new decade," Bakalis said.

As preparation for the conference, Bakalis recently cochaired a series of statewide regional hearings in Rockford, Springfield, Peoria, Centralia, East St. Louis and Chicago.

In analyzing the unprecedented program to involve citizens in the formulation of the state plan, Bakalis said of the hearings:

"The public hearings have served as more than a fact-gathering device. They have someone listen to their ideas, gripes, hopes and plans. We hope we have shown that the decision making process is open to all who wish to participate."

WHILE A LARGE amount of the testimony was specific to regional problems and needs, there were concerns basic to all the hearings.

"One of the things we kept hearing repeatedly," Bakalis said, "was a growing dissatisfaction with the methods of school finance. The taxpayer is unwilling and unable to assume the ever increasing costs of education on the basis of the local property tax. The voice of the taxpayer was loud and clear."

Other common concerns included an expansion of vocational education and changes in the teacher certification process.

"A drafting committee," Bakalis said, "composed of both office (OSPI) and non-office people, is currently reviewing, digesting and editing the many volumes of testimony gathered at the hearings."

"They are developing a working document of principles, goals and objectives for education as expressed by the people of Illinois through our recent hearings. This document will then be given to those attending the conference for additional refinement and input."

Bakalis said it was too early to speculate on the specific recommendations to be included in the state plan, but added, from his experience at the hearings, that certain areas would probably be discussed.

He said he feels that subjects such as school governance, student rights, teacher rights, collective bargaining and equal educational opportunity would most likely appear in the final document.

"I URGE ANYONE interested in participating in the Illinois Conference on Education — this major endeavor to bring direction to the educational process in Illinois — to contact my office in Chicago for the necessary registration forms," Bakalis said.

Inquiries should be directed to: Illinois Conference on Education, Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, Room 1408, 188 W. Randolph, Chicago 90601 — 793-2220.

MSD Begins Prairie Plan

The Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) last week began a program of using solid wastes to reclaim land made useless by strip mining.

The project, called "The Prairie Plan," began Thursday with the shipment of a three-barge load of liquid fertilizer from the MSD Stickney sewage treatment plant to Fulton County, about 200 miles down the Illinois River.

The MSD has purchased 7,000 acres of strip mine and marginal land in Fulton County for application of the liquid fertilizer.

About 75 per cent of MSD's domestic and industrial waste, totaling 8,000 tons, will be shipped daily to the Fulton County site in a three-barge convoy. The remaining 25 per cent will be heat dried and sold commercially as fertilizer.

The liquid fertilizer, called "sludge" is the product of the MSD's sewage treatment system, which serves Cook County.

Also Eiserman, an MSD trustee, thanked the other trustees for helping to get the project moving. He also commended Ben Szwed, general superintendent, and other MSD staff members for "planning and executing the project."

Eiserman said he has been involved in the campaign to eliminate the use of lagoons for disposing of waste solids from the sewage treatment plant since 1962.

Before being elected to the MSD board, he was chairman of the West Suburban Sludge Lagoon Abatement Association, a group made up of about 14 village, civic organizations and other groups interested in the elimination of the lagoons at the Stickney plant.

Eiserman said he made many visits to MSD board meetings to fight the use of the lagoons, and he began as a trustee because of his interest in the project.
